The inside mart was crowded with a large number early Saturday morning shoppers as one of the largest displays of eggs and butter was offered for sale. Although the price of eggs was quoted as dropping local prices held firm at the 24c to 26c figure. A-sicles were quoted at 29 cents per dozen but in instances they could be bought for 18 cents. Mediums held steady at 18 cents in the majority of cases with ungraded eggs selling at 19 and 20 cents. Farmers' wives were offered as varying prices but the majority of vendors held out for the top price of 26 cents per pound. Chickens were also very much in evidence, one farmer stating that a fat hen at present price of eggs it was impossible to realize any profit if one had to purchase feed. Choice birds were quoted at from 90 cents to $1.25 with lesser grades selling at lower prices.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Private Wires.

Nervousness over the possibility of a reduction in the price of gold has become a good deal of the current selling in the security markets. Reports from New York that banks are discontinuing gold purchases abroad for fear of a reduction in the price of gold brought a categorical denial from the United States Treasury Department this week that this action is under the treasury's gold policy was contemplated.

Despite this denial by the United States Treasury, the gold stocks failed to show much recuperative powers indicating that the present market reaction is a natural aftermath of the recent extended speculation. The setback will, in time, clarify the air and permit the market to resume its forward trend but the process is attended at the same time is endeavouring to stop the gaining momentum. This is the period when profits are taken and new positions are established.

The setback in Canadian Car & Foundry yesterday is due entirely to the trend which has apparently been repudiated its war claim pack which has been up by $22.874,- 268 to several American companies as Canadian Car growing largely out of the consolidation of Black Tom and Kingsland, N.J. war plants. Directors yesterday proposed payment of $6,349,277 to the Canadian Car and Foundry Co. on the ground that it was a foreign firm, and not an American interest. Presumably it will again become necessary to resume hearings before the Claims Commission in Washington.

PUMP HOUSE LOON MAKES APPEARANCE

Cold weather is actually over! No more certain sign of warm weather in the city than the appearance of the pump house loon, who arrived at Waterworks Cove after his journey north, this morning.

Unfailing in the appearance of this bird announcing the dark days years has heralded the advent of spring.

The bird is one of the tamest of the many pump house bird visitors.

NEW METHOD OF APPROACH SEEN

Geo. J. Furnan of this city believes that he has solved the latest in "approach" on the part of financial managers.

"Do I owe you anything?" asked the ragged stranger as he accosted the local financier on the street.

"Not that I know of," replied the financier, eying up the stranger.

"Then can I have a quarter" continued the glib one.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 10—Prices on the local egg market continued yesterday to edge slightly higher, a slow but steady upward trend having prevailed all week, with receipts showing a decrease, and with demand good, on account of Easter requirements. Fresh receipts in the city were again fractionally stronger, prices to the retail trade were generally reported to be 1c higher. Butter market held steady, with a pinch in supplies expected next week. In Montreal, prices showed a slightly rallying tendency from the week's low point, and demand generally showed little change. Receipts were light. Stocks of eggs and boxes of butter and two boxes of cheese.

There were no sales at the Canadian Produce Exchange. Butter was quoted there at the close at 26c to 26 1-2c for Quebec buyers, 28 1-2c to 28 3-4c, mainly 28 1-2c for cash or 1-2c less. Fresh-made butter is fractionally under the above levels.

FLOYD HUFFMAN FRACTURES LEG

Burns, April 10 (Special)—When the log-skid upon which he was moving logs became dislodged the entire structure and a large pine log crashed down upon Floyd Huffman, 36-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Burns, late yesterday afternoon fracturing his right leg. Mr. Huffman was removed to the Picton hospital, where Dr. Sarles of Wellington reduced the fracture. The young man was returned to his home late last night. He is confined for some weeks, the fracture being of a compound nature.

Mr. Huffman was engaged in skidding logs and was driving a team of horses alongside the skidway, when it gave away, the skidway and large pine logs which the horses were hauling both crashing down upon the unsuspecting driver. 'TB' DEATH RATE OF INDIANS HIGH

Dr. McCann, M.P., Lays Blame on Laxity in Treatment Methods

Ottawa, Apr. 10 (CP)—While the death rate from tuberculosis in Canada has decreased in the last ten years from 96 to 90.5 per each 100,000 population, deaths from this cause among Indians has increased, the House of Commons was told last night.

Dr. J. J. McCann (Lib., South Renfrew) and H. J. Barbey (Con., Kootenay East) were discussing this problem during consideration of a vote of $4,349,154 for administration of the Indian Affairs Branch.

Dr. McCann, showing the death rate from tuberculosis among Indians in 1935 was 704 in a population of about 130,000, declared this high rate was due partly to lax methods in dealing with the problem.

Political Appointments.

Inexperienced, part-time doctors attending Indians were too often appointed because of their political affiliations, he said.

Treatment of tuberculosis was a task that required the highest skill and knowledge, declared Dr. McCann urged that it be not trifled with.

Indians were wards of the Dominion and when their health interests were involved no political consideration should enter.

Dr. Barber said that in British Columbia the death rate was 400 per cent. of the tuberculosis cases among Indians were believed to be under physician. He also urged greater attention to dental care of Indians and an improved system of distributing drugs and medicines.

Fernanenl M.O.'s Urged.

Unless something was done to remedy the situation, Dr. McCann said, the good work done by the medical profession throughout the Dominion would be nullified for Indians, and that their appointments should be made on professional rather than political affiliations. He would like to see "permanent" x-ray equipment visit the Indian communities and pay particular attention to those among children.

Unless the Department of Mines and Resources was prepared to make some such reforms, Dr. McCann said, the Indian Branch should be transferred to the Department of National Health.

Thomas A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources, expressed appreciation of the suggestions advanced and told of steps he had taken to get best option available for the Indians in connection with the problem. He hoped some definite local steps would be worked out to adequately attack the problem. A vote in the supplementary estimates would provide for an auxiliary nurse for which might be made by a travelling clinic.

STORMY SESSION FOR 10 MINUTES

House Gets Into Snarl Over Procedure on Question

Ottawa, April 10.—(CP)—Storm-tossed in the sea of procedure developed last night when the House of Commons got into a snarl with J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the C.C.F. the principal figure.

It developed when the House was considering private bills to which an hour may be devoted on the non-contentious bills were the first on the order paper. Two items, a bill relating the Industrial Loan and Investment Company already has had a rough passage in the banking committee.

Mr. Woodsworth took exception to the procedure, insisting the private bills should be held over. Speaker Cauguin ruled against him after Austin Meighen Lapointe exclaimed "anybody may not going to turn this House in to a mock court."

The House, on an unrecorded vote, upheld the Speaker. But the Speaker, in announcing the decision, inadvertently reversed it, then corrected it amid general laughter.

Speaker Leaves Chair

The Speaker left the chair for the House to go into committee on the bill when another snarl over procedure developed. Mr. Woodsworth and his group had asked a recorded vote on the Speaker's ruling before the committee started but order had been established.

There were all sorts of interjections, including one from Woodsworth himself when the C.C.F. leader declared that the Speaker who had left the chair, was "Speaker Sanderson of the committee finally called the meeting to order. Early formed, deciding against another recorded vote.

By this time there was little time left to discuss the bill in committee, it being taken by Thomas Vien (Lib. Outremont) as a general discussion. The bill was again talked out.

CLAIMS

Provincial Constable Tom Mitchell, regularly stationed at Oshawa, was on the spot early. Police Chief Orval D. Friend and six municipal constables and eight deputy constables appointed by the United Automobile Workers Union patrolled in front of the building to avert any trouble.

No Action By Police.

Several constables were drawn towards a strumming crowd but the employees but there was no action.

"Let's end order quickly and maintained," was the ultimatum Mayor Hall delivered shortly after midnight to the union. He demanded an "unequivocal" retraction be made by Organizer Hugh Thompson, of the statement the union would allow employers to return to work but would not be responsible for "any accident" that might happen to them at or near their homes.

"Any ordinary person reading such a statement would interpret it as a threat of terrorism, a threat of wholesale slaughter," said Mayo Hall.

McKinnon, St. Catharines.

St. Catharines, Ont., Apr. 10 (CP)—Terry McKinnon, 19, leader of the strike at Oshawa was set for today by Charles Millard, Union leader in the Oshawa strike. Leader of a delegation addressing 300 workers of McKinnon Industries here, a subsidiary of General Motors but unaffected by the strike, Millard said last night: "Tomorrow morning we are going to meet the crisis".

Union Leader Blamed.

Millard charged Premier Hepburn with bringing to Toronto Royal Canadian Mounted Police to "protect the interests of a foreign corporation". He added: "Premier Hepburn was allowed to come in and dictate the price at which you shall sell your cars. I believe Mr. Hepburn would regret bringing the police to Toronto because they are not going to be needed."

Terry Leader said General Motors were willing to sign an agreement with the strikers but they were afraid Premier Hepburn to deal with John L. Lewis, head of the Committee For Industrial Organization.

Toronto April 10.—(CP)—Officials of the Toronto Flying Club were unable to estimate the damage here today when four or five planes were destroyed completely by fire of undetermined origin.

Firemen went up in flames during the night. Damage to planes in that fire was announced to $45,000.

PRINCE NICHOLAS GOES INTO EXILE

Fails to Win Recognition of Marriage With Commoner

The 32-year-old brother of King Carol planned to assume the name of Bronleano upon his departure from Rumania, it was reported.

For nearly a year Prince Nicholas had vainly sought recognition by the king of his marriage with a commoner—Mme. Joana Dumitrescu, once the wife of a diplomatic official.

Climax To Quarrel.

The long quarrel between the royal brothers reached a swift climax yesterday.

An official communique at midnight revealed the move to strip the prince of his royal heritage had been delayed only by the combined hope he would renounce his morganatic union.

Decree Void of Royal Family.

A crown council went into immediate session. Accepting Nicholas' renunciation, it promptly "freed" Carol's younger brother out of the royal family.

The prince thereby became a commoner, and his wife, whom he married, despite Carol's opposition, on Oct. 28, 1931, only to see the union annulled by the king on Dec. 7 of the same year.

Nicholas, however, continued his association with the woman.

Nicholas was next in line to the throne after Prince Michael, 15-year-old son Michael, and also held the rank of marshal-lieutenant of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

UPHOLD DIGNITY OF JOURNALISM

British Writers Oppose Tendency to Prying Into Private Life

Torquay, Devonshire, Apr. 10 (CP) —The annual conference of the National Union of Journalists here declared in favor of a bill to give the police power to members who refuse to undertake duties which is not compatible with the dignity of their calling.

It was "this conference views with alarm and disgust the increasing tendency of newspapers to require their staffs to pry into matters concerning private lives, the unwarrantable interference in the affairs of husband and wife, and the publication of intimate domestic matters arising out of court proceedings."

After predicting such practices will lead to widespread revulsion and indirectly menace the freedom of the press, the resolution orders the National Executive Council to give full support, financial and otherwise, to members "who refuse to undertake such commissions which are not consistent with the dignity of their profession or with the union code of conduct."

Herald-Tribune View

New York, April 10 (CP)—"The clarion declaration of Premier Hepburn of Ontario, that the Oshawa strikes and his prompt mobilization of provincial police to prevent prevent their occurrence in Canada will make clear-cut the issue of 'law and order,'" the New York Herald-Tribune comments editorially today.

"It will be recognized, of course, that he is making political capital of his determination to put an end, if he can, to the lawlessness of sit-down strikes and to bring home to the public the fact that the business of government is to enforce the law and to do the moment it is challenged, continued the paper.

New York Times Stand

The New York Times in an editorial said:

"The hint that our own epidemic of sit-down strikes threatens to spread across the border and to Canada and has brought a plainly spoken warning from the Premier of Ontario.

"He does not intend it to be taken as indicating hostility to labor . . . what he does oppose, and what he promises to resist with 'entire resources of the province, if occasion arises' is the use of violence or property in plain defiance to the law."

Ontario. No time has been lost in the matter. The full weight of the government's moral prestige into the balance on the side of law and order."

DAILY SHORT STORY

IMPROBABLE

By Carleton James

I found retired Detective Arthur Matthew seated by his favorite chair as usual down at headquarters where he could keep an eye on the young bloods who were following in his footsteps and sat down beside him and offered him a cigar, which he refused, as I knew he would, Arthur is a great story-teller, though long since I have learned to give little credence to many of his tales.

"An improbable tale?" he mused in reply to my question. "Lesser now, Lesser." His eyes became moody and for a moment he appeared deep in contemplation. "Hmmm. Did I ever tell you the story about Les Cameron?"

"No", I said, "what about Les?"

"Well, Les come on the force about five years after me. I considered myself an old-timer by then and Les' enthusiasm and eagerness amused me no end. Yep, I sure thought he was funny and I could hardly wait till the kid got his shield. But Les would open up eyes. We all got a jolt sooner or later you know, which is what we need to sort of steady us down.

"Les came before he'd been with us six months. A man named Russ Humbolt was killed. Humbolt wasn't much of any account. He had a reputation for being a crook and a sneak and a petty thief. Les was sent down to Baxter street to investigate.

"He went down in the morning and came back in the afternoon, fairly frothing at the mouth to get conclusive evidence that Tony Gardener knocked off Humbolt. Shall I put Gardener up?"

"The chief listened to Les' evidence without batting an eye. Tony Gardner was to cop city what Al Capone was to Chicago. He could be dangerous business picking up Gardner, even on a murder charge.

"What did you have done with the body, Les?' the chief asked.

"A rueful expression came to Les' face. 'Nobody's got it. Gardner isn't any body. I mean, it's disappeared.'

"'Cool off, Les,' said the chief. 'Without a corpse, Gardner is as good as innocent.'

"But Les didn't forget it. He couldn't. He spent a lot of time nosing around and found of course nothing. Gardener was too smart to leave clues for a rookie cop to stumble over. And so presently Les gave up. He put the thing behind him. None of us knew how serious it was until the kid turned in his resignation.

"Not long after Les left the force he came into headquarters one day carrying a long, narrow box, and with the widest story to tell you ever heard in your life. He placed the box on the chief's desk and opened it. And what do you think it contained? a dismembered human arm!

"Yep, there was no doubt about it, and no doubt either that the arm belonged to Russ Humbolt, because on it was a lot of tattooing with the word 'Russ' written beneath a figure that looked like an ancient coat of arms. Any one of a dozen men could have identified that arm.

"While we were still staring at the thing in open amazement, Les told his story. After resigning he'd gone to the seashore to sort of rest up and make plans for his future. While lying on the beach one day, a fishing boat had come in. Included in the catch was a shark of enormous size. And when the shark was cut open the tattooed arm of Russ Humbolt was found in its stomach.

"Yes, sir, that's the story Les told. Believe it or not, Gardener was picked up and brought to trial. The evidence was presented, augmented by the testimony of a stool pigeon who told how the gang leader had dismembered the corpse and thrown it into the sea. Gardener was convicted and sent to the chair and thus the country was rid of a notorious public enemy.

"And if that isn't an improbable story," Arthur finished with a grin, "you'll never beat one."

I grinned back at him. "Arthur, I congratulate you. I'm a writer by profession, but by jove, I could never think up a yarn like that on such slight provocation. Man, you're a genius!"

"I didn't think it up," said Arthur. "The whole thing actually happened." He handed me his copy of the Rocvingham Record. There, under the title of "Improbable Truths" written by one of the country's best known crime authorities, was the true story of the tattooed arm, almost exactly as Arthur had told it to me.

The name "Noel Coward" is associated in the minds of most people with an aura of bright lights and the almost legendary phrase, "bright young man of the theatre." Those who read his autobiography "Present Indicative" will find that success did not always crown his efforts and that his rise to fame was a slow and at times, painful struggle, through the stages of child actor, juvenile, playwright and star. That he was often hungry and ill, that he must bale out before the financial difficulties of his family will seem incongruous to his acclaimed success. Those who expect to find the brittle, young man of "Private Lives" and "Design for Living" will be doomed to disappointment but they will be surprised to find instead an exceedingly amiable, if at times self-deprecatory, individual who emerges as distinctly as any character of his plays. "Present Indicative" is entirely the story of the theatre, and the story of "his little world" will be a welcome key for readers from the world of politics and economic trends.

Another brilliant young Englishman is included among this week's choice of new books, Christopher Hollis, with his many fine volumes on history and economics to his credit, has written, in his latest book, one of the most impartial and concise accounts of foreign affairs that has appeared in some time. In "Can Anyone Aren't Fools" an Englishman discusses world events with an Italian, a German, a Russian, a Japanese and an American. Believing that only a very small minority of Englishmen has an idea of the arguments by which intelligent foreigners defend the policies of their various countries, Mr. Hollis has collected from his contact with foreign friends and foreign newspapers the broad outlines of arguments that one might carry about. This informal method possesses vast possibilities and even the most profound issues could be rendered more sympathetic to many of the xenophobe. Hilaire Belloc writing in "G.K.'s Weekly" says of the book, "This is a remarkable book.... finding fault is not easy in a work so complete as this and so profound."

With spring in the air, amateur gardening and carpenters are busy pouring over volumes on home improvements. The possibilities of making the summer home has stirred the imagination of many. Two new books on this subject offer valuable aids to their construction and use. The Trailer Book" by Blackburn films and "How to Build a Motor Trailer" by A. F. Collins.

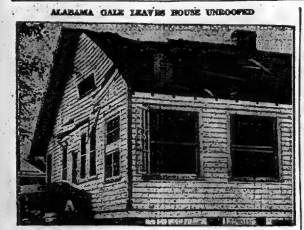
TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Oshawa, Ont., Auto Strikers Continue Peaceful Picketing As Plans Are Laid For Extended Tie-up

Determined to carry on their strike until they receive union recognition, 2,700 striking employees of General Motors, Corporation continued peaceful and orderly picketing of the huge company plants at Oshawa, Ont. No violence has occurred in the city though the provincial government was holding R.C.M.P. detachments at Toronto to be rushed to the motor city in the event of disorder. At a mass meeting attended by 2,000 strikers, Mayor Hall, of Oshawa, told the employees that additional police would not be brought into the city until he and the chief of police found they could not cope with the situation. Evidence of the peacefulness of the strike is seen in the fact that though hundreds of workers have formed a picket line no police officers are seen. ABOVE are two photographs showing general scenes as the workers continued their tie-up. At the right is a group of 300 pickets as they marched about the parts department blocking entrance to the plant. The photograph at the left shows C. H. Millard, president of the local Oshawa union, which is on strike, looking at a list of the office staff members which was submitted by H. B. B. Brown, assistant parts distribution manager of General Motors. Members of the office staff have been permitted through the picket lines on passes supplied by the strikers.



LEADS STRIKERS IN OSHAWA AUTO TIE-UP

ALABAMA GALE LEAVES HOUSE UNROOFED

A gale reaching tornado velocity, sweeping the southern United States roughly in the area swept by last spring's tragic hurricanes, caused at least 12 deaths. More than two score injuries were chalked up aboard the weather, which toppled buildings, uprooted trees and disrupter power and communication facilities. Pictured is home at Montgomery, Ala., the roof of which was blown to earth, landing atop an automobile. The roof collapsed after part of it had been blown away.

WON'T CALL POLICE

Speaking at a mass meeting attended by striking auto workers at Oshawa, Ont., Mayor Alex Hall (ABOVE) told workers that R.C.M.P. and provincial police would not be called to the motor city at the present time or while peaceful picketing of the plants continues. Mayor Hall, a lawyer, advised strikers of the legal aspects of picketing and urged them to stay well within the law.

OSHAWA AUTO FACTORY SEES CANADA'S FIRST C. I. O. STRIKE

Five minutes after they had filed into the General Motors Corporation plants at Oshawa, Ont., to begin work for the day, 3,700 men and women workers turned about and filed out again to begin the first strike called in Canada by the militant C.I.O. led by John L. Lewis. Production at the Windsor, Ont., plant of General Motors stopped shortly afterwards on orders of the general manager. Pickets under the leadership of 300 stewards and 52 chief stewards began an orderly picketing of the huge Oshawa factories. Though some workers remained within the plant, strikers said they would not go back after leaving the shops at noon. Company officials were barred from entering the plants by the strikers. In an effort to avoid any disorder the Ontario government closed all liquor stores and beverage parlors on the request of Mayor Hall of Oshawa and of C. A. Millard, C. I. O. agent in the motor city. The above photographs were taken following the walkout at the plant. The upper photograph shows a general scene as pickets began their march about the factories with some of the striking women employees of General Motors, getting ready for picket duty, pictured below.

FOOD SHIPS MAY ENTER BILBAO AT OWN RISK

Baldwin Makes Clear Government's Attitude On Protection of Ships

Cruiser Hood, Biggest Warship in World, Arrives at Port Bilbao to Protect Shipping From Insurgent Attack on High Seas

A "DIFFICULT SITUATION" EXPLAINED

Basque Government Offers Guarantees of Safety to Any Ships Entering Bilbao Harbor

Saint Jean De Luz, France, April 12—(AP)—The biggest warship in the world, H.M.S. Hood, arrived off the Port of Bilbao, Spain, today to protect British food ships from insurgent Spanish attack.

Steaming from Gibraltar, the battle cruiser was under orders to extend protection to six British food ships as long as they are on the high seas.

An insurgent blockade—unrecognized by Great Britain —drove the foodships away from their Bilbao destination and into Saint Jean De Luz yesterday. Bilbao, crowded with war refugees, is besieged by insurgent land and sea forces and in need of food.

Premier Outlines Stand

London, April 12—(AP)—Premier Stanley Baldwin told the House of Commons today that Great Britain, while guarding her shipping "at sea" in the Bay of Biscay, could not protect British food ships, actually entering the besieged Port of Bilbao, Spain.

The Prime Minister outlined this stand, reached at a Sunday meeting of the cabinet, at a moment when H. M. S. Hood, the world's largest warship, had reached a position off Bilbao after a quick voyage from Gibraltar.

Baldwin, while insisting the British government was neither extending belligerent rights to the Spanish insurgent besiegers of Bilbao nor tolerating "any interference with British shipping at sea," explained:

"They (the government), are, however, warning British shipping that in view of conditions at present prevailing in the neighborhood of Bilbao they should not, for practical reasons and in the view of the risks at present, it is at present impossible to protect them, go into the area as these conditions prevail."

Driven Off by Fleet

Six British food ships yesterday were driven from Bilbao by insurgent fleet which is choked with hungry refugees, by the insurgent fleet.

H.M.S. Hood was sent to the Bay of Biscay, Baldwin disclosed, because the Government wanted a British Naval force there "under the direct command of an officer of the rank and view of the "difficult position" off Bilbao.

Commenting on the matter of the Opposition, asked "Does not the government's position amount to a blockade of Bilbao?"

"No," replied Baldwin.

Amid laughter, Attlee retorted, "Then, in view of the unsatisfactory nature of does not answer, I give notice that I shall ask for a day to discuss the failure of His Majesty's Government to give protection to merchant ships."

Even before the Prime Minister spoke, authorized sources had indicated the Bilbao situation was regarded as a "local" one in which it was not feasible for British warships to extend the protection that their guns to British Merchant vessels entering the three-mile limit off Bilbao.

Escapes Offer Safety

Despite this, the Basque Government at Bilbao offered guarantees of safety to any British ship entering the Spanish territorial limit and said Government planes were much capable of protecting ships at a

Premier and Corporation Still Refuse to Confer With Lewis' Committee

Decision to Destroy News Photograph is Reached By Thompson

PLANT IS QUIET

While no formal conferences were held, the premier was in constant communication with the interests involved in the strike, affecting 3,700 workers. Mr. Hepburn declared the Oshawa General Motors strike events, today reiterated he was confident settlement would be reached without assistance of "storming" John L. Lewis.

Hepburn said Ontario is in close touch with Oshawa General Motors strike events, today reiterated he was confident settlement would be reached without assistance of "storming" John L. Lewis.

While no formal conferences were held, the premier was in constant communication with the interests involved in the strike, affecting 3,700 workers. Mr. Hepburn declared General Motors strike events today, declaration to destroy the picture was reached.

Decide to Destroy Picture.

Picketing keeping watch at the General Motors plant where 3,700 workers are on strike for the fifth day, agreed to the suggestion from the photographer that Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer, rule on whether the picture be destroyed. Thompson then denied the picture might be misconstrued as it was taken from plant property, showing girls looking at apparently waiting an order to go to work.

The photographer handed over the plate, broken by a picket. Pickets then marched back to work to the strains of music from a radio.

Within the plant it was quiet. Several cars, the end of the assembly line lacked only a hub to complete as they rested for delivery.

DOCTOR IS FINED $500 MAXIMUM DOG'S THROAT CUT

DOCTOR'S EXPLANATION

Says He Called Police to Come And Shoot Dog

Toronto, Apr. 12 (CP)—Maximum fine of $500 with the alternative of two months in jail was imposed on Dr. Norman King Wilson, Toronto city scaled guilty today to attempting to maim, kill or injure a dog.

The second charge of causing unnecessary cruelty to animals was withdrawn and Dr. Wilson paid the fine. Stanley Shatz, defence counsel, entered a plea of guilty on behalf of the physician. H. C. Walker represented the Toronto Humane Society who laid the charges.

Dog's Throat Cut.

Inspector William Weatherton of the Humane Society said he was called April 1 by police and found a black spaniel, part Scottie, lying in a pool of blood and Dr. Wilson standing nearby.

"I put the dog in the wagon and Dr. Wilson came over to me," the inspector said. "He said to me, 'I cut the dog's throat.' He also said there were three others around here. I asked him why he did it and he said the dog had been around his place barking for some time. He told me he used a pen knife to do it. He also told me he was sorry he had not made a good job of it."

Dr. Wilson, who said he had been a surgeon for 30 years, told of the dog barking near his house for three or four weeks. On several occasions he had reported it to police but not to the Humane Society.

Claims Dog Vicious.

"On calling the dog I became unmanageable and bit the boy who caught it," he said. It was vicious, although the bite on the boy had was not bad. I held the dog for a moment wondering what to do with it. I was half a mile from home and could not imagine how I could carry such a vicious dog in that way without someone getting hurt.

"I thought the humane way of disposing of the dog at my disposal. It was the only thing I could do in the woods. I then called the police and asked them to come and shoot the dog."

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather and mountain climbing! Aside from its exhilarating pleasure, mountain climbing is full of opportunities for observing the weather. As the climber rises, he leaves the valley behind the decrease in air pressure, temperature and humidity. If his story is long enough, he will discover an increasing transparency of rain or snow up to certain level. If he goes still higher, he will note a decrease. All this time, winter or summer, he will experience greater heat from the sun due to the unobstructed radiation. A silky sandworn he will notice the rapid increase in the ultra violet radiation. There is no better vantage point from which to study the action of local storms and the clouds.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, April 12 (CP)—High pressure will be the weather factor in a great portion of the continent, while a disturbance is moving eastward today from the Prairies. The weather has been fair and quite mild in the west with the exception of a few light showers at a few districts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Temperatures is now rising in Ontario and Quebec.

Swan River—Mostly fair and not quite so mild; light showers in some districts. Tuesday, fair and a little cooler in temperature.

Alberta—Fair and not quite so mild today and Tuesday.

CRUISER HOOD IS NEAR BILBAO TO PROTECT SHIPS

GRAVE WEEKEND

Insurgents Willing to Risk International Incident

London April 12 (CP)—The 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood, alone almost the equal of the total tonnage of the Spanish Insurgent Fleet, today was proceeding from Gibraltar to the waters off Bilbao in Northern Spain to convey British merchant vessels through an insurgent blockade of the besieged Basque capital.

Several merchantmen, carrying sorely-needed food to Bilbao, are at St. Jean De Lux, France, awaiting the Government's decision on whether they vessels will run them through the insurgent blockade of 10 ships. Foodstuffs are not included in the material of war banned by the non-intervention committee.

Under the Governments plan, if it was found the Basque and other British naval vessels in the vicinity —the cruiser Gloucester and the destroyers Blanche, Beagle, Brazen and Brilliant—would escort the freighters as far as the three-mile limit and then allow them to proceed to their own risk.

It was believed Insurgent warships would be reluctant to enter the three-mile limit—within the range of Government shore batteries.

Muskogee, Okla., April 12 (CP) —Two foursomes were playing a match at the Meadowbrook Club when Mrs. Ray J. Stem holed out a mashie shot to win the hole. The ball, driven by Mrs. Stem, struck the pin and dropped into the cup for the winning stroke.

Mrs. E. Ellison drove his ball down the fairway. A crow swooped down, picked it up with his beak and flew into a tree. The golfers' shouts failed to make the bird drop the ball.

"We've looked all through the rule book and can't find a thing to decide it," said Ray J. Stem, club manager.

Says He Called Police to Come And Shoot Dog

Toronto, Apr. 12 (CP)—Maximum fine of $500 with the alternative of two months in jail was imposed on Dr. Norman King Wilson, Toronto city scaled guilty today to attempting to maim, kill or injure a dog.

The second charge of causing unnecessary cruelty to animals was withdrawn and Dr. Wilson paid the fine. Stanley Shatz, defence counsel, entered a plea of guilty on behalf of the physician. H. C. Walker represented the Toronto Humane Society who laid the charges.

Dog's Throat Cut.

Inspector William Weatherton of the Humane Society said he was called April 1 by police and found a black spaniel, part Scottie, lying in a pool of blood and Dr. Wilson standing nearby.

"I put the dog in the wagon and Dr. Wilson came over to me," the inspector said. "He said to me, 'I cut the dog's throat.' He also said there were three others around here. I asked him why he did it and he said the dog had been around his place barking for some time. He told me he used a pen knife to do it. He also told me he was sorry he had not made a good job of it."

Dr. Wilson, who said he had been a surgeon for 30 years, told of the dog barking near his house for three or four weeks. On several occasions he had reported it to police but not to the Humane Society.

Claims Dog Vicious.

"On calling the dog I became unmanageable and bit the boy who caught it," he said. It was vicious, although the bite on the boy had was not bad. I held the dog for a moment wondering what to do with it. I was half a mile from home and could not imagine how I could carry such a vicious dog in that way without someone getting hurt.

"I thought the humane way of disposing of the dog at my disposal. It was the only thing I could do in the woods. I then called the police and asked them to come and shoot the dog."

FUR DEALERS FORECAST LONGER TRAP SEASON

Extension of the muskrat trapping season was forecast this morning by local fur-buyer who recently returned from an extensive tour of the northern part of the county. "The rats", he said, "are not running in sufficient quantity, due to the mildness of the winter just passed, and by the time they appear in their usual numbers the season will be closed."

Dullness of the market is attributed to the mild winter, he said. "People are not buying furs, and this fact has an indirect effect on the garment manufacturers, who will not stock for future orders".

The high, reliable prices of mink and ermine is due to the approaching coronation, but skunk fur which reached a high level last season was in great demand in Germany, "The Germans", he stated, "could not afford the higher priced mink and ermine and were forced to resort to the cheaper skunk product."

SPLENDID TURNOUT

An Innovation, that may become this institution took place on Sunday morning, when more than one hundred and fifty members of the Holy Name Society of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, partook of breakfast at the Quinte Hotel, after the celebration of the Mass in St. Michael's Church by Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. P. Nicholson, V.G. Charles Doran, president of the Society and members of the executive were seated at the head table while Harold Barrett capably handled the position of the chairman, in the absence of Charles T. Doran, who was suddenly called from the city on business. The breakfast was the first partaken of by the Society in a body and as well were the arrangements received that at least one such gathering will be held this year and hereafter it will become a regular feature of the program.

The proceedings were short with the address of the evening delivered by Monsignor J. P. Nicholson, V.G., an address that was both instructive and interesting. Monsignor Nicholson was introduced by the gathering by Harold Barrett and the thanks of the Society was expressed most ably by Wm. Collins, K.C., and seconded by Vincent Freeman, vice president of the Society. Rev. Father Bertrand in his brief remarks paid the respects of the Society to the late Mrs. Nicholson and to attend the meeting on Thursday night of the Society.

Belleville housewives apparently are not taking the present warm weather as a forerunner of more to come. The usual crop of odd jobs which filter in the local employment Bureau is conspicuous by its absence. POLICE COURT

Pleading not guilty to three charges of the theft of bean locusts, the property of the Canadian National Railways, Randall Smith, of this city, asked for an adjournment in his case, when he appeared before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court. Smith allowed Frederick Graves, another local youth, into the box, Graves formally pleading admitted his guilt of the theft and was to have received his sentence today. Crown Attorney H. C. Donnan, K.C., asked for a further enlargement in the case, Magistrate Butler prompted Smith to follow in line and add the charges.

"How about bail?" asked Smith of the court.

"Oh, about $7,000.00, I would suggest," commented Mr. Donnan.

"That's not much," mumbled Smith, as he was led away to the cell block by a constable. Next night make it $2,500.00 if the bondsmen are acceptable," added Mr. Donnan, but he received no recognition from the accused.

James Welch, Belleville, appeared before His Worship charged with attempting to intimidate his wife by threatening to shoot her sometime over the week-end. Before the accused could plead, Mrs. Arnott, counsel for the accused, addressed the court.

"Your Worship, we have three witnesses in this case who could not be present today, I am asking for a week's enlargement."

"Mr. Hannah Gailey, the Crown has five witnesses here and are ready to proceed", interjected Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan.

"What's the matter with these people, anyway? Always wasting my time again. Can't they settle their differences and for all", commented His Worship as he granted Mr. Arnott's request of a week's enlargement. "It's one of those perennial cases, I guess," concluded Mr. Donnan.

Three inebriates contributed to the revenue of the city this morning by pleading guilty to charges of intoxication and paying the conventional "ten and costs." A large gallery of spectators took in the proceedings.

PEACE MUST COME WITHIN NATIONS VETERANS TOLD

Rev. G. G. Wright Addresses Veterans at Christ Church

APPEALS FOR PEACE

Parade Through Principal Streets Before Dismissing at Armouries

"There can be no peace among the nations of the world until there is peace within the nations themselves," the Rev. G. G. Wright, told members of the United Veterans of Belleville and district, and a crowded auditorium at Christ Church, yesterday morning on the occasion of the annual church parade of the ex-service men.

In an eloquent appeal for world peace Mr. Wright told his congregation that the greatest problem of the age was the advancement of world peace is left in the capable hands of the League of Nations had failed, but the hoping for the ideals of peace as exemplified in the Church of Jesus Christ.

Addressing the veterans, the speaker said "We honor our dead in many ways, by tablets in churches by monuments and public squares. We can honor them in a better way by carrying on the principles for which they lived. Those men, who died as they would ask us to build a bigger and better Canada, a greater nations, than the one they knew".

"Social prophets warn us that intense patriotism", Mr. Wright continued, "but they came to the conclusion that the progress of God in national development was through the development of international life. Christ's life was deeply rooted in that of Israel. The Apostle Paul was a Roman but not in the waving of flags and the shouting of patriotic words, but like the men of old, on a life built on the solid foundation of Eternal Life."

False Patriotism

"The people of today are showing a false patriotism in that they are not willing to hear any one else but condemning the rest. Thank God, that in Belleville and district there is making the greatest contribution in this way to the peace of the world and the social welfare of the nations."

"The man, who is the greatest patriot is the man with the broadest vision of his country's need, who is willing to sacrifice himself real. There can be no hope for peace until the spirit of resentments inclues they conform to the spirit of the people they are governing. Diplomats may bring that peace for which men long, but it is forced by the democratic peoples of the earth."

"Until there is a friendly peace among the nations of the earth, until there is peace within the nations themselves", declared Mr. Wright, "The unrest of today is a challenge to the Christian and the dynamite of hatred which is characteristic of the world today."

"The Christian Church, but only hostile, shall she realizes she has a goal in the future. Christ said and we as Canadians must be bound together in a common cause for the welfare of all of us and we can make our contribution to the peace of the world. Let us, therefore, pray together and support that great Christian Church, the Church of Jesus Christ. We must pray, that the eyes of the nations will be opened, that the hearts of men will build a better, brighter Canada, which will be her share towards the establishment of peace of the world."

Headed By Bands

Headed by the Johnstone Pipe Band, the veterans, headed by Municipal Band in attendance, the parade consisting of the Canadian Nursing Sisters, Overseas troops, members of the Imperial Army, Royal Canadian Legion, and the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion, moved away from the Armouries shortly after 10 o'clock and marching along West Bridge Street to Dundas.

Wreaths of flowers were placed on the altar of Christ Church during the service "Last Post" and Reveille were sounded by Bugler Sergeant Finden.

At the conclusion of the service, the parade marched along Everett street, crossed the upper bridge and proceeded down Front Street to West Bridge and the Armouries where it was dismissed.

Twenty seven transients crowded their way into the cell block at the police station on Saturday and slumbered without incident. It was the largest number of transients to apply for a night's lodging registered at the local police station this year. Only three put in appearance last night, however.

C. I. O. Organizer is Refused Admittance to Office of the Premier

U.S. Tie-up Threatened Unless Contract Signed With U.A.W.A.

STRIKERS HEAR MARTIN

By IVERS KELLY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Oshawa, Ont., April 12 (CP)—Still deadlocked over the C.I.O. issue, Oshawa's General Motors strike today entered a new week—fifth day since the walkout—after a week-end of collapsed negotiations and two great mass meetings of the 3,700 strike idle.

Efforts toward a settlement of the strike ended in Premier Hepburn's office in Toronto Saturday when the Premier refused to admit Hugh Thompson, organizer for John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

A delegation from the Oshawa local of the United Automobile Workers of America, C.I.O. affiliate, sought to have Thompson included in their conference. When this failed they withdrew from the Premier's office.

To Bring Pressure

On the question of C.I.O. recognition the strikers at a mass meeting Saturday night and another gathering Sunday, the second an open air meeting—heard C.I.O. heads declare pressure would be brought upon General Motors in the United States towards a swift end to the strike.

A noisy welcome was given Homer Martin, President of the U.A.W.A., who told his listeners that "if they don't make motor cars in Canada under union conditions they won't make any in the United States at all."

Martin came by plane and auto from Detroit Saturday to address the strikers. He told them that General Motors officials in Detroit would be given "a little time to make up their minds but we won't be too patient."

Organizer Urged to Stay

From the same platform Organizer Thompson asked: "Do you want me to withdraw? If I am the person standing in the way of you getting back to your jobs?"

"No," yelled back the strikers.

There were such terms as "Herr Hepburn", and, "Would-be Hitler" applied by speakers to the Premier.

Martin declared he respected and revered the Ontario Government, Canada and the Empire, but that the Premier—"a little two-by-four"—could not sweep aside 1,000-year-old traditions of English people who had struggled for democracy.

At the Sunday gathering Organizer Thompson charged there was a split in the Ontario Government over the relief question, intimidating a committee of General Motors workers was told a week before the strike by Hon. David Croll, Minister of Labor and Welfare that relief would be provided those in need.

Mr. Hepburn, he said, refused to permit relief allowances and should "keep his nose out of our business."

No Change in Plans

Telling of support from General Motors workers in the United States Thompson declared they "will not stand for conditions here." He charged that the Corporation planned getting cheaper labor in Oshawa, and that the average yearly wage paid Canadian employees was between $600 and $700.

General Motors of Canada is an international organization, he told the cheering strikers, and "it is owned by General Motors in the United States."

At the Saturday night meeting C. H. Millard, president of the Oshawa Local of the U.A.W.A. said there would be no changes today in allowing the company to move shipments from the parts building. About 60 workers and the office staff of 40 entered the building Saturday to the accompaniment of jeers and boos from the picket line. There was no attempt to interfere with them. Normally about 80 manual workers are employed in the department.

Millard said there would again be no attempt to prevent anyone going to the building but that some of the 60 who went in Saturday have since joined the union.

An unofficial report late last night that Premier Hepburn had announced General Motors has no intention of reopening and the plants would remain closed indefinitely. (The Premier at that time could not be reached in Toronto regarding the report).

Report is Challenged

On hearing the report Thompson quickly prophesied "we will close up plants in the United indefinitely."

Mayor Alex Hall said if the report were true, then the people of Oshawa should be told "how he intends to implement the promise of threat."

The Mayor, questioned by newspapermen, said he had made no decision whether the Federal Department of Labor should be approached with a view to intervention in the dispute.

Late last night General Motors in a statement by J. R. Highfield, general factory manager, took issue with statements of strike leaders and at the same time declared $25,000 is being lost to the workers daily because of the strike. Loss to other firms in 50 centres throughout Canada, based on purchases of supplies and raw materials for a year, the statement added, was $150,000 daily.

The company disputed strike leaders' claims of wages as low as 30 cents an hour and maintained 45 cents was the minimum under non-production, paid to janitors and cleaners.

A charge that workmen sometimes toiled 16 hours a day also was untrue, the statement said. "It set forth average earnings of $1,200 a year for 1936 for 2,500 employees, disputing Thompson's claim of $600 and $700. There were 900 workers, through brief employment and certain part time jobs, earning less than $1,000 the statement added.

"MR. FORD WILL CHANGE HIS MIND"

Informed that Henry Ford had gone on record with the statement that he would never recognize the United Automobile Workers or any other union," John L. Lewis, C.I.O. leader, was telling a gather-

U.S. ORGANIZER BARRED FROM STRIKE PARLEY

Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer from Detroit and spokesman for the union headed by John L. Lewis in the auto strike at Oshawa, Ont., plants of General Motors, was barred from the office when Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario met a delegation representing the strikers following an earlier conference with auto company executives. The Premier flatly refused to see Thompson, who it shown from outside the Premier's office in the Ontario Legislative buildings during the parley. C.I.O. recognition which includes recognition Thompson as a negotiator, was reportedly the stumbling block in the path of strike settlement. General Motors reportedly refused to recognize the union or its American spokesman.

PREMIER H EPBURN MEETS GENERAL MO TORS OFFICIALS FOR STRIKE PARLEY

NO COMPROMISE

Hepburn Claims Organizers Make Profit Out of Canadian Workmen

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn held firmly today to his refusal to confer with any American leader of the 3,700 striking General Motors of Canada workmen. He believes he could bring about a speedy settlement of the strike, "if we can get rid those paid professional American agitators out of Ontario."

The Premier has on his desk a memorandum of concessions General Motors would make to its Oshawa employees. But the Premier will not discuss the memorandum's provisions to any delegation of strikers which includes Hugh Thompson, chief organizer for the Committee for Industrial Organization of which the United Automobile Workers of America is a subsidiary.

He charged Thompson and Homer Martin, President of the U.A.W.A. were "labor fellows who operate from outside Ontario and make a fat living out of the labor troubles of our working class." He said last night they are bending every effort to prevent a settlement of the strike.

Mr. Hepburn met a delegation from the Union in his office Saturday afternoon but he refused to admit Thompson. The delegation sought vainly to have the Premier change his mind but he said he would not budge from his position.

Conferred With Officials

Before he met the strikers, Mr. Hepburn conferred with Harry Carmichael, Vice-President and General Manager of General Motors of Canada, and James B. Highfield, general plant manager at Oshawa.

Last night the Premier said the strike could be settled "without having the lifelings of John L. Lewis, the master mind, behind all the unrest and disturbance in the United States, come in here and tell us what to do.

"I'm not going to attempt to reply to all the abuse which Martin at Oshawa last night heaped upon the head of the Government here," he added.

Mr. Hepburn claimed that "behind the veiled screen" of the present situation was a deliberate attempt on the part of the Lewis interests and their U.S. allies to make motor production cost so high in Canada that General Motors and other automobile industries here could not hope to compete with the United States and other countries in export manufacture.

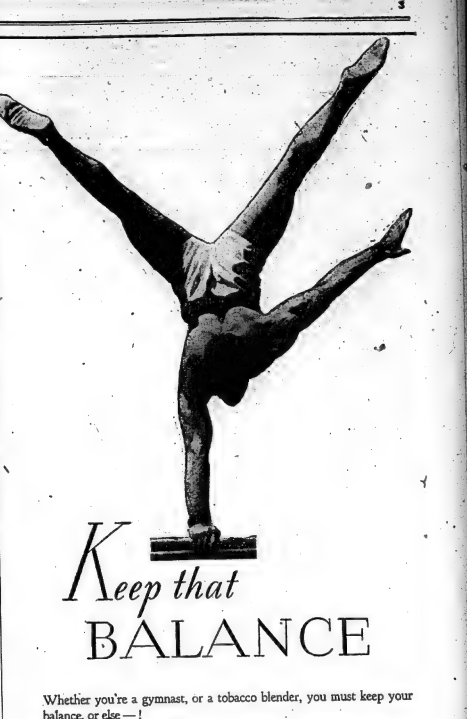
62 DAY SESSION OF HOUSE CLOSES

Financial Relationship of Provinces And Dominion to be Studied

Ottawa, April 13 (CP)—The long marble corridors of the Parliament Buildings were given over to tourists today as the session ended and members scattered to their homes in all parts of the country.

With a last-minute rush, parliament at 2.30 a.m. (Eastern Standard Time) Saturday night with Lord Tweedsmuir officiating at the proceedings, surrounds in the red-walled Senate Chamber.

Before another session begins a Royal Commission will have begun an investigation of the financial relationship of the Dominion and the provinces. Importance attached to the coming inquiry was indicated in the Speech from the Throne, which reviewed the business of the session and described the inquiry as a necessary first step towards "re-adjustments in the governmental structure of Canada."



62-Day Session

For 62 days parliament deliberated over the nation's business and at the end Prime Minister Mackenzie King expressed his warm appreciation of co-operation and assistance given the government by Conservative leader Bennett.

Mr. Bennett replied with a declaration he had done just what he considered it his duty to do having regard to the governmental heavy responsibilities. He believed the legislation enacted during the session would serve of benefit to the people but warned the government the country was still faced with "many grave situations."

In a few days Mr. King, Mr. Bennett, members of the cabinet and a group of members of the House will depart by train on their way to London to attend the coronation of King George VI. One of the last steps of the session yesterday was passage of an address of loyalty to His Majesty by both houses. Mr. Mackenzie King will present the address.

The session was the second of the 18th parliament and was the shortest regular session since 1921. Parliament assembled Jan. 14 and from the first sought to attain the goal of a mid-April prorogation.

Whether you're a gymnast, or a tobacco blender, you must keep your balance, or else—!

The balanced blending of tobaccos gives that natural, straight tobacco aroma and taste so marked in Imperial Tobacco's brands of cigarettes. Their aroma appeals as soon as you open the package . . . you just know they are naturally good! Then touch your tongue to the end of the cigarette before you light it, and draw slowly. Savour that delightful taste, born of fine tobaccos, and only fine tobaccos, skilfully blended and in balance.

We take from our cool, airy warehouses, mild tobaccos of different and contrasting types, aged and mellowed by time, and then match them, type against type—until they are exactly in balance—perfectly blended.

Balanced blending is a scientific method developed by this company through many years of experience. The blend of every Imperial brand of cigarettes is perfectly balanced before it is offered to the public and it is kept that way—always—so, in the cigarette of your choice you are assured of unvarying pleasure and unfailing satisfaction.

Many Conferences

Long before the Ministers met to consider the situation at 10 Downing Street, Foreign Secretary Eden and Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty, met high administrators for a series of conferences.

They had remained in their offices at Whitehall through the week-end indicating the gravity with which British officials regard the situation.

The Cabinet had to consider as insurgent warning their fleet had been ordered to fire on British freighters if they attempted to enter Bilbao. British warships would make no difference, diplomatic sources at St. Jean de Luz on the Franco-Spanish frontier, said General Francisco Franco told Sir Henry Chilton, British Ambassador to Spain.

"We are prepared to risk an international incident," the note was said to have read, "but the ships will 'not get through.'"

Ordered to Remain

The destroyer Blanche carried an admiralty warning to six British freighters to remain at St. Jean De Luz and not attempt to go to Bilbao.

Shipping circles expected this order to be amplified later by advice to abandon their Basque destinations, or proceed within the three-mile limit at their own risk.

The captain of one ship, the Marie Llewellyn, asked the Spanish Consulate at Bayonne for instructions, failing which he said, he would ask French courts for permission to sell the cargo of potatoes for the Bilbao government.

The defence council of the Basque government, allied with Madrid, broadcast a denial from Bilbao that a true blockade had been established under the meaning of International Law.

In fact, Bilbao, like other ports along the Basque coast controlled by the Basque government," the announcement said, "is defended from any attempt at blockade by long range shore batteries placed along the entire coast and also by naval units of the Republican fleet."

The note was interpreted as a bid to British ship to disregard the insurgent warnings and bring badly needed food to the ports.

RT. HON. MR. BENNETT

There has been some talk that the Right Hon. R. B. Bennett may retire from the leadership of his party, which in these days would be regretted by people of all political parties. Mr. Bennett will be sixty-seven years of age within a few months has lived an active life and has given wholeheartedly of his talents to the study of the problems of this country. He is held in high honor in every part of Canada and in the Empire and his time has been freely given to the issues of this strenuous and problem-producing age.

One of the most vital personalities in Canadian public life, Mr. Bennett has earned the esteem of the people of all political ranks by the strength of his personality. With strong convictions, vigorous action and a directness of approach to the various problems that face the legislators, he has made himself so necessary a figure that he can ill be spared. With a wide grasp of affairs and thoroughness in his study of issues, Mr. Bennett has given instances enough of his fair principles and his willingness to admit the good points in the efforts and work of his political opponent.

Mr. Bennett has a difficult man to follow, should he yield the leadership, for he is one of Canada's strong men.

Like others in Canada, he is an example of the public man who gives himself to his country's service at personal sacrifice. While Canada continues to have such men, her future will never be threatened. He like the Rt. Hon. Mr. King and so many other public men gives Canadians a sense of stability and strength and inspires them with knowledge that all is well with this land because the heart of Canada is sound.

Canadians would regret it should Mr. Bennett retire from active public life in connection with the Commons of Canada. But even if he should, his influence will still be felt for he is of that kind of public servant, who can never forget the duties of a citizen. He has truly earned a rest if ever public man has, but Canadians like peoples of other countries feel that the best of their statesmen are men and so will hope that he may remain to adorn the public life of Canada.

HONORS FOR PRINCIPAL HOWARD

Albert College graduates, students and friends are grateful for the recognition which Queen's University is to bestow upon Principal Bert Howard next month for his services to the ministry and to education in Canada. One who has earned the affection of men and women in whatever field he has served, one who has consistently and insistently held ideal, made rich friends, his own generous and noble personality, one who has been a sane optimist, Principal Howard surely is a man worthy of the badge of recognition which Queen's Theological College is inspired to bestow upon those who have brought honor upon the church and the cause of education, whether in the field of religious education or secular education, (though there is no real line of demarcation between the religious and the secular).

Great teachers earn the love and respect of pupils, scholars and mankind. Mr. Howard has proven himself one of this class as well as an able administrator. He is a worthy successor of the great line of principals who have made the name of Albert College known in the civil, commercial and religious life of Canada, and in so many fields in so many lands about the world.

JACK MINER'S BIRTHDAY

Known all over this continent and in many other parts of the world for his work in behalf of the wild life of North America, Jack Miner has entered his seventy-third year, having celebrated on Saturday his birthday. Into the seventy-two full years he has lived, he has packed activities and labors enough to fill half a dozen lives and his work continues as he crosses the threshold into another year.

He has through his ideals cultivated a sense of humanity in the young boys and girls and the older folk of Canada and the United States. He has produced what seem like wonders at his sanctuary at Kingsville, like which there is nothing in the world. Here he has produced marvellous results cultivating the confidence of birds and game in man, once the fear which man has instilled in the hearts of the wild life is removed. The birds and the animals are more trusting and the young life of Canada more sympathetic with that realm of nature which is included in the life of the field, forest and air, because of the influence of Jack Miner.

DECISION . . .

The pool gives back the mirrored sky,
The hurrying clouds go sailing by,
Each on its God-sent way intent
Whilst I lie here and wonder
Content? Ah, No! Content no more!
A boat in rushes lies enmeshed
Challenging my mood; I push from shore;
And swaying on the stream's full breast
I venture forth until I hear
The rapids' wooing song draw near,
And skimming o'er its glassy deep
I brace myself— the plunge is steep,
And boiling waters with froth and foam
Hurl me forth on Life's broad stream, alone;
No clouds are pictured on these billows,
And tho' I sail uncharted seas
God's breath is felt in every breeze.

ONTARIO'S NEWEST TOWN WILL BE "NELLIE LAKE"

, up where the gold begins, and pours forth shining dividends forever and a day. Timmins Daily Press, in its famous Porcupine gold camp district, says that one thousand men will soon be working on the new dam at Nellie Lake for the Ontario Hydro Commission, as part of the electric power extension planned for this district. The paper also says that the workmen will be residents of the South Cochrane district wherein the development is being made. Five million dollars is the estimated cost of the Hydro storage dam on the Frederickhouse River. Carpenters are already on the dam preparing bunk houses for employees, Two hundred men are already employed at the village of Nellie Lake as well as at the dam site, with three tractors hauling 30 tons each and making three trips daily from the dam and mine site, 13 miles from the village. Construction of the dam will provide supplementary power to that supplied by the Abitibi Canyon power project as expanding needs of mines through Northern Ontario, now supplied by the Abitibi company will require additional service, says the Timmins newspaper. The dam will raise the level of Frederickhouse lake about eight feet and the Night Hawk lake waters five and a half feet. Hopper's Bay a summer village, will be flooded by the higher waters and inhabitants have been ordered to move out. Oldtimers recall when the waters of the Frederickhouse were quite high, before being drained by gold seekers. It is recalled that a famous figure of early mining activity in Northern Ontario, Father Paradis, in tracing a gold vein beneath the surface on Frederickhouse lake had the lake drained. Now, by reason of the Hydro dam it will return to its former depth. This is just one little sample of the development which never ceases in Ontario's northern mineral belt, where men are willing to rough it and do not hunt but cold running water, and most of the comforts of the little Grey Home in the West, or East, besides suffering patiently if not too gladly the onslaughts of the sand flies, mosquitoes, etc., which try to drive intruders out of the bush country.

WOLVES WON'T BITE HUMANS—at least they will not attack human beings, according to J. W. Curran, The Wolf Man, of Sault Ste. Marie, publisher of the Sault Star. After Mr. Curran has experimented with the Algoma Wolf, and found it a cowardly critter more apt to run away from him than toward him. Jim, accordingly, came to the conclusion that Algoma wolves were not dangerous to humans, but there's just a thought occurs here. Wolves may not like the smell of printers' ink, or the strong "grow-your-own" tobacco that Jim Curran poisons the atmosphere with. in any event Algoma wolves have been running away from Jim Curran for many years—perhaps afraid of making "The Front Page". Jim's standing offer of $100 for any proved case where a man has been attacked, chased or treed by a wolf or wolves still stands and has never been in danger, Jim says, although about five hundred claims have been filed but not proved.

The Tower Complex

Fifty years ago in the last week of January, 1887, Gustave Eiffel, who had already built a horizontal mark on the world's surface in several important bridges and viaducts (not to mention a minor vertical adventure in the considerable framework for the Bartholdi Statue of Liberty in New York harbor), set to work on the Paris monument that bears his name and the Manchester Guardian. Two years it took to build at a cost of more than a quarter of a million in English money, and it is now claimed that nearly 20,000,000 people have ascended the Eiffel tower since it was finished in 1889. Among them would have to be included on several occasions William Morris, who once said that he always wrote up the Eiffel Tower when he found himself in the French capital because that was the only place in Paris from which he could not see what he regarded as an elaborate eyesore. Others, however (and undeterred by the fate of the builders of Babel), must have found the style of architecture attractive. Blackpool followed with a tower five hundred feet high (as against the 985 feet of Paris), and New Brighton for some years possessed a rival landmark which has now vanished from the coastal scene of Britain. Perhaps the taste for this type of adventuring towards the stars received a notable check when aeroplanes began to reach much higher than ever the structural engineer could reach with his cranes and girders, or possibly towers of the Eiffel type languished a little in public favor before the strident Manhattan skyscrapers of New York rose to seven hundred feet high or, as in the case of the Woolworth building, to fifty-one storeys and 792 feet. Height is there as its motto and reinforced concrete as its medium of ascent. In New York has nearly caught up with the tower of Gustave Eiffel. Nevertheless, the Paris landmark is still the tallest building in the world—and in these days when heights are not many fifty-year-old "records" that remain unbroken.

Camera-Men to be Hidden

No flash bulbs will be used by newspaper photographers in Westminster Abbey on May 12th, when King George VI is crowned with his royal consort, Queen Elizabeth, said the news suggestion of such sacrilege has brought indignation to Colonel Sir Frederick W. Wallenstein, director of the Planet News picture service of London, and Paris and New York on a business trip.

"In the first place, only eight photographers will be assigned to places inside the Abbey," he explained. "Three will be hidden and concealed in false pillars, painted to resemble old stone. Another will be there with ikewise work from hidden niches carefully blended with the Abbey architecture. Two others 'shoot' the Coronation scene through stained glass windows, replacing glass plates which have been specially coated the night before.

"We have made many trips daily through Westminster Abbey to get a thorough survey of the route of the Coronation procession, taking and discarding photographs from various points along the route to our offices, picking the quickest way to bring the plates from the Coronation scene."

From the time the exposed plates reach the Planet offices only four minutes will be required to develop and print the negatives, attach the captions and start them on their journey to newspaper offices all over the world.

Pictures by Radio

Quickly in America.

"Within half an hour of the Coronation ceremony," Mr. Wallenstein predicted, "newspapers in Paris and Berlin will be on the streets with pictures of the event, transmitted by wire and radio. Completed pictures from Australia will be sent by radio transmission about two hours after the Coronation. Pictures will be Atlantic, by way of Newfoundland. When I left London, three groups, in addition to ours, were reported to be negotiating for such plans secret. If $75,000 were spent on chartered planes in the race to put the Coronation films in New York."

Official Censorship

Being Considered

Plans to fly the pictures by special airplane from Croydon to New York were investigated, however, by the appointment of the Archbishop of Canterbury and Duke of Norfolk as official censors of all news and film dispatches. Details of the plan, taken inside the Abbey. This official censorship is expected to slow up Wallenstein's plans to make the chartered airplane flights unnecessary.

Altogether, about 400 photographers will be assigned to cover the various angles of the Coronation, Mr. Wallenstein estimates, and all of them will require credentials issued by a special committee appointed by the Duke of Norfolk.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 12th., 1917.

The City of Belleville was visited yesterday by the most disastrous fire which, for many years, in its history entailing a loss, roughly estimated, at $300,000.00. The large evaporator plant of Mr. R. J. Graham of this city, situated in the rear of his fine block on the east side of Front Street, and extending from the latter street to Pinnacle Street, is a mass of ruins, nothing remaining but the bare walls and smoking embers. Not only did the evaporator fall a prey to the fire, but a big shop, cold storage building and the building on Front Street, termed the chemical warehouse, were all burned. The loss is said to be covered by insurance. The fire was discovered about 3.45 o'clock in the morning by a man named Barrage while making a trip to the station. Adjoining the Graham buildings on Front street is the store owned and occupied by Rathman and Sons, flour and feed merchants. This building was saved.

Taking Off the Horse Collar

We notice where a farm woman one piece, as much so as a stove pipe. It was a delight to watch the hired man take them collars off. He could get them just so and then he'd give a long stretch to pass over the horse's head and ears and do it so there never was a struggle. The first time the younger generation tried to take the collar off it must have seemed to the horse that his head was going to come off along with the collar. At one finally stood in the oat box then the horse wanted to stand over where his hay was or look up from the rack. The ears of a horse are unlike the horns of a cow; they are soft things, but they always seemed to grow to unusual size when trying first to take that collar off on which there was no buckle. We can quite well understand how the farm lady of five feet and one small inch felt when undertaking such a major operation. If she is bent on chores we believe it would be better to milk a cow and let the hired man take the collar off the horse.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, I saw the most marvellous diamond pin at Marks and Marcus's today, Willyum. It was one of those long pins that divide in half and make 2 usages, do you know the kind, Willyum? she said.

I don't think I've ever been introduced, and anyway, yes goda, what's all this about a diamond pin for? Feet sake? pop said, and ma said, they're not feet, you silly thing. I wouldn't dream of letting you buy it for me. In fact this pin was so expensive I'm not even going to tell you the price of it, and the only reason I'm mentioning it is because an awful thawg came over me while I was looking at it. I mean I thawt to myself. Now just suppose I was the kind of a woman who couldn't live without jooby, and just suppose I had set my hart and sole on possessing this particular pin and just suppose Willyum refused point blank to let me have it. Why my lands, Willyum, it would make my life perfectly miserable, she said.

But yes goda, you're not that kind of a woman, thank heaven, so let's forget it, pop said, and ma said, I know Willyum, but I've been haunted by that pin ever since. I mean if I did happen to be that kind of a woman and my mortal happiness depended on my having this particular pin I would've got it for me, Willyum? she said.

What a question, pop said. Naturally if you took it into your head that it was a matter of life and death and the end of the world I suppose I'd get you the fool pin even if it broke me. It would be the rite exner? he said, and ma said, O Willyum that's sweet of you, and now I hope it was made to be doubly haunted by the thawt of that magnificent pin being within my grasp if I really wanted it badly enough.

I take it all back, pop said. If you were loaning a pound a minute only on the strength of diamond pins I'm sure you I wouldn't buy you that pin, he said, and ma said, O Willyum how can you be so mean?

Pop settling in back of the morning page without saying.

Darkness of Shaft and Song Grotesquely Associated in Brain of Alfred Scadding

RESCUED APRIL 22

Always Hoping to Cash in by Mine Promotion on Fybliclty Gained

By Ted Farlow
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, April 12—(CP)—The ringside grandstand, scrambling, fall of rock in the wet tomb-like darkness of a mine shaft and a song about a beautiful lady in blue are grotesquely associated in the brain of monoplaned little Alfred Scadding a year after his experience at Moose River, N. S.

Scadding was one of three Toronto men incarcerated in Moose River gold mine last April 12; one of the two who came out alive 10 days later while millions shared emotionally in relief at the ordeal's end.

Dr. D. E. Robertson, sturdy, muscled 56-year-old physician, is the other survivor. Herman Magill, mine owner, died.

Contrasting Destiny

In the lives of the two survivors there seems to be a contrasting destiny. A year after leaving the dark nights last Spring when strange, powerful currents of unrest held thousands of persons from coast to coast acutely aware of the terrible tragedy in mind and will of a continent behind, the clanging, thudding pistons of the engines of Nova Scotia dreamers working toward the dawn.

Dr. Robertson, with a profession and a strongly defined direction in life, has returned quietly to his work, the general course of his life largely unchanged, his public relation to society unaltered.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

Scadding discloses for the first time that the Moose River incident had a theme song. For three months before the fall of rock which imprisoned him and the other two 141 feet underground, Scadding was assistant to Magill on the property.

During that time he passed many days in the mine office listening to dance music on the radio. One song impressed itself on his mind. He liked to hear it and it kept recurring in his consciousness. He got to know about two lines of its lyric.

After the first couple of days underground, while the three men were lying with their bodies pressed together to keep warm, Scadding sometimes became aware that he was singing the words "A Beautiful Lady in Blue." Was he? Was it someone she knew? Da Da Da Da Da," and so on to fill in the parts, where he didn't know the lyric. Then he would stop and think: "Gosh, if the doc hears me singing this hell think I've gone out of my mind." So he would stop singing aloud and hum under his breath.

Finally he would start the song out of his mind. It was soothing, and protected him against less pleasant thought.

Remembers Many Details

Twelve months after that strange ordeal, Scadding still remembers sharply that song. To Scadding there is still a certain amount of terror in the confinement for four or five hours underground. Those hours were the worst. Dr. Robertson and Magill would go through the mine and he simply was on the surface. He would stop and think he went down the shaft to show the doctor the way.

The first intimation came with that rumbling crashing sound of wet rock falling, then an incredible air pressure, which swept Scadding's hat from his head and blew it 30 feet away, pressing hard against his body. For four or five hours after that they could hear the rock falling, see it sliding down the shaft, wall crumbling. They wondered where it would give next. Scadding followed that long siege of waiting in the wet, cold darkness, their bodies huddled together for warmth.

A few times Magill apologized about the "damn mess." Both Dr. Robertson and Scadding insisted it was no fault and they all were in the same boat.

Told to Shiver

Once the doctor noticed that the other two were holding themselves stiff to keep from shivering. "Don't do that," he told them. "Shiver." That's nature's way of promoting circulation.

Then, at the end of the first week that macabre incident in the dark mine, Magill moved to speak for a drink of water; Scadding getting it for him in a cup one of the workers had left underground. Magill saying "I can't drink it. My throat's closed," he fell back into a lying position, striking his head. The doctor examined him. Mac's dead. They kept him lying between them for an hour in the hope of restoring his circulation.

Scadding constantly wondering, "I wonder if mother will read about this in the paper." His mother had a serious heart condition and he was fearful of the effect on her. Then he would muse on the fact that all his life he had served in the Great War. "Will they give us a military funeral, the three of us together? Will they bury us all together?" And so on. And, sometimes, even after a hole had been drilled down to their level and communication was established through a tube, he thought they might never get out. Then he would think how to get to us now and someone gets in here years later and finds the skeletons, will they be able to tell which is which?"

Then, again and again, The Beautiful Lady in Blue.

Never Delirious

Hour after hour they dozed, slept, shivered. Twice toward the end Scadding was sure he heard muffled sounds of children at play, small dogs barking, as if he were trying to find a way out. Scadding and Magill would open a hole in the wall, but always the rock slid in. Then sometimes they could hear the sounds of the dragermen digging. They shouted.

Finally, the sound of falling rock and the two living ones wakened from a doze to see men, one after the other, with electric lamps on their hats, sliding dream-like into their tomb.

Carried outside into the Spring midnight, Scadding saw the familiar, unsly deserted mine property crowded with hundreds of motor cars parked and standing. Thousands of people, miners, newspapermen. They took him into a room in the mine office. Dr. Robertson to another room. Scadding was given four or five bottles of milk. He drank them inside, the window facing east.

He could not sleep, fascinated by the crowds, the excitement, lights, activity. Whenever he was left alone in the room, he sat up in bed and sat up again and looked at the crowds outside and felt a craving for the light and excitement of morning sun.

The hesitations and singing faded gradually outside, and after a while a grey lighter than moonlight up, looked out the window and saw the sun rising, large and golden in the east. He felt like singing, like giving benediction for a moment and then he did.

"Everything's okay now," he said to himself and he fell asleep. That was a year ago. But it all can be brought back sharply in his memory by an accidental melody about a beautiful lady in blue.

Three years before the two girls had met at a tag-dancing lesson. From the first they had been friends, respecting each other and the differences in each other. Anne had just come to the city and everything was exciting and fascinating and thrilling. Irene had been an adventure to move into an apartment with Irene, to hang pictures and colorful draperies, to grab chairs from one room to another, to place the sprawling divan carefully in front of the fireplace, to buy dozens and dozens of sabirays and then, the place complete and perfect, to sit back and wait for things to happen.

At 20 Anne could not conceive that things might not work out as she had planned them. At 20 she could not conceive that the money from her mother's estate might melt away before her great chances came. In those days her great chances seemed just around the corner, and the neat figures in her bank book only a comfortable bulwark in the meantime. Impossible then to imagine that at 22 she would be miles from her pal, that her money would be gone, that the Mis on the Tenth Street would be dim as a memory.

The apartment on Tenth Street had been one enormous floor in a old stone house, someone's mansion in the nineties, which still boasted a flagged garden in the shadow of ten-storey apartment buildings around it. Not very convenient that floor, with its tiny kitchenette and vast, rick-looking living-room. They had paid too much rent—but what a place for parties it was, and what fun they had! How heedless and carefree and extravagant they had been!

Their friends had been the prosperous, casual, delightfully informal sort who cheerfully dine at midnight and breakfast at seven—Bohemian and otherwise. There was Sonia Gray, who painted—what had become of Sonia? There was Arthur Grant, the poet, whose things Anne even now saw ridiculously in the magazines and Sam Beverly, the critic, and Joe Knowles, who had once written a successful Broadway play. Many many others drifted in during the evenings or mornings or afternoons as the mood took them. In those days Anne was always overhearing remarks about herself and Irene.

"The blond child, you mean—pretty as a picture, isn't she? Where have you heard her sing? A marvelous voice, my dear! Simply marvelous. Mark my words that youngster will be famous in five years—. Irene? Because she's a child. . . . Just wait till she sings!"

Irene was always urging Anne to sing. There were plenty of willing accompanists; usually two or three men fought for the privilege of turning the music, and the rest of the room settled down to be entertained, silents circle about the room, the smoke sleeps, youthful figure leaning unselfconsciously against the piano, singing in a clear sweet voice. Always the last song was the occasion for an ovation. Where were they now, those boys and girls who had predicted such a glittering future for little Anne Grant?

Everything seemed glittering in those days. The radiant, modern element by a member of the group was sufficient excuse for a gay gathering on Tenth Street. Perhaps Arthur had sold a poem or Knowles had finished the last act of a play that he foresaw as a bigger hit than "Sally Salt". One party had been held when Sonia declared a portrait that was never paid for. To be sure, Anne and Irene had discovered that Bohemians borrowed money never repaid themselves particularly about paying it back. Even the more successful ones seemed chronically hard up. Possibly they dropped in to meals rather often uninvited. Still that didn't seem to matter. Indeed, Anne had a way of innocently exulting over these very tendencies; they represented to her the happy difference between New York and Quincy, Alabama.

Everything changed when the girls moved uptown. They moved partly because Anne had forgotten to worry over finances, more because Irene had suddenly wearied of Bohemia. No one could deny that the uptown apartment was a marvelous place to live in—but to live in a month for nearly as much room as had cost them one hundred and fifteen downtown. Of course there was no garden, but, as Irene pointed out, if one leaned far enough out the dressing-room window there was a view of the river.

Anne had helped with the moving. Half a dozen of them rode uptown with the furniture van; there was a riotous day of getting settled in the new place, and the apartment resounded to the thump of tack-hammers and the throb of the carpet sweeper and the noise of the youthful voices. It had seemed important that the housewarming should be held that very night.

Everyone congratulated the girls on their bargain. Others spoke of moving uptown, even proposed founding a little colony. Before the evening was over, everyone promised to return often.

But 117th Street is a long way from 14th Street. Riding on the bus took forever, and the subway was too crowded.[1] For a while the Tenth Street crowd made special efforts to see the girls, but gradually the visits grew fewer. Naturally, of course . . . Joe Knowles had pretty much expressed the gang's sentiment when he grimly complained that one could no more casually drop up to 117th Street than on could casually drop out to Englewood, N.J.

Irene had not minded being marooned. She had found a job modelling evening dresses in a small establishment on Fourth Street shop, had acquired another crowd that suited her better, and had made a host of friends and the rest of them had ever done. Anne, however, had composed of buyers and stock brokers, who had fewer ideas and more money. Gradually Broadway had left the room-mate did not find them fun to talk about.

Anne yawned, abandoned her reverie, searched out a match and lighted the gas-stove. It was a little more becoming till the kitchen ended—a sinister, unpleasant hum. She shrugged down to find the cockroaches.

David Blair was the one left-over of the downtown days. In his heart David had never been one of the Bohemians. He had been merely still was a newspaper man with a real job that paid real money—a job that took him to the Middle West with scrapes against borrowing money from Anne, and he had come back expectedly to dinner. Nice in a way, David was, with pleasant, somewhat grim of his. Nice, too, that he still dropped in occasionally, to chat, to come on up.

"Had a tip that brought us to the neighborhood," he announced, smiling at Anne. "It was a number that turned out to be no number at all. Anybow here I am. Going out?" he inquired.

Anne pulled off the hat and flung it to a chair, rumpling her hair where David's mass of curls clung in babyish curls to her head. The man thought her infinitely desirable.

"Glad I'm glad you're not," he sighed. "You look as if you'd just risen from a bed of ice, but I parched, steamed and practically ready for ironing."

"That's pretty evident," she informed him candidly. "Iced tea, ginger ale, or—no, that's as far as I can go."

Something now, thanks, except a few looks at you. That always sets me up in business.

Anne laughed.

"It's perfectly true, and you know it well," he said more soberly.

"There was an instant's hush, and Anne filled it by saying hastily and cheerfully:

"I've got a job."

"Good for you, youngster. When and where and how much?"

"Tonight at Lotus[ind, and don't know about the how much. Whatever it is, it's probably worth it."

She spoke defensively half expecting an objection, but she got none."

"Sit down," David said instead. "I'm all worn out from my flight." As she collapsed, he dropped into the chair opposite. "It's great having a job in these times, but should not think you'd like Lotusland too well," he remarked mildly, after a moment.

"Thank heaven, you're not another Irene," said Anne in a relieved tone. "Poor Irene! She's gone on you'd think I was proposing to marry the first man that paid $1,000 toward the cost of my mother's operation."

"That's just Irene."

"I know".

It was to herself, Anne was a little nettled. If David had argued she would have scornfully demolished his arguments, but this complete acquiescence was disconcerting. She wondered what he would think if he knew about Richard Greene.

"You seem calm enough about it," she ventured, and at the twinkle in his eye could have bitten out her tongue.

"Upset over my continued calm?" he inquired coolly.

"I believe you are, at that, silly little Anne. Don't you know you wouldn't be so calm if I hadn't fixed it so that—I'll wait for you every night after work?"

"You've seen Irene," Anne accused him, her cheeks scarlet. "She's already told you. I might have guessed—"

"Not seen her. Talked to her over the phone, and she did tell me and I did lay plans. . . . I'll be here every night if you want me; I'll settle for that much and go on living on an hour early. Lotusland closes at one, doesn't it?"

Anne regarded him steadily.

"In some ways, David," she said deliberately, "you've the nicest man I've ever known."

The effect of her statement was instantaneous. A light flashed in the brown eyes. David was out of his chair and back to the side of girl, his lips were touching her curly hair, and he was whispering his devotion, his love, his anxieties, and hopes. She could feel him tremble. Disturbed, frightened, she slipped from the chair and fled to the kitchen, burning something about iced tea. He followed her there.

"You can't be running away from me forever, honey," he said, as he lounged at a table watched her blending cinnamon and sugar for toast, slicing lemon for tea.

Anne raised thoughtful eyes. "I don't know if I can't. I'm not running away from you—forever."

Her voice was a trifle uncertain. "But no, stay where you are; chop the ice. . . . You pick's better."

"You're a martinet," he grumbled as he did her bidding.

But Anne's hand was the steady light burned. It was his eyes, the almost physical pressure of his inner happiness that alarmed and disturbed and puzzled Anne. She liked David . . . but love? Did she love him? Did the warm, comfortable glow she felt in his company signify love? Did she love him at all? Was her life just beginning into her thoughts and questioning.

"Listen, Anne," he was saying, quickly and hungrily, as he leaned against the sink, where he had done ice-cubes. "Good girl—that's it! I've got seven hundred dollars saved; a small fortune for a newspaper man, not bad for anyone. I'll never use that to get started on, for furnishing, and a nest egg for unbelievable catastrophes. I get seventy-five per week and I'm going to ask you to be a raise, and if I get married you can bet I'll get that raise. Give up this Lotusland business, I urged, tender and yet commanding. "Why not give up the job and be a housewife? Why don't you decide to be just my wife? Maybe it's not much of a job, you think, but it's a great future in it."

Anne shook her head. The girl was shaken. She envisioned life with David, a life secure and safe, with books and talk and small excitements, friends, a few parties, small, pleasant economies . . . and she didn't everyone say that economies made life more interesting? A good apartment downtown, children with leather and clothings on the walk, and David to come and be singing, an end to her dreams of a career, an end to her dreams of a vague and nebulous future in which she would emerge from nowhere to sweep her from her feet and to make the whole world different, the man who with the passing years had become as unrelated as a fairy godmother. What of it? What had her voice got her? Or her dreams?

Slowly she shook her head.

"Not now—don't ask me again now," she pleaded unsteadily. "I'm sure—"

"I'm making you sure," David exclaimed exultantly.

She was in his arms. His burning mouth fluted on her cheek and found her lips. He kissed her as he had never kissed her before, hungrily, savagely, as if he would never stop. Anne, as she pushed him back, knew exactly what he was doubting that, no matter what she might feel for David, it was not love.

Last evening the members of the Catholic Women's League at their annual meeting held the Masonic Temple at the first official visit by the diocesan president, Mrs. A. V. Egan of Portland, who gave a most interesting and inspiring address.

Mrs. Egan referred to the Catholic Women's League—the Sisters of Service inaugurated by this organization; Scholarships, a number being awarded each year; Study Clubs, Lay Retreats, and the splendid work among the Travellers' Aid.

For the first time, the National convention was being held in Kingston diocese and Mrs. Egan outlined Belleville's part in the program, urging a large representation of delegates in uniform and dress. Miss Hayes on behalf of the members presented to Mrs. Egan with a lovely bouquet of flowers, Mrs. Egan graciously thanking the members for the gift and the sentiments expressed.

Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. referred to the thoughtful address of the diocesan president. He praised the laudable activities of the Catholic Women's League and spoke of the excellent work performed in this parish as instanced by the splendid reports delivered at the meeting. Their sphere of influence was extensive and the effects of their munificent spirit was felt throughout the parish. He thanked the work accomplished by the president and officers and the whole hearted co-operation of the members, and expressed anticipation of continued success. The speaker mentioned the importance of the spiritual in the activities of this society and stated that it was the motivating influence underlying all their work. Their object was not only personal sanctification but also to work for the best interests of Church and Country.

Officers Elected

Rev. E. M. Lescy also addressed the members, counselling them to continue zealously in all endeavours of the League. Miss Anna Lafferty

BURR'S

Burr's—On Wednesday evening about eighty friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Clarke and presented them with a miscellaneous shower. Mr. Ewart Harmes called the gathering to order and a short programme of readings was given by Mrs. Rod. Gough, Mrs. Clifford Hough, Mrs. Ross Burr, and Mrs. F. Pattelle. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke were then called to the front and the following address was read by Mrs. Ross Burr.

Dear Vera and Sam,—

You have cast your lots together,
To travel down through life,
And rough or smooth may be the pathway
Of dear husband and loving wife.

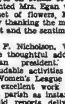
Never meet your dear companion
With a frown upon your face,
Should your work bring cares and worries,
Keep them in their proper place.

You should always help each other,
Smile and keep your temper sweet
Shall one ever be impatient
With the friends you daily meet.

As you journey on together,
Your path may be strewn with life tide;
Take the Saviour for your pilot,
He'll harm and danger hide.

Now tonight we come together
For a social time with you;
Just to wish you joy and comfort,
May it bless your whole life through.

May these little gifts we bring you
Prove of help in your home,
And remind you of the neighbors,
Gathered here to meet with you.



Your neighbors.

Sam opened the many parcels and Vera read the cards after which delicious ice cream dishes were invited all to come and see them.

A delicious lunch was then served by the ladies and all wished Sam and Vera a long and happy married life.

TABERNACLE W. M. S.

The April meeting of Tabernacle W.M.S. was held Thursday in the church parlors, the president, Mrs. Gerow, in charge. The Easter Service was most impressively. Mrs. Corhran read a paper on Christian Science, which was very good. Mrs. G. F. Leni gave a splendid report on the Presbyterial held at Trenton, also by Miss Anna Gerow was very much enjoyed.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Modern Times" and "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch"

Now playing at the Capitol until Tuesday night are two grand revival pictures brought back for the many who missed these hits on the previous showing. Shown as hit no. 1 Charlie Chaplin in "Modern Times" and hit no. 2, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Far more pretentious than any of his previous pictures, "Modern Times" is also definitely Chaplin's funniest and last night's audience laughed as they have not heard an audience laugh since "City Lights," Charlie's previous film, was released almost five years ago.

Continuing to adjust the 'talkies,' and relying upon novel synchronized sound effects, Charlie once again proves that he does not require dialogue.

Tramp in New World

Written, directed and produced by the star, "Modern Times" introduces the familiar semi-comic little figure of the tramp in baggy trousers, derby and huge shoes into a new world. He is first seen as a tramp in a big steel factory, inventing pills on a moving track. The factory with its fantastically complex and complicated machines, is like an evilly enchanted forest in Charlie, and he goes into all sorts of hilarious difficulties here before the mangear of his whole "gag" line and he goes temporarily balmy.

Thereafter, his life is a series of adventures and misadventures in the course of which he wanders into and out of jobs (ranging from night watchman to singing waiter) and fall with an admirable impartiality and courage along the way to play knight errant to a lovely little gamin of the streets. This role introduces Charlie's beautiful and talented leading lady, Paulette Goddard, who brings a fresh, radiant young personality to the screen and whose like real star material to this reviewer.

Chaplin's Feminist

"Modern Times" offers a generous supply of the most novel and hilarious comedy Chaplin has ever concocted. One of the highlights of the film is the scene in which Charlie does an unusual routine in pantomime a big steel factory, lighting the boss in a waterfront cafe to the tune of "Titina." In this scene, he is the only one in the film which we shot directly in sound. Chaplin has his own "universal language" to films in a highly original and interesting way and the result is that the full comedy consequences ever flashed on a screen. In addition to writing, directing, producing and starring in "Modern Times," Chaplin also wrote the music and cut the film.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" shown as hit no. 2 on the grand program the classic drama of the most beloved family in American literature, with Zasu Pitts as the Cabbage Patch." The millions who have read the book will be glad to see it come to life on the screen. You will never forget the portrayal by Pauline Frederick of the part her children while her "dreamy" husband sought a fortune. Then Zasu Pitts, who takes herself a husband, the part which won the hearts of women today, W. C. Her opportunity comes when Tyrone is assigned to cover the hoax but his efforts serve only to increase his popularity, as well as his unpopularity with the managing editor. On a wild dash into the country, both the heiress and his quarry are arrested for speeding and jailed by county judge Slim Summerville, an incident which results in some of the most hilarious moments in the film.

Smart Short Treats

A very funny All-Star comedy, interesting newsreel, and gorgeous revue complete the program. Two complete shows will be presented at 7:15 and 9:15.

PREMIER HEPBURN TERMED BUNGLER

Homer Martin Says He Made Biggest Political Mistake of Career

Milwaukee, April 13 (AP)—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, yesterday termed Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario "one of the greatest bunglers in the history of our country."

Martin flew here from Ontario after negotiations between representatives of Chrysler Corp. and executive committee in the General Motors strike at Oshawa, Ont., ended in the presence of Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer from the United States.

"Hepburn's threat to call out troops if disorder developed was the biggest political mistake of his career," Martin said.

"The people are friendly to the U.A.W.A. The mayor of Oshawa is an honorary member. Liberal sentiment exist with a leader like Hepburn.

CLAIMANT TO THRONE FORBIDS COCRONATION

London, Apr. 12 (AP)—The self-styled "King Anthony" Hall, still claiming the throne, yesterday issued a proclamation that the Archbishop of Canterbury forbidding him to crown King George VI on May 12.

The Archbishop's office declined to comment on the "injunction" or to say whether it had actually been received.

The former London policeman, who has himself crowned "Anthony the First", couches his "injunctions" in legal phrases but they apparently have no legal status.

Hall bases his claim to the throne on alleged direct descent from the Tudors. In 1936 he said "the Welfits or Windsors as they began to call themselves during the great war," were not of the royal blood of England.

Last Dec. 1 he warned the Duke of Windsor not to attend the then King Edward's coronation.

The Happy Couple at Their Brilliant Wedding

Above we present Their Majesties in the midst of the happiest moments of their lives. This is their wedding picture and His Majesty, going to the altar to meet to be his bride, the woman he has chosen to be his consort, is sitted in the centre of a group capable of the R.A.F.

They were married in April of 1923 in historic Westminster Abbey with the Archbishop of Canterbury performing the ceremony and suitably enough, the Primate of Scotland assisting, the service being along with the Archbishop of York. Six of her closest friends were bridesmaids for Lady Elizabeth while Prince Henry, now Duke of Gloucester and Prince George, now Duke of Kent, supported the duke. It was one of the year's most colorful and pleasant ceremonies, but greater even than the pageantry of the wedding was the unanimous approval given the union by the people of the realm.

That the King's second son was marrying a fellow subject and that his subject was the daughter of a family that could claim long and honorable association with the history of England and Scotland as well as a distinguished war record to which the lady herself had added, was a popular imagination as have few events of modern times even in a land of a hereditary monarchy. From the highest to the lowest of the hundreds of thousands who packed London's streets to see the procession before and after the ceremony there was richly enthusiastic tribute that touched the hearts of the happy couple.

And they touched the heart of their people. It is remembered that Lady Elizabeth placed her bouquet of white roses upon the tomb of the Unknown Warrior in the floor of the Abbey and that a wedding gift of some $10,000 was utilized by the people to supply outings to children in large industrial areas two years after unemployment had themselves perhaps, but indicative of the kindheartedness that has long ago made this couple to the empire. Perhaps when they travel through the streets of Canada the crowd London on May 12, memorable incidents of their early lives together will return to gratify Their Majesties as will the memory of their deep appreciated charm, the people they rule.

Mines Open Today.

"All mines and smelters will be open as usual Monday. We expect to go back to work.

"We will continue our attempts to prevent C.I.O. unionization of this territory.

Signed by President P. W. (Mike) Evans, that notice was posted at the headquarters here of the Tri-State Mine, Metal and Smelter Workers Union, which claims 8,000 members in the tri-state mine area of Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas.

The week-end call included the flogging of Constable Ray Keller at Hockerville, Okla., in addition to the Oshawa shooting and the beating of a number of men here.

Announced intention of the C.I.O. through its affiliate, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, to attempt organization in this newly prospered corner of Oklahoma, was the background for the outbreak.

The C.I.O. through president Reid Robinson of the International (Yellow Button) Union, called a meeting here Sunday afternoon.

President Evans of the Tri-State Union, however, called out for noon "as a show of strength". Reinforcements of 2,000 blue card men massed here.

Explains Opposition.

Evans explained the Blue Card Union opposition to the C.I.O.:

"Two years ago the International called a strike which lasted seven weeks. We organized the Tri-State and broke the strike. We don't want any more strikes on anyone controlled and dominated and taking out men.

Evans said the International has only a few members; that his has 8,000, most of whom were yellow buttons and gradually was removed to beach."

Rangers Need Only One Game As Neil Colville Scores Goal Defeating Detroit Red Wings

Tally Comes Early in Second With Wings Shorthanded

NO PINK TEA PARTY

Goodfellow And Pratt Enliven Encounter With Fist Fight,

Detroit, April 13—(CP)—Because they checked more fiercely and outlasmped the hard-hitting Detroit Red Wings, Lester Patrick's New York Rangers held the game-by-game lead in the Stanley Cup playoffs today. The best-of-five series will be all over if the amazing Gothamites can win again Tuesday.

A rookie with a fractured jaw, Edmonton's Neil Colville, provided the goal that in the second of the 2nd second period, that handed Rangers a 1-0 win. Then, backed by the spirit of the way protected the lead and gave goalie Dave Kerr his fourth shutout in the seven games played in the playoffs began.

The goal came with defenceman Johnny Gallagher of the Wings, present National League champions and holding of the Stanley Cup in the penitence pew serving the last few minutes of a three minute foul minor penalty.

A power play provided the punch for the score. Although officials gave assists to Babe Pratt and Joe Cooper, Goodfellow and other Rangers claimed it was Pratt and rookie Alex Shibicky who banged.

Tells How Goal Was Scored

After the game, the prematurely gray-haired Colville, still wearing his leather and iron jaw protector, described the goal this way:

"Cooper carried the puck in and took it to centre. I followed the puck up and passed to Pratt, who passed Robertson (Goalie Earl Robertson) fell down and made a dive for the puck. I beat him to it and flipped it into the net over him."

He drew diagrams showing positions of various Rangers at the time the goal was scored. The 21-year-old Edmonton boy was coolness itself after the victory.

There was scarcely a cheer. From the rabid capacity assistance of 13,726 paid customers on hand to the fans on the other hand every Detroit rush and near miss was greeted with cheers, screams and deafening applause. The crowd streamed silently out into the night, when the huge gong sounded a death knell to Wings' hopes of a third in the game.

The match was enlivened by a third period rough and tumble affair between Pratt and Detroit's Eddie Goodfellow after the six-foot Ranger came on a high sticking.

Pair Draw Majors

Goodfellow got the best of the fight but both were shoved off the ice with five minute penalties. Mud Bruneteau, Wings' winger, had difficulty in cooling off after a penalty for roughing in the second period. He was no sooner back on the ice than he was sent back with Pratt for the same offence.

Pratt no sooner got back in the game than he was aggravated at with Hitle Herbie Lewis, Detroit's "duke of Dukes" on two-minute roughing penalties.

Earl Robertson stubbing for Normie Smith, was aggravated at an arm injury in the first game of the series at New York Tuesday, played a sensational game for the Rangers. Among the many labelled shots he made was one with the stick of Murray Murdoch in the first period and a terrific drive from Lyn Patrick, son of Coach Lester, in the third.

Kerr's shutout gave him the enviable record of having eight goals scored against him in the last two off games, while his team has scored 16.

With the next game Tuesday, another game, if necessary, will be played Thursday. Only one title—the first—was played in New York because Madison Square Garden is under contract to a circus.

COPPER CLIFF IN THRILLING RALLY TRIM MONARCHS

Redmen Win First of Memorial Cup Finals 4-3 in Overtime

A TOUGH TEAM

Winnipeg Crew Leads 3-0 With Only Three Minutes to Play

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY

Toronto, Apr. 12 (CP)—A tensed Toronto hockey populace impatiently awaits tonight's renewal of what promises to be one of the keenest fought junior finals in Memorial Cup history. There will be plenty of backers for both Copper Cliff Redmen and Winnipeg Monarchs as the teams take the ice in the second game of a best-of-three series.

Redmen, in a spectacular finish, clubbed the Monarchs completely in overtime here Saturday night and after the game a large crowd of excited conquerors swarmed about alike. Monarchs were less than three minutes from victory in the second game. Belters went on the spree that turned what looked like bitter defeat to sweetest triumph.

"We were lucky to win—it must have been because we're for those Winnipeg kids," said Maxie Silverman, Redmen's manager. "Those boys showed they had the fight—I never saw anything like it. I know Redmen can play much better—but Monarchs can play any better, boy what a series this will be."

A Real Tough Team.

Maxie said Monarchs were by far the toughest team his club had faced. Redmen, he said, were not at their disappointing showing of some of his stars to the relentless checking of the Winnipeg squad—but they were not used to. But he figures the Monarchs look better tonight.

Scores of telegrams came from Winnipeg and other western points Saturday for Redmen and many for Monarchs as well. There was also a steady stream of congratulatory messages delivered to Redmen after the game. And Northern Ontario was watching the doings of the little Copper Cliff kids.

As Coach Harry Neil thumbed through a few telegrams he told how yesterday, he said: "We won't let them down—those kids will fight their hearts out to please the folks back home. We've been down in the dumps before—but we fought and we way back. I think we'll even it up tonight."

Had Skate Trouble.

Monarchs who had some difficulty keeping their feet early in Saturday's game, had a light workout at the work-out at noon today. Neil said what he hoped had been used to and what the boys had been used to and special precautions would be taken tonight.

Roy, youngest son of the famous Conacher family, is a native of the coast of Redmen. The peppy wingman scored the first goal of the game—goal in Copper Cliff's great comeback from the shadow of defeat. Defenceman Art Wall (son of Hamil) who made good on his one year trial with the Galway mediocre display.

Mihanchyk took a goal lead in the first period and added two more early in the third. It seemed as though the game was in safe hands then from victory—it happened. All Winnipeg rallied in the last period two goals, scored one himself in Winnipeg's cause, the other pair going to Johnny McCreedy.

SUDBURY TIGERS EASILY DEFEAT N. BATTLEFORD

Score is 6-3 In Second Game For The Allan Cup

MUCH TOO SMART

First Two Periods The Beavers Held Slight Edge

Calgary, April 13 (CP)—Better acquainted probably than they were in their two previous meetings, Sudbury Tigers and North Battleford Beavers clash tonight in the third and possibly final game of their best of five hockey series for the Allan Cup.

Sudbury scored victories in the first two games, winning the first in overtime, 4-3, and the second 6-3 Saturday through a three period period tilt. The first two periods of the second game the Western team had an edge.

Most of the players attended an Alberta Hockey Association social after Saturday's game. Words of praise were exchanged.

When Dick Dandy, chunky little North Battleford goalkeeper, was introduced to Jules Choletes, Tiger wingman, he asked to congratulate the Sudbury star.

"Your shot was fastest, wickedest shot I ever. . . . he said as they shook hands; but Choletes broke in:

Probably the same teams as Saturday will start tonight. Sudbury Coach Red Stuart of Sudbury said he doubted if a tight bandage on the foot of Jimmy Lowrie would be allowed the injured defenceman to return.

Erwin (Farmer) Chamberlain, Tigers' left-winger, was the target to their second victory of the series with three goals, one in each period. He scored the first goal officially with the tying goal 3 seconds after the period opened.

SYRACUSE STARS DEFEAT RAMBLERS

Win Int.-Am. Hockey Title With Pair of Victories Over Wexford

Syracuse, N.Y., Apr. 12 (AP)—The Syracuse Stars, who topped the Western division in the International American Hockey League during the regular season, clinched the league championship here tonight by defeating the Providence Reds, 5 to 2, and thereby added a second title to their record. The Stars took a pair of decisive victories from the Providence club in the best-of-five division final series, the first 4 to 1 on Thursday night and the second 5 to 2 tonight.

The speedy skating and accurate shooting of the Stars' forward platoons, the main factor in both victories, but the work of Goalie Paul Goldsmith and Stein played an important part, made much of the shooting possible. The Ramblers, a better-than-average group of goal-getters themselves, failed to find the range against the more than one period of each game. Only in the first period tonight did they add a goal in each of the later games while Stein held the Reds scoreless at bay.

Perhaps one of the most sensational stops ever made by a hockey goal-keeper was accomplished by Earl Robertson in the Detroit-Red Wings carnival in the second game of the Stanley Cup series with the NY'ank Rangers . . . Lynn Patrick, husky son of the fiery Lester, blasted a high shot at the Detroit net. It was directed all the way and Robertson missed with everything he had. . . . He threw his stick at the shot, and the flying puck struck the top of the handle of the stickhaigh, and carried on away to safety . . . Up here in the sticks they call it luck. . . . But not the Detroit sports writers . . .

Bob Feller has the Giants number . . . . In a series of three games, Feller has shut out three of them and so far they have not got a decision off the . . . The Feller off the mound, and the Giant war clubs pound a merry tattoo when the delivery of the other Cleveland shockers . . . That guy must have sampon . . . .

A Detroit hockey fans by the name of Ernest Lee Stevenson has to pays the Redwings five bucks for every goal, and every bodycheck, that Stevenson gets in the game. There was an extra raised about the Detroit-Rangers hockey crowd, but nothing was done. . . . And the Redwings are out for the extra dough now . . . . Result, in the second game Shibicky and Colville took better insight . . . Same reporter the day before payday, with Stevenson in that game, for Red had orders to "cut 'em down to our level" and that is exactly what Shibicky did in that game, anyway . . .

Herbert Mitchell, a leading trainer of the Florida racetracks was ruled off the turf recently, when his horse, All Round, was found to have been given dope . . . All Round looked up a lot of dokes in the paddock, and the boys, judged became suspicious and ordered a saliva test . . . Result, Dope-Free of strychnine, and no further issues of Mitchell . . . . He'll be back again. . . . Mary Hirsch, the first woman to receive a trainer's license, will likewise be the first to saddle a Kentucky Derby entry . . . She owns the bangtail, "No Sir."

Joe Gould, manager of the Jim Braddock-Tommy Farr fight, says the way the Shoolcons are rolling in the fight game, Braddock, right now, he is offering to bet, that the title will exceed that of the Dempsey-Tunney battle . . . The receipts are rolling in, and the gate is expected to exceed the million mark . . .

They tell a funny one about Herbie Armstrong, famous shortstacker of the Chicago Cubs . . . It seems Heinie was doing a spot of third baseing in a practice game, when the ball was slightly fouled in for fifteen feet, picked up the bat and tossed it to Betsel. . . . .

But, when he turned around, there was Heinie with a face like his features a mile wide, stood there and said, "What did you get here?" asked Heinie when he gained consciousness. . . "You ain't got nothing to get sore about, to yourself chortled the joyous Smith. . . . I was trying to show the umpire referee to another with blue murder in his eyes. . . . "It ain't right that you should take advantage of me by swiping third" he yelled . . . .

I did, plead in favor Inc throwing his bat back, that's why the bats have handles on them, so that you can him stay there, chase him back to second . . . . "Can't be done" replied the umps. It's your privilege if you want to be baboy for Betsel . . . . Heinie threw a decent fits . . . . and the umps nearly fainted when he got a 328 look . . . . Betsel smacked the ball a rolling bounder toward second. . . . While he was busy fielding the ball, Heinie a smiling aisley had raced home with the winning run. . . . .

If the saying is true that "coming events cast their shadows before it necessarily follows, that the turnout of sport fans will be appreciated from baseball to lacrosse throughout this Bay of Quinte district in the summer. Foundations for a Central Ontario Intermediate Baseball League, the O.A.L. have already been completed and four clubs are practically assured. Belleville has been invited to enter the group and a meeting of all those interested in the game will be held at the Y.M.C.A. tonight. A few of the clubs suggested talked the matter over late last week and deemed it advisable to organize a lacrosse team in Belleville. A meeting of all interested will be held in the Y.M.C.A. tonight during which a general get-together and discussion will follow and the advisability of entering an O.A.L.A. group decided upon.

We were in long distance telephone conversation with Sportsman Leader Tommy Lawrence over the week end and learned that the R.C.A.F. Trophy are quite anxious to play lacrosse in the O.A.L.A. this summer. "We have a large percentage increase players up here at the Airport and will augment the team numbers with some of our hockey players," stated Coach Lawrence. Others are always been lacrosse minded and with Mayor Alex Hall a keen sports player desirous in the movement would receive assistance from the Town Council. The lacrosse group will be formed in the Central Ontario zone of the O.A.L.A. this spring. The question where the games will be played is the big item of interest just now, however.

Do you remember when "Fireman Jim" Flynn, only man to knock out former heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey, died in his Los Angeles home two years ago today. With the exception of once behind him Flynn met Dempsey BUT at Salt Lake City and won by a knockout in the fifteenth round. Fireman, boxer and, in addition, a great fighter, Flynn was 55 years old at his death.

The softballers were busied over the week end with practice and all the prowess of their various clubs for the better-quality brand are hopes of signing them up for the 1937 baseball season. The softballers of Belleville are in for a splendid league, but there is a feeling that they will have adequate playing diamonds, one at least.

For the information of those perhaps not too paramountly interested in the staging of the second annual 200 mile Canadian Motorcycle championship classic in Belleville on Labour Day, we learned from reliable sources and unimpeachable authority, that the city of Oshawa is not only anxious to get the feature Dominion-wide attraction, but have made inquiries through the local Chamber of Commerce relative to rumors regarding the staging of the event up by Belleville. The Oshawa civic officials realize full well the value of the business and the value of advertising, that would they win and tie up the series.

Belleville will follow such an outstanding venture. Bills will go for the George Pepper fund? The fund is swelling quite rapidly but if George is to compete in the world's championship ring the money needed to send him across for a bout should be in the hands of the committee now in charge of the affairs. Jack Mcintosh, Morley Duff or Gerald Mowbray will be pleased any donations. Remember Pepper will be fighting for Canada and Belleville and if is successful will be recognized as the premier rider in the world. You can't beat that for advertising our city world-wide stamp. Forget.

On the eve of the Rinumen's meeting at the Armouries, April 19th, to be exact, the four local service clubs are tendering a Rinumen's district champion sporting teams a banquet at the Quinte Hotel. The Belleville Redmen, Foresval Softball Club, the Junior Dominions and the various K1-T hockey groups as well as the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" will be the guests of honor at the Chapper, star of the Boston Braves and later of Hamilton, is to be guest speaker of the night. Looks like a big gala affair.

Despite the fact the Copper Cliff Redmen won the initial Memorial Cup contest in the junior Dominion hockey, 4 to 3 over the Winnipeg Monarchs, the mighty "men of the North" apparently were lucky. With two and a half minutes left to play the Monarchs had apparently received a minor penalty and the Redmen went to work to score three goals in two minutes and 30 odd seconds and eked out a last-second victory. In reality it was by the book and doubtless a capacity house will welcome the gladiators at the Maple Leaf Gardens tonight. A contingent of Belleville and district have left for Toronto.

It looks like Sudbury Tigers for the Allan Cup honors. The Tigers were in the same fix when they beat North Battleford 6-3 again Saturday night, and Terrence Mine team coming from behind to apply the pressure and score four in the final period.

Despite their injury-riddled ranks the New York Rangers brought first opportunity Monday, but Detroit Redwings last night and again Jack Adams is lamenting over the hard luck and has to date worn out four pair of shoes from pacing the floors of his hotel. Last night Neil Colville, fractured jaw et al, waited in to score the only goal of the game as the Rangers made it two games to one in the Stanley Cup finals. The clubs will resume hostilities on Thursday night and it's the Rangers' advertising, that would they win and tie up the series.

DAILY SHORT STORY

INTERLUDE

By Meredith Scholl

"And this time," said Neal Sharon angrily, "don't come sniveling back and expect me to make up with you!"

Jill Neal's wee small wife with the golden hair, drew herself up to her five feet and one inch, and her eyes flashed. "Come sniveling!" she said with biting sarcasm. "Me come back to you? Neal Sharon, you wouldn't come back for a hundred thousand million dollars!"

A sudden glint lighted Neal's eyes and a determined look came to his mouth. "We shall see," he said, as he crossed to the telephone. "Give me," he told the operator, "an employment agency, any employment agency . . . Hello, employment agency? I want a maid. . . . Yes, one that can cook and make beds and sweep . . . O.K. I'll leave the key under the door mat . . . Neal Sharon, 2231 Hudson avenue."

Pleased with himself, Neal put on his hat and coat and went out. When he returned home that night he found a note on his kitchen table. It was written in a feminine hand and informed him that the writer had been sent out by the Acme agency and had cleaned his house, changed the sheets on the bed and prepared his dinner which he would find being kept warm in the oven. The writer also stated that she had a family of her own to look out for and would it be satisfactory to him if she went home nights at 5:30?

Neal was delighted with such an arrangement. He sat down, wrote a note stating that the plan was excellent, and enclosed a $10 bill. He placed the note on the kitchen table, and when he returned home on the following evening it was gone, but there was a slip of paper in its place which read: "Thank you, Mrs. Brady."

On the first day of the second week Neal became alarmed. Jill was rather overdoing it this time. This was the longest she'd ever stayed away. But when she stepped into the house he found Jill there waiting for him.

"Well, Neal Sharon," she said lofty, "so that's the kind of a man you are!"

She thrust forward a slip of paper. "Don't tell me you can't deny it!"

Neal took the paper and read: "It was awfully sweet of you to tell me that, and thank you for the money."

"Neal Sharon," Jill choked. Her eyes fairly bulged. "Do—you mean —do you mean that you—actually have been carrying on an—an affair with this Nora person?"

Neal sat down and folding up his evening paper, "I'm not admitting anything," he said.

"Why—you—you—that is the last straw! Now I'll never, never, never come back!" She turned, rushed blindly to the door, opened it, placed one foot over the threshold, paused, looked back. . . .

Neal threw his paper, quite indifferent to her departure. And suddenly she found herself at his feet, buried her face against his knees.

"Darling! Darling! Oh, forgive me, take me back. Please don't love anyone else! Take me back and I'll never, never leave you again. It was all my fault! I was selfish and mean and—and horrid. Oh, Neal, I could never live without you!"

A key rattled in the front door lock. Jill turned to glance over her shoulder. The door opened, admitting a great hulk of a woman, a woman with red hair and a fat face, a woman of many years and many pounds.

Jill got to her feet. "Who are you?" she asked.

The big woman grinned awkwardly. "Me? Why, ma'am, I'm Nora. I got Mrs. Sharon's job and do his housework. I came back to tell him that hereafter I could stay till' o'clock, if he wanted me to."

Jill whirled and faced her husband. "So," said she, "so! That's how it is!" She turned, strode swiftly to the door, brushing aside the prodigious Nora. "Neal Sharon, I think you're—you're horrible! I never want to see you again!" and she went out.

Neal sighed heavily. Nora looked at him and said: "Was that your wife, sir? Won't you be wanting me any longer?"

"Yes, Nora, I'll be wanting you," said Neal wearily. "At least two weeks longer."

CHILD FATALLY INJURED

Ottawa, April 12—(CP)—Struck by a truck after she slipped from her mother's grasp and dashed across a street, Maureen Gleeson, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Gleeson, was fatally injured Saturday.

Brigadier-General H. H. Matthews, 31, of Hull, Que., alleged driver of the vehicle, was arrested on a charge of criminal negligence. Police say his brakes were defective.

Chief Justice Hughes Was 75 On Sunday

Washington, April 12—(CP)—Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the United States, was 75 Sunday. He reaches that age with the guiding hope of his lifetime somewhat obscured by an era of social unrest.

That hope — often discussed privately by Washington observers is to be recognized by historians beside John Marshall, great jurist of Washington's day, as "Hughes, the Chief Justice."

2,000 MEN RETURN TO WORK

Windsor, Ont., April 12—(CP)— Two thousand employees of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada will return to work in Windsor plants Wednesday, it was announced Saturday by Kenneth Crittenden, Chrysler Vice-president.

Baldwin Admits Imminent Retirement

Worcester, England, April 12—(AP)—Prime Minister Baldwin predicted his imminent retirement Saturday.

"I'm better to go when people may still think of you as, perhaps, not incompetent," he told Conservatives in an address to his constituents, "than to stay, until, perhaps, they know before you do that you are becoming incompetent."

It has long been taken for granted that Baldwin would step aside soon after the coronation next month.

He made no mention of a date for his resignation.

ADDRESS OF LOYALTY MOVED

Ottawa, April 12—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King today moved in the House of Commons an address of loyalty to King George VI on the occasion of the Coronation.

Imperial Oil 41½.
Imperial Oil Limited is not likely to publish 1936 results until sometime next week. As in previous years, it will be through with the largest profits of the Canadian companies, ranging probably from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000, equal to about 95 cents a share on the common stock. Most of the revenue will, as usual, come from their subsidiaries, the International Petroleum and Royalite.

Canada Dredge Co. Earns $2.12 Share

Toronto, April 13.—(CP)— Net profit of $201,016, equal to $2.12 on the 94,775 shares outstanding, was reported by Canadian Dredge and Dock Company for the year ended December 31. This compared with $5.02 a share or $480,296 in the previous year.

Three dividends of $1 each were declared in the year, calling for disbursements of $284,325. The earned surplus was tapped therefore to meet the distribution and surplus was reduced from $955,019 to $859,225.

Board Room Gossip

Be suspicious of tipsters and read Crawford by Financial Service.

One prominent source points out that there is greater reason to look for an upward move in price of gold than a decline. The debts of United States and other nations of the world are mounting to almost unconunable sums, and there is no way by which both can be reduced but devaluation of currencies and consequent increase of the price of gold, upon which those currencies are based. Common sense does not always govern stock markets, but there has been very conclusive proof of that fact in the past few days, with London, usually impervious to canards, leading the van.

The opinion in the Street is that Brazilian Traction will announce a dividend payment, possibly one of 50 cents, about mid-year. The company last year distributed 70 cents a share and earnings in the current year have been showing a improvement.

Market Comment

Security markets were very much unsettled last week as a result of the widespread report of an imminent reduction in the price of gold. A denial by President Roosevelt that the United States was contemplating any change in the price or gold tended to allay fears and brought a sharp recovery not only in the mining issues, but in the general list as well.

Noranda Mines Limited

Noranda Mines is mainly distinguished for the fact that it has been consistently profitable in the present corporate form for over ten years. For last year Noranda reported net income equivalent to $4.14 a share on each of the 1,- 239,772 shares of common stock outstanding, and compared with earnings equivalent to $2.63 a share in 1935. This common stock is the sole capitalization. Earning, this year are expected to be materially better than last.

MILLIONAIRE HID FORTUNE IN BANKS TO AVOID TAXES

Widow of Pipe Magnate Fights Gov't. Over Money Due in Income Tax

USED FALSE NAMES

New York, Apr. 13 (CP)—Heirs of John M. Phillips, New York sewer pipe manufacturer sought today for the fortune of more than $1,000,000 he left scattered among 20 banks in Africa in various unnamed banks and safety deposit boxes in Canada and the United States.

But the same time Mrs. Marian A. Phillips, widow of the pipe magnate and the United States government were locked in battle of the estate, the government alleging Phillips never paid income taxes though he amassed a fortune more than $10,000,000, at one time.

Phillips was known to have made deposits in Montreal banks. The United States Department of Internal Revenue recently was forced by a federal court decision to return $1,000,000 of the money which it had seized for delinquent income taxes and fines. Cassidy said her late husband hid his money to avoid income tax payments.

Phillips died before he died in 1928 Phillips made frequent secret trips to Europe from New York depositing huge sums of money under false names in foreign banks, Cassidy revealed only to his wife Francis who carried the secret with him when he died in a plane crash.

On one occasion, it was said, Francis Phillips went to Canada deposited $200,000 in a Canadian bank and went on a party. On his return he had forgotten the name of the bank.

FASCIST PARTY BADLY BEATEN

Brussels By-Election Shows Clearly Mind of People

Brussels, April 13 (AP)—Buried under a blizzard of ballots, Leon Degrelle set out today to rebuild his shattered Fascist party while followers of Premier Paul Henri Spaak celebrated the triumph of "law and liberty" in the Belgian general election yesterday.

The young Premier, accepting the challenge of Degrelle, contested a seat in parliament, and won by a margin of 275,840 to 89,242 in an overwhelming rejection of the Fascist program offered by the Fascist party.

Highly excited crowds, closely watched by police, roamed Brussels boulevards as returns came in. The Premier's cheering battle against the Fascists and made menacing gestures toward any partisans suspected of being the Rexists.

The mere presence of the Rexist newspaper Le Pays Reel in a cost was sufficient to arouse the crowd's anger.

Mock Processions

Mock funeral processions carrying effigies of Degrelle and singing Spaak's praises, moved slowly through the streets. Police made several arrests to prevent serious disorders.

Van Zeeland polled 72,89 per cent of the votes cast in Brussels' 19 wards for votes.

The Rexist candidate, backed by Flemish Nationalist Allies, received 4,479 votes less than the two parties did when they won the last election in May, 1936.

Degrelle polled 19.05 percent of the vote. The remainder of Rexist votes.

Observers said the stinging defeat did not necessarily mean the end of the Fascist movement, but that a reorganization seemed inevitable.

DUNNVILLE FIRE DAMAGE $30,000

Most Serious Conflagration in Town in Twenty Years

Dunnville, Ont., Apr. 12 (CP) — Most serious fire here in twenty years caused damage of $30,000 to Harrison Block, containing five stores and the Canadian Legion hall, was quelled. Damage was estimated at $25,000 to $30,000.

Stores on the ground floor were the Dunnville Public Utilities and Hydro offices, Dunnville Dairies office, O. H. Chambers auction rooms, Roy Bros. laundry, and Geo. Krahling's shoe repair shop.

Fire was first discovered in Chambers auction rooms but origin of the fire brigade was on the scene immediately. More than twenty lengths of the hose boys, assisted by volunteers, worked to check the flames, spread along rapidly throughout the building.

Cause of the fire is unknown, but it is believed faulty electric wiring was the cause. This is the second time the block has been attacked by fire. Originally the old opera house, it was turned into an office building about 1919, and was furnished in 1918.

Nationalist warships put the Bilbao situation like this:

"It has been necessary to take measures against the commercial traffic directing the Washington, Virginia and Panama flags in order to reinstate sightseen employees it had suspended.

The steel case similarly embraced an order of the board directing the Pullman Company to reinstate ten discharged employees. The board's decision was upheld by the National Labor Relations Board directing The Associated Press to reinstate 13 employees with back pay. editorial employes.

The board said that any regulation protective of union activities, or the right to bargain on the part of such employees, would constitute an invalid invasion of the freedom of the press.

Discharge of Man.

"We think the board went not only has no relevance to the circumstances of the instant case but is an unwarranted interference," the steel case's reason for Watson's discharge was his refusal to withdraw as the petitioner, is 'solely on the grounds that he will not be a party to the unlawful acts of his fellow employees.

"The petitioner did not assert and does not now contend that he has shown bias in the past. It does not contend that he has been in connection with the union he will be likely, as the petitioner honestly believes, to be unfair to the union in the future in collective bargaining.

The statute does not provide a discharge on the ostensible grounds that the employee may be unfair in his discharge for what has been found to be the real motive of the petitioner.

The act does not compel the petitioner to employ anyone; it does not require that the petitioner retain in its employ an incompetent editor or one who fails faithfully to carry the news to reflect the facts without bias or prejudice."

THREE SENTENCED TO REFORMATORY

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Pack Also Mrs. Grace Johns Given 3 Months

Reformatory sentences were given Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Pack of Belleville, and Mrs. Grace Johns, Prince Edward County by Magistrate J. D. Butler, K.C., as the trio appeared in today's local police court for sentencing, after having found guilty of contributing to the moral delinquency of children in police court on Friday last.

Stanley Pack, the father of six children, was sentenced to serve three months determinate and a further determinate sentence of two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory. Kathleen Pack, his wife, was sentenced to serve three months in the Mercer Reformatory for Women, with an indeterminate sentence of one year. "It is clear to me this woman was condoning immorality in the home," commented His Worship.

When Mrs. Grace Johns appeared for sentence Magistrate Butler admonished her at length. "Yours is a more shameful case. You have been business in these people's home, as I can see from the evidence," stated he sentenced the Johns woman to three months determinate and to the Mercer Reformatory, and to two years less one day in the Mercer Reformatory.

The charges of the Pack family were made as the result of the local Children's Aid Society as the request of Inspector T. D. Ruston of Toronto. The two young children will be taken over by the Children's Aid Society. Others charged with children in the Pack home at 174 Mary St., when it was raided by authorities early on the morning of April 9th and the above term arrested.

Ald. Clapp Appeals For Co-operation to Keep Front St. Clean

A "Keep-Front-Street-Clean" campaign is to be started by Alderman Clapp, chairman of the committee in the department of public works, with the object of his department, the Belleville Board of Front Street store and business house managers.

It was announced today.

This morning the city sprinkler, in the first attempt of the season, laid the dust and dirt generally collected over the week-end. A force of eight men operated the flusher sweeping up the refuse, part of the dirt with long brooms. If this work can be done as cheaply as with the sprinkler, Alderman Clapp said up, it is the intention of the department to rely on the flusher work.

Commencing upon the trouble spots, namely, Front street and the adjoining business streets clean it was announced by Alderman Clapp that the department will also endeavour to have the city sprinkler operate in the residential streets as soon as the dust settling off the roads.

Now is the time, while the sun is shining, as instanced in the case of the elderly gentleman whose raincoat grieves rolled to the sidewalk when he was accidentally bumped by a speeding motorist, in the light of baths gleamed mercantile. For a long time the city has been placed by a smile which matched the brilliance of the sunshine.

"Boys will be boys" he grinned, wiping dust from the new hat, which had been the figure of the now distant scooter-rider.

Residents will also take advantage of the first real opportunity to show her 1937 wares. The boys and girls from every city street will present a number of the older folks, blossomed out in the latest styles and the sartorial fiory of new Spring topgery.

Along the river bank, a number of fishing enthusiasts, armed with rods and lines, will be seen trying the elusive sucker. Bicyles appeared in numbers along the city streets, and were greeted, apparently by not a member of the mechanical world, but by the throng along the sidewalks. Others were seen with their family crowding a horse-drawn vehicle. Another group, those in Spring fiancy too, with hoed rows, were busily planning in the sunshine.

All in all it was a grand and glorious day, and everyone agreed that "God's in His heaven, all's right with the world."

IN BED FOR WEEKS WITH BACKACHE

Quick Relief With Kruschen

Quick Relief With Kruschen

It was advice from her mother that led Mrs. Neal Hall to take Kruschen Salts for her backache, and before she had finished the first bottle she was feeling better. This is the letter she writes:—

"About this time last year I had severe pains in my back and was in bed for about two weeks. I could not even rise in bed. I tried several remedies, without any real relief. Then I wrote to my mother in Australia for advice. She wrote to me by return of post urging me to try Kruschen Salts. I started taking a bottle at once and I can truthfully say before I had taken the fifth dose I could sit up. I kept on taking them and in less than two weeks I was quite right. I am never without Kruschen now." (Mrs.) A.O.

Kruschen Salts helps function properly, certain acid waste, instead of being expelled, are allowed to pollute the blood-stream and produce troublesome symptoms: backache, rheumatism, pain, sickness, fatigue. Kruschen Salts is an excellent tonic for kidney aperient, valuable in assisting the kidneys to excrete acid impurities.

BALMY WEATHER GREATLY ENJOYED

Green grass and growing things, flowers scattered with a lavish hand, the warmth of the sun and the breezes of a typical Spring day brought out Bellevillians in great numbers yesterday, to motor cars and on foot, on bicycles and on roller skates. The sidewalks were filled in the first warm weather of the season. All day long a steady stream of vehicular traffic passed through the city enroute to the favorite places with a lot just "right for the ride." Victoria Park with its trees in the bud, and generally speaking a most inviting green of vivid grass green was the mecca for a large number of pedestrians throughout the day.

Sidewalks rang with the rattle of roller skates and scooters as the youth of the city celebrated the first balmy day of the embarrance characteristic of the season. Then, too, was the mollifying effect of the healing rays of the sun, or sunshine, as instanced in the case of the elderly gentleman whose raincoat grieves rolled to the sidewalk when he was accidentally bumped by a speeding motorist, in the light of baths gleamed mercantile. For a long time the city has been placed by a smile which matched the brilliance of the sunshine.

"Boys will be boys" he grinned, wiping dust from the new hat, which had been the figure of the now distant scooter-rider.

I'M GOLD MINE SAYS OLD ARTIST

His Paintings Skyrocketed in Price But He Avoids Publicity

New York, Apr. 13 (AP) — Art critics, are lovers, and cash customery thronged an uptown gallery today for an exhibition of the work of Louis Michel Eilshemius—but the artist was absent. He was busy displaying as much contempt for his admirers as they formerly displayed for his work.

"I'm a gold mine," observed the 70-year-old artist, "but I'm not sure I'm getting rich."

Eilshemius' paintings, mainly landscapes, have sky-rocketed in the last five or ten years. His first one-man show was held in 1913 and he has been honored with a one-man show. The Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Metropolitan Museum of art of the United States.

"Mahaima" Doesn't Care.

And Eilshemius, who prefers to be called "Mahaima", freely admits he does not care.

"Twenty years ago," he said, "I sent the Metropolitan four big canvases, free. They were as big as the side of that brick-case. And what do you suppose they did? They shipped them right back to me."

For several years now, since an auction-room sale, Eilshemius has stayed close inside his studio apartment. He likes visitors, but refuses to shake hands and gives them away until they are settled.

Ottawa, Apr. 13 (CP)—Restoration of the basic wage rates by April 1, 1938, to some 10,000 employees of the Canadian National Railways who are members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees is the unanimous recommendation of a Board of Conciliation report released by the Labor Department today.

Judge F. L. Bailey of Ottawa was chairman and Edward R. Rea, K.C., of Montreal represented the employees and W. Sanford Evans of Winnipeg represented the railway.

The board recommended that officers of the railway made on April 5, following the settlement with the other classes of employee, be made the basis of a settlement.

Air-minded spiders! When a young aeronautic spider wishes to see the world he takes stock of the situation. First he climbs some object such as a tree, or post, and then spins a long silk line and lets it fly with the wind. He then spins another and another, and continues until there are enough in his fleet. From his perch and fleet him along, he knows not where. The efficiency of this method of exploring the air is attested by the fact that these ballooning spiders have been observed a hundred miles out to sea. Many different species of spiders are thus distributed.

SURRENDER OF BILBAO LIKELY

No Ships Willing to Try And Run Insurgent Blockade

St. Jean De Luz, France-Spanish border, Apr. 13 (CP)—Tightening of the insurgent warship blockade, after Great Britain's withdrawal of warships from her rendezvous within Spanish waters, threatened today to force the surrender of Bilbao to the encircling insurgent armies. Government radio was offering ship ships that would run the blockade.

The British decision to escort freighters only on the high seas put the responsibility squarely on the insurgent fleet within the three-mile limit and, through force abandoned earlier this week, left Bilbao's ships deprived the besieged Basques of their principal source of supplies.

Basque officials, allied with the Madrid-Valencia government, acknowledged the food situation was grave but insisted they were ready to undergo a siege of hunger.

In an effort to break the blockade and obtain provisions for the hungry troops and the city population, swollen by refugees to more than 300,000, the Basque government asserted mastery of Spanish seas within ten miles of the coast and offered to provide escort for any food carriers which would run the blockade.

THREE-YEAR-OLD LOST IN WOODS FOR SHORT TIME

Geraldine Courneyea Found by Large Search Party

WANDERED AWAY

Child Well Clothed And None The Worse For Experience

Tweed, April 13 (Special)—Geraldine Courneyea, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Courneyea of the French Settlement, about three miles north of Tweed, was lost in the woods near her home for the greater part of Monday night and was found by a search party which was recruited by Constable A. J. Ketcheson of Tweed, from residents of the village and neighborhood, at the fourth concession. The child appeared none the worse for her experience.

Geraldine, who is the little tot, in company with two brothers, ages 5 and 8, had gone to the back part of the bush, a short distance from their home, to gather the sap. About 9.30 in the morning little Geraldine became separated from her brothers, becoming tired and hungry, and supposing their sister to have gone home, themselves returned to the house, only to find that Geraldine had not come home.

The alarmed parents hastened to the woods, searching here and there without success. Word was sent to neighbors who readily responded to their plea, but still no trace of the little girl could be found.

Search Party Formed

Finally Constable J. C. Hayes of Tweed, was advised of the situation. He quickly enlisted the aid of a number of men from the village while the new-found-alarm neighbourhood turned out to a man. A search party, fifty strong, began a thorough beating of the woods. Their efforts were finally rewarded about the middle of the afternoon when one of the posse heard a child crying from a nearby fence corner about a quarter, of a mile from her home. To their glad eyes was then stored to the arms of her grateful mother.

From the appearance of the little girl, when found, it is clear that she had cried herself to sleep and had failed to hear the calling of the searchers. Accordingly, to be none the worse for her adventure as a result of the fright, she was warmly clad and the day had been fine.

48 WORKING AT OSHAWA PLANT

Strikers Told Majority of These Were Plant Foremen

Oshawa, Ont., Apr. 13 (CP)—Forty-eight employees went to work today at the parts department of General Motors of Canada, Limited, and there were fewer boos and jeers from the picket line of strikers, part of the 1,700 workers who began the strike started at the plant Thursday.

A total of 48 men—entered the parts department building. On Saturday 48 and on Monday 83 had gone to work and of these 48 today were girl office employees. Union picketers were told by their chiefs the majority of those returning today were foremen and that the other employees would formally sign up in the union today.

Production has not as yet been started but it was announced by General Motors officials today that the Federal Department of Labor acting as intermediary between the parties following the offer addressed to the Mayor by Hon. Norman Rogers, Federal Minister of Labor, on Monday night last night advised Mayor Hall they would "welcome" the suggested intervention of federal authorities. Company executives said they would have an announcement today.

Unable to Feed Them Parents Tossing Children into Streets

Tragic Scenes Result of Drought and Famine

RELIEF PROGRAM.

Chungking, Szechwan Province, China, Apr. 13 (AP)—Parents in the drought and famine area of southeastern Schechwan are tossing their children into the streets to die because of inability to feed them, reports reaching here today said. The tragic scenes have resulted from the drought and famine, said authorities who disclosed that 2,102 bodies of starvation victims had been picked up off the streets of this city alone in March.

The United Church of Canada Mission, with headquarters at Toronto, has organized a relief program through its ten stations in the province, with funds raised in Canada.

From an obscure village to the north came a typical story, confirmed by local missionaries:

A wood cutter delivered a bundle of firewood to a customer who failed to await payment, even though the need for money to buy the little available food is acute.

The purchaser's curiosity was aroused and he opened the bundle immediately to discover a starving child wrapped within.

The father, unable to provide food for his infant, had tried unsuccessfully to give him away and finally decided to force the child he couldn't find a home.

87-Mile-Range Guns Are Set Up By Germany On Czechoslovak Border

London, Apr. 13 (CP-Havas)—Guns reported capable of bombarding Prahn, the Czechoslovakian capital, from a distance of 140 kilometres or 87 miles — have been set up near the German-Czech frontier in the neighborhood of Hoyerswerda, North Saxony, the Manchester Guardian declared today in an article on German's military preparations.

Surveying the new border defences of the Reich, the Liberal newspaper said "the fortifications on the Czechoslovak frontier are less strongly defensive in character and show that the German general staff do not think in terms of defence but in terms of offence on this frontier."

EDITOR UPHOLDS HEPBURN'S STAND

Asks How U. S. Would Feel if Shoe was On Other Foot

St. Louis, Apr. 13 (CP)—Commenting editorially on Premier Hepburn's firm attitude in the General Motors strike at Oshawa, Ont., the St. Louis Daily Globe-Democrat said the C.I.O. Union officials in the United States had had "not only sympathy but all forms governmental, national and state."

"It is not likely that Premier Hepburn's criticism of the action or inaction of American governments will fail to incite more or less heated response from this side of the line and will imperil amicable relations. On the other hand, Hugh Thompson, American organizer for the C.I.O. in Canada, hurls defiance at the Premier. That attitude, and that of the Ontario government, indicates a conflict of a nature apt to create public animosity in Canada, not only towards the C.I.O. but toward American in general as the source of the invasion.

"If the shoe were on the other foot Americans would certainly resent any attempt of people from Canada or any other country to obtain control of American labor."

J. Osterhout Stockdale, A. Sine of Wallbridge Arrested After Struggle

Alleged Attempt to Break-in Home is Frustrated

POLICE IN AMBUSH

Alleged Osterhout Was Carrying Small Sand Bag

John Calderbank, Stockdale, and Allen Sine, Wallbridge, appeared before a Justice of the Peace in this city today and were each charged with "attempted robbery" and "conspiracy to rob." Neither of the prisoners elected to plead and were remanded in custody for trial on Friday next in police court. In the meantime further investigation will be carried on by the police.

Subdued after a sharp, brief struggle with R.C.M.P. and Provincial Police officers in the dark when they were surprised in an alleged attempt to enter and rifle east of Foxboro on what is known as the "Mudsill" road, John Osterhout, 22, of Stockdale and Allen Sine, 23, of Wallbridge, were arrested and lodged in jail here where they will answer serious charges.

Following information received by police a dozen officers assembled to the effect that an entrance to the Mahaska home, in which a large sum of money was thought to be secreted, would be attempted between eight and midnight. Provincial Police Inspector Frank Mathews, accompanied by Corporal McPhee and Constable Beattie of the R.C.M.P. detachment here, drove to the Mahaska home and secreted themselves in the shrubbery near the house.

Shortly before ten o'clock their vigil was rewarded when a car stopped approximately sixty feet away from the house. A few minutes later two dark-clad figures, their faces hidden by white masks, crept up to the house.

Attempting to enter the door, the two intruders were suddenly apprised to hear peremptory order to "Stick up your hands and stay where you are."

Officers Make Appearance

Complete surprise was registered on their faces as the police officers appeared on the scene. Inside the house a frantic old man paced the floor in nervous excitement. Outside a struggle ensued. The fight was staged at the "Mounted" officers, with the exception of Major while Inspector Gardiner held Osterhout covered with the muzzle of his revolver. A short, sharp struggle ensued, and finally Sine was felled to the sod and made a dash for freedom. He sped away in the darkness with the officers in hot pursuit, but crashed into a barbed wire fence about thirty feet from the house, where he was easily overpowered by the constables.

Meanwhile, the police station here, Sine and Osterhout were searched before the alleged attempt-sine of a man's fist, filled with sand, was found on Osterhout's person.

Mahaska, who lives alone, believed that the intruders were prowlers when visited by police officers two hours before the alleged attempted break-in. He refused to listen to the police, but by a look at the interior of the house and grufflly ordered the officers from his home.

BLOOMFIELD RESIDENCE DESTROYED BY FIRE

The home of Alfred Smith, transport owner of Bloomfield, Ont., is today a heap of smouldering ruins as a result of a fire late yesterday afternoon which totally destroyed the home and contents.

Fanned by a strong wind, the flames which started in the interior of the house from an unknown cause, made such headway that salvage of the home and its contenta was impossible. Smith, who was sawing wood in the backyard at the time, was not aware of the fire until he saw flames and smoke issuing from the roof. Attempting to enter he discovered the room had been locked by members of his family who had left to spend the afternoon with friends.

Villagers rushed to the scene, and battered down doors but terrific heat and clouds of smoke prevented any efforts of saving the house and its effects. It is not ascertained whether the loss was covered by insurance.

Many Farmers Finish Syrup Making Season

The majority of syrup-producing farmers, especially those of Prince Edward County have put out their fires, packed their manufacturing equipment, gathered in their buckets and called it a season.

"It is the only brief a season for us" said one prominent producer this morning. "The general output from the two hundred trees which we tap yearly is usually impressive or little more than a gallon, but this year our total receipts from the same number of trees was only fifteen gallons. However Nature warned us at the start that it would be a poor commencement season. The sap was one hundred per cent sweeter than that of other years, and this is a general sign that the run would be of short duration. The sign did not fail."

Knights of Columbus Enjoy a Social Evening

BANQUET ENJOYED

Grand Knight F. Domenico Chairman of Function

The Belleville Council, Knights of Columbus held another very successful banquet and social evening in their club rooms last night. The gat togethers are for the purpose of getting the members and their families better acquainted with each other.

The large assemblage was welcomed by Grand Knight Frank Domenico who acted as chairman. He expressed his pleasure and gratification at the large number present and hoped that each and every one would enjoy himself to the full.

During the banquet which was held in the lodge room of the parish, Mr. Harold Barrett led in community singing, accompanied by Miss Flora Cook at the piano.

Interesting Program

The first part of the programme then followed. Geo. Lee, the genial lecturer of the local Council introduced Harry Wagner, Johnny Lloyd and Fred Stone. This trio contributed several trio and solo numbers, and Fred Stone delighted the audience with his imitations on the violin. Alec Tisdale gave a Hawaiian number.

Deputy Grand Knight Robert Moher was then called upon and he expressed his pleasure at seeing so many of the members and their friends present. He extended a hearty welcome to all present. Grand Knight Domenico then introduced Rev. Chas. Drew, pastor of the Holy Name Society. He paid tribute to the Knights and said he was the one largely responsible for the splendid attendance at the Holy Name communion breakfast held Sunday at the Hotel Quinte. Rev. Father McCabe, pastor of Trenton Council extended greetings from his Council and expressed the pleasure it was for him to attend. He wished the local council success, as of luck in any undertaking they might consider and promised the support of Trenton Council in any way possible.

Rev. Fr. Nicholson, Y.O., was called upon by the Grand Knight to introduce Rev. Fr. McCabe who had undertaken the invitation of the zealous and capable Grand Knight. In addressing the gathering, Monsignor expressed deep appreciation of the privilege present at the gathering and complimented the Grand Knights and his assistants on the success of the event. He referred to Father McCabe as a zealous and energetic priest, a former member of the Holy Name Society, and stated he spoke of the pleasure it was afforded all by his presence as speaker of the evening.

Father McCabe

Rev. Fr. McCabe thanked the Monsignor and said he had chosen the subject on which he thought might well be called the first Knight of Columbus in Canada. Because of the fact that he had a striking interest in exploration and discovery, he had chosen Samuel de Champlain the first Governor of Canada.

Life of Champlain

In a graphic and interesting manner Father McCabe described the early life and voyages of this man who was fired by an ambition for discovery and travel, and attracted by the art of navigation. Choosen as a companion by Champlain in 1606, his native poetic sense relating to the voyages which were his own. He was the active force behind the colony soon established. Everything he did was well done, everything accomplished under difficulties was of value. A fitting tribute to the life of this founder of Canada impresses one with the many splendid qualities he possessed. His energy, his courage, his loyalty, his distinteresedness and his probity will be esteemed by some, als zeal, his exalted faith and charity will appeal to others. The fact is that all these qualities were united in a prominent degree in the character of Chamberlain.

Father McCabe gave a thoughtful and absorbing account of the story of the early colony of New France; its struggles, its progress, its dealings with the Indians, its hardships and its opportunities. Throughout its early development, the influence and guidance of Champlain were shown as great factors in the colony's achievements.

The travels of this voyageur and his descriptive writings which are now a treasury of historical knowledge were of greatest value to the land of his adoption. He was accurate and careful in his accounts and his writings are the more remarkable as they were composed during the acuely leisure of a busy life. Father McCabe described the explorations of Champlain in interesting detail and said in conclusion:

The life of that great man of our country Samuel de Champlain, should be studied profitably. We who are mean heirs to that heritage which he founded, that faith which he first brought to the soil of Canada, we cannot do better than to realize his ideals and to emulate them in our action. Each of us his our place in working for those two loyalties 'For our Church and for our Nation' which Champlain had idea into Canada first."

Express Appreciation

District Deputy T. V. Scanlan moved a vote of thanks to Rev. Fr. McCabe for his splendid address. His spoke of the address given recently by Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody in Bloomington, Minnesota, and said the first aim of the Knights of Columbus was to aid in any way possible the rev. clergy. Past Grand Knight Dolan gave a few side splitting minutes in his inimitable way. Charlie is always ready to give of his time and wisdom to help in any way he can and he is always appreciated.

Rev. Fr. Leroy P.P. of Descronto said it was always a pleasure to come to Belleville and hoped there would be many more evenings, such as this in the future. He said the Knights of Columbus were the true cream of Catholic manhood and their work was greatly appreciated by the clergy.

Floor Show

The last part of the program a floor show under the direction of Mr. Bertram with Miss Chas. Moreau at the piano then followed.

Miss Mildred Cooke gave two solos as a negro gentleman and completely captured and had the audience in kinks with his imitations.

Perhaps the star of this portion of the programme was little Barbara Donovan, five years old, who gave an exhibition of tap dancing which would do credit to one much older than little Miss Donovan and she had to give an encore.

Geo. Furban assisted in a role thanks to those young artists. Rev. Msgr. Nicholson expressed his pleasure at the end and splendid programme.

The evening closed with the singing of O Canada.

MOTOR SHOW TO BE FINE EVENT

Kinsmen Work Overtime to Make Show a Real Success

On Monday evening, at the New Queen's Hotel, the Belleville Kinsmen's Club held their semi-monthly dinner and meeting. Over an excellent chicken dinner the coming Kinsmen's Motor Show and Fashion Show was discussed with Chairman of the Motor Show Committee, Jeff Mason. This Committee has been working overtime for the past few months and indications are that it will be the biggest thing of its kind ever attempted in Eastern Ontario. Sub-committees, under the able leadership of Cecil Lloyd, reported the advance sale to be far in excess of all expectations. The plans to date call for a three day Show, with a Fashion Show each evening and a Grand Finale Show and entertainment daily.

A motion was made and carried unanimously that the Club make a cash donation to aid in sending George Turner to the Canadian Derby Races in England in June.

Glen Colling, chairman of the Kid-Kar Derby, reported that plans for this year's Derby were progressing very satisfactorily and that it will be bigger and better in every line than the previous Derbies. He also took the occasion to thank members of the Club for the gift of prizes during the recent Derby.

Mr. Fred Johnson, guest speaker for the evening gave a very interesting talk on the advantages and benefits of Kinsmanship in both Secondary and Primary Schools. He pointed out that a musical training developed both moral and physical sides of a student's character and that in many of the larger centres throughout the Province it held a most important place in the Newark Convention. Mr. Johnson's talk was certainly well received and he was heartily applauded on all sides that in the near future he may be able to address the Club again.

The song-leader for the evening was Jerry Hurley and he not only led the singing but was competent manger but he also favoured the boys with a few solos which were immensely enjoyed by the Club.

The meeting ended with the singing of God Save the King.

Collenburne, ridiculously gave his opinion of things in general shortly after entering the buildings, then proceeded to "tackle" his first customer for the day.

"Do you know where you are," asked Crown Attorney Donnan, "Hic—I oughter, didn't you send me here." replied the prisoner, in his alcoholic, critical, and verbal abuse of everything in general with the result that he was invited to accept the hospitality of the city.

POLICE BLOTTER

While skirting the inside of the dummy policeman at the intersection of Front and Bridge Sts. late yesterday afternoon a large motor car lorey, driven by F. S. Johnstone, Oshawa, collided with a parked car driven by Wm. Mills, Belleville, Toronto, resulting in considerable damage to the front or Mr. Mulholland's motor car.

According to Plainclothes Constable Fred Jarvis, investigating, Mr. Mulholland had approached the intersection from the west and stopped for the red light. Mr. Johnstone, driving a large transport, tried to pass the line of new automobiles from Oshawa, swerving suddenly on Front St. and made a lefthand turn, striking the side of the traffic policeman, to continue westerly. The force of the lengthy motor van was sparingly felt by the car driven by Mulholland, it collided with the front of Mr. Mulholland's parked car while negotiating the turn. The matter was subsequently settled amicably between the two drivers involved but the accident not only impeded the progress of traffic, but added to the congestion for a short period.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, although local police have been troubled in routine duties. The cell block was occupied by 16 transients last night, who were given shelter. The night was also a busy one for the general influx of transients has been quite noticeable of late.

Campaign Against Communism Announced by K. of C. Head

Destruction of Religious Liberty Feared by Supreme Knight

ATTACK ON STRIKES

New York, Apr. 12 (AP)—Martin H. Carmody, of Grand Rapids, Mich., Supreme Knight of the Knights of Columbus, announced yesterday the opening of a drive against Communism, which will be "vigorously prosecuted in every one of the 2,500 K. of C. councils throughout the United States and Canada."

The General Motors sit-down strike, he told 200 delegates from metropolitan area councils, "was the work of outside—Communists, who were brought in from Toledo, armed with machine guns."

Carmody accused Communism of aiming to destroy religious liberty, the unity of the family and the processes of orderly government.

Explaining he had just completed a nationwide survey of Communism and its effects, he said:

"I found Communism is trying to disrupt legislative bodies, Congress, Filmi, Mich., where the present sit-down trouble originated, none of the strikes was instituted by the workers themselves, but by outsiders."

MUSSOLINI'S "VOICE"

Editor of the official Giornale de Italia, Virginio Gayda (ABOVE), spokesman for Premier Mussolini, charges that "Spanish loyalist forces have been reorganized under French command and with arms coming in part from France." Twenty-five French officers, under a French general prepare plans and direct Spanish operations he said. Gayda also intimated that Soviet Russia had violated the non-intervention agreement. Nervous Europe fears that Gayda's outbursts are a prelude to open Italian intervention in Spain.

SLAUGHTER 3,000 IN SURPRISE MOVE

Siege of Capital Declared to Have Been Definitely Halted

With Insurgents outside Madrid April 13 (AP)—More than 3,000 government troops were estimated to have been slaughtered outside Madrid today in a surprise attack against the right flank of the government army.

The day of the determined government drive to raise the siege of the capital was declared to have been definitely halted by the end of life which amounted to almost one man in four.

The government troops were caught in a cross fire from two strong insurgent positions north of the Casa De Campo, former Royal preserve which Miaja's troops have incbed their way for four days.

The government artillery barrage opened in the early morning hours, turned on the shallow No-Man's land, in some cases only a scant dozen yards wide, as the rebels held their ground, 18,000 infantrymen advanced in slashing waves to attack the insurgent positions on the depths Hill and Perdices Hill.

As the Miajistas struggled up the slopes, filling the valley between Generals Mallquer, in a commander, gave the command to his two guns to fire "point blank" men who charged the Legionnaires' positions. 3,000 were reported officially to have been left dead on the field.

SHOOTING AFFRAY PROBED BY POLICE

Johnson Skye Alleged to Have Fired at Sister

Hamilton, Ont., April 12 (CP)—Johnson Skye of suburban Bartonville was remanded a week by Magistrate E. A. Hardcastle when he pleaded not guilty to a charge of wounding with intent. Skye was held while police investigated a shooting on a farm near Bartonville last night.

Mrs. Ellen Longboat is in hospital here with her chest punctured by shotgun pellets. It is believed she will recover as the pellets did not penetrate deeply.

83 EMPLOYEES IN PARTS DEPT.

Pass Unmolested Through Picket Line at Oshawa

Oshawa, Apr. 12 (CP)—Eighty-three employees of General Motors of Canada, Limited, entered the parts department of the plant here today. They passed unmolested through a picket line.

Estimated at between 300 and 400, the striking pickets shouted "scab" and "traitors" at the men, but did not attempt to stop them. Today marked the fifth day of the walkouts of 2,700 employees in an attempt for union recognition and wage revisions.

STRIKEBREAKERS JOIN THE UNION

Invitation Extended to Non-Union Men to Attend Meeting

Oshawa, Ont., Apr. 12 (CP) — Picket lines in front of the parts and service building of General Motors of Canada, Limited, today included men who had been there as strikebreakers Saturday and have since joined the United Automobile Workers' Union, officials said.

Plans were being made for a meeting tonight of parts and service department employees and invitations will be extended the 83 non-union employees who passed the picket line today.

Union officials hope at this meeting they may be able to persuade these employees their interests will be best served by joining the union, they said.

"We will use the 'grape vine' system of inviting them to the meeting" a union official said. "Once two union men will be detailed to invite each employee who went back to work this morning."

Another official of the union declared he attempts to enlist the remaining workers in the union would be the only means in trying to have the parts department. Boos and jeers and calls of "scabs", "rats", and "finks" were directed at them by a group of nearly 300 pickets on duty outside the building.

ATTEMPT MADE TO WRECK TRAIN

C.P.R. Freight Strikes Pile of Ties But Stays on Rails

Smith's Falls, Ont., April 12 (CP)—For the second time in the past few week an unsuccessful attempt was made over the week-end to wreck a train by placing an obstruction on the tracks.

An eastbound Canadian Pacific Railway freight train struck a pile of ties yesterday but the locomotive remained on the rails. In the other cases ties were placed on the tracks of the Canadian National Railways.

OPERATION SAVES LIVES OF TWINS

Lying in Opposite Directions But Locked Together.

Los Angeles, April 12.—(AP)—Mrs. Mildred Stubbin and her "interlocked" twins—two daughters whose manner of birth is rare in medical history—made satisfactory progress today, hospital attendants said.

A delicate obstetrical manoeuvre was necessary to save the lives of the twins, because they were lying in opposite directions but locked together, chin to chin, chin to chin. They were born yesterday.

Howard Merrill and Joseph Freed said "interlocked" twins are reported once in 50,000 cases.

ON CORONATION DAY

Trinity Episcopal Church on Wall Street, New York, is to hold special service on the day on which King George VI. is crowned. The service will be the same as that designed for Great Britain by the archbishops of Canterbury and York. Old Trinity is a daughter of the Church of England. Such services have been held on Coronation days since Colonial times.

It was in the days of a George, the third of that name that the American Colonies were lost. It is interesting to realize that services so designed for the parishes of the Church of England are followed in this parish in New York.

A GREAT FAMILY

Those who believe that there is something in heredity after all, even while great personages may arise from unexpected sources, read with interest a few days ago of the death of one of famous sisters. It was that of Miss Edith MacDonald, who passed away at the home of her nephew, the Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, she being the only unmarried one of five daughters of Rev. George MacDonald, the other four of whom have appeared high in British affairs. One was the mother of Rudyard Kipling. Another Baldwin's mother was another. One married the famous pre-Raphaelite painter, Sir Edward Burne-Jones, and the other was the wife of another artist, Sir Edward Poynter, a former president of the Royal Academy.

Birth into such a stock and with the ways of heredity are none too clearly defined, there is enough to show that to be what is known as "well-born" is no calamity.

In the cases of these sisters, there is revealed something which might well be meditated upon—this unusual fact that four sisters stood in so marked a position in the highest life of England.

THE SPRING HEAVENS

Some of the most inspiring scenery in the heavens is slowly being folded down in the west. Starry constellations which have decked the winter sky with the most inspiring vision ever shown to man, in the opinion of many, are like the folding tents of the Arabs, slowly disappearing from sight. Now when darkness comes and the constellations begin to appear defined in the skies, those which have been with us all winter are seen near their setting in the west. Orion, the most majestic of all constellations, named after the hunter of classical mythology is in the west and does not show to advantage as it did when it was at the zenith earlier in the year. The greater and less Canis constellations, Taurus (the Bull), Castor and Pollux, the Twins, and that precious chaplet or necklace of stars, the Pleiades, are all on their way out of sight.

Bootes with the great star Arcturus is now in high place. West of it Leo the Lion with the sycle-hand in Regulus draws the interest, being in the centre of the stage where earlier was Orion and the other winter constellations.

If the stargazer has lost the great constellations until next autumn, he still has those unsetting constellations of which the Dipper is the most prominent, with the Little Dipper, Cepheus, Cassiopeia, and others in that circle which always remain above the horizon.

CALAMITY OR WAR

According to one of the Canadian correspondents now in London, the Nazi regime in Germany some time in the not too distant future will have to make the choice between collapse and war.

This theory has been propounded a good many times during the past few months. It is based upon the assumption that Hitler's cult of German self-sufficiency is impossible to fulfill as long as Germany is unable to exact tribute from the rest of the world, in the form of colonial possessions, extensive foreign trade or foreign investments. It is obviously true that the Reich cannot indefinitely build up armaments and ignore the more basic economic necessities of its national life.

On the other hand, it is highly probable that war would come ultimate collapse just as surely as peace may mean it. So there is Hitler's curious dilemma. One suspects that perhaps a compromise will be engineered, whereby Germany gains some of its desired objectives and a European conflict at the same time is avoided. Mussolini's ill-fated Spanish adventure should serve at least one good purpose. It should sound a warning to dictators who feel impelled to risk all on a throw of the dice.—Hamilton Spectator.

CAP A FORTIGAL

The vagrant road drops quaintly to the sea;
And where the splendor of an ancient dream
Invests the hills with dark solemnity
The pines close darkly on a whisp'ring stream.

And there, at sundown, as the spendthrift day,
Shed its late beauty o'er a drowsing land,
We watched the wild duck's brood upon the bay,
The shadows creeping on the yellow sand.

Then, in the summer twilight's purple hush
A strange emotion stirred us; on the hill
The lyric vesper of a hermit thrush
Echoed for one sweet moment, and was still.

And Time itself, reluctant to intrude,
Seemed to condone that perfect quietude.

WONDERS NEVER ECASE, and science with its ceaseless probing delving and dissecting of things seen and unseen in the air, in the water, on the earth, beneath the earth and in the heavens are solving many mysteries which hitherto have baffled mankind. It will not be long, if the present rate of progress is maintained by science and invention before there will be very little left unexplained or unharnessed. For instance this week from the Canadian Broadcasting organization boarded the fast C.N.R. express between Montreal and Ottawa and picked up some good copy which he transmitted over the air while the train was in motion. He interviewed the engineer and fireman, then went through the train and talked with passengers, conductor, Pullman car conductors and porters, also the dining car staff, learning there that over forty meals had been served since leaving Montreal, that there were several hundred dishes, as well as cups and saucers to wash on the run, and this car was cut off at Ottawa and returned to Montreal on the morning eastbound transcontinental while a diner from Ottawa was picked up at Capreol on the westbound to provide breakfast and other meals for the passengers. On the train was a crew of shipwrights from Quebec bound for Waterways, Alberta, where they will assemble the tugs for service on the Mackenzie river and other northern waterways. The tugs were in section shipped on freight cars from Quebec to Alberta. The foreman and some of the men were interviewed, and among the passengers a young lady, found by the radio man studying shorthand to while away the time, who said that her destination was Winnipeg. These broadcasts began in February when the operation of a coal mine was explained on the spot and are called "The Canadian Scene." Another broadcast was made Thursday evening over CRCT when the various departments of the Globe and Mail, Toronto were given the once over and the making of a newspaper retailed by the radio man for thirty minutes. Anyone who can make a complete newspaper in thirty minutes deserves a medal—but then the making of a morning newspaper is much more sedate and orderly a process than the hustle and bustle of producing an evening newspaper, believe it or not, as only those know who go through the process every day. These broadcasts deserve commendation and notice because of their originality, and the promise contained of good things to come from our own broadcasting system.

CALAMITY JANE

The guide was showing a party of American tourists over a noted church in London. When they reached the belfry the guide said:

"This 'ere bell is a bit unusual. We only ring it on the occasion of a visit from the Lord Bishop, or when we 'ave a fire, a flood, or some such calamity."

Crown Jewels on Display in the Tower

Here are England's crown jewels, on display in the Tower of London. The collection, valued at more than 30 million dollars, is being polished by skilled workmen for the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

It Isn't So—

Slimy as a serpent: It would be difficult to conceive of a more inaccurate expression. Reptiles are practically devoid of glands in the skin, and the body of a snake instead of being slimy is smooth and polished like glass. Slimy as a fish or a frog, if you like, but only dry as a serpent.

Wise as an owl: I have observed a great many owls and have never seen anything in their behavior to cause me to believe them wiser than other birds. Their eyes are placed in front of the face, and both focus simultaneously upon the same field of view; that is, they have binocular vision. This peculiarity gives them something of human aspect. Like most humans, however, they are not wise but merely appear so.

Blind as a bat: This is said of them probably, because we usually see them at their worst; that is, in the daytime. They see amazingly well in dim light, and anyone watching them catch mosquitoes on twilight cannot choose but envy.

Crazy as a loon: A terrible slander on an astute feathered citizen. Try to shoot him and see how readily he dives before the shot can reach him. His wild, laughing call does sound maniacal perhaps to us, but not to other loons. Besides he is not talking to us.

Quick as a cat: This expression overrates the cat. A graceful, smoothly moving animal, it is true, but no quicker than a fox squirrel, and slow as compared to a weasel. Watch a monkey moving through a branches and draw your own conclusions.

Ferocious as a gorilla: A slur upon the reputation of a simple living relative. According to Carl Akeley—and he knows gorillas—they are mild, inoffensive creatures vastly less harmful and dangerous than the men who hunt them.

Dirty as a pig: Anyone viewing a pig confined in a filthy, narrow pen might well believe the animal to be dirty, but a pig is not dirty in actual fact. Under these conditions, the animal is filthy simply because he cannot help himself. Give him a chance to be clean and, he will be as clean as a horse or a cow.

Strong as a lion: A powerful beast, truly, but some recent tests conducted in a zoo showed the tiger to be much stronger than the lion when compared pound for pound of weight. Roosevelt says that a lion can run a hundred yards from a standing start in about four and one-half seconds.

If this is true, the lion is about the fastest creature for his weight I know of, and the above expression might appropriately be changed to "Swift as a lion."

Shine like a cat's eyes in the dark: Pick up your favorite "Tabby," if you will, and carry her into some very dark place—say a clothes closet—and then observe whether or not her eyes shine in the dark. The eyes of many mammals (the cat is a common example) possess a peculiar, light-reflecting layer, the tapetum. This reflects so much light as to make their eyes visible in the dark. But they do not shine, as they appear to do, by their own light. They shine under these conditions, but only when many sources of light are contrary notwithstanding.

The above are only a few of the many popular fallacies concerning animals. Not all popular expressions about animals are bad, however. "Sly as a fox," "Swift as an antelope," "cross as a bear," "slimy as an eel,"—these and many more like them, are all accurate and useful comparisons.

A Novelist's Novelty

The gentleman in the soldiers' home at Los Angeles who has written a 50,000-word novel, complete with plot, characters, and conversation, without once using the letter "e", may not have added much to the world's great literature, but he has at least performed a literary stunt that must have looked almost impossible.

Try to write one ordinary sentence without using that letter and see how hard it is. Then imagine writing a whole book that way and you begin to get some idea of the difficulties involved.

Perhaps if someone objects that this bit of work must have been more stunt than novel, it can only be said that the same thing is true of about two-thirds of the so-called novels that are published these days. Since most of them are written for almost any reason under the sun except any desire to create something of real literary merit, why limit this Los Angeles man's motive as good as any?—Fresno Daily Press.

They Really Live Longer

There is an old gag to the effect that a married man doesn't really live longer than a single man — it merely seems longer, since using sacred men have a greater appreciation of life, and the seconds prove it.

The Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life has made a survey of the death rate in New York State, exclusive of New York City, and this is what it finds:

"One rule holds consistently throughout life: the married man is favored over the unmarried. The disparity is not a mere trifle; it is very pronounced. In fact over a considerable range of ages, from 15 to 45, the mortality of the married men is less than half that of the single.

Among women the advantages of the married state in favor of longevity are less marked, as the bulletin explains:

"Their death rate at ages from 20 to 25 is better by only about ten percent, than that of the single; and for very young wives, ages 20 to 24, the hazards of childbirth, concentrated at this period, raise the mortality of the married somewhat above that of the single."

For some curious reason the widowed seem to die younger than the wives. At age 35—and the figures for that age are said to be typical—the mortality among widowers is 9.22 per 1,000, while the rate for married men of the same age is only 4.42. At the same age the death rate of widows is 8.35 against 4.31 among married women.

HISTORIC CUSTOM TO BE REVIVED

King And Queen to Make State Journey by Water

London, Apr. 13 (CP)—Historic custom of a state journey by water by the king and queen will be revived this year but stream-lined modernity will mark the ceremonious pageantry of other years.

A state hydroplane with a top speed of 36 knots will whisk the royal party from Westminster to Greenwich over the Thames on April 27 when they open the National Maritime Museum.

Earlier state fournies were made in heavy barges, covered by a profusion of carving in crimson and gold and powered by richly uniformed oarsmen.

Painted green, customary color for an admiral's barge, the new craft is a 45 feet long and has a new cruising speed of 20 knots with a dozen persons on board.

MINISTERS AT ODDS WITH STRIKE POLICY?

"Cabinet solidarity must obtain in connection with Queen's Park policy on the Oshawa (General Motors) strike, or resignations will be the outcoming by the end of the week. It was reliably reported in Toronto that party circles last night.

"There are grave disunters within the government from the emphatic stand taken by Premier Hepburn, they will, it is understood, be actively immediately either so swing into line with their leader or swing out of the ministry.

"For several days it has been rumored that grave differences exist between Hon. David Croll, Labor-Welfare, and Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck—have been at odds with the strike policy enunciated by Mr. Hepburn. Both were out of the city when the strike started, and since their return have been at pains, it is said, in negotiations that have been undertaken with a view to bringing the crucial Oshawa situation amicably and definitely to an end. Neither minister, it is said, has been consulted on the situation by the Prime Minister."

DOCTOR TO APPEAL FINE

Toronto, Apr. 13 (CP)—Dr. Norman King Wilson, Toronto eye, ear and throat specialist, fined $100 on a charge of "attempting to hurt, maim or injure a dog", will appeal the fine to the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Magistrate James Cowan fined the physician the maximum penalty on the charge yesterday. Notice of the appeal will be filed in a few days, Stanley Shatz, defence counsel said.

WRECKING ATTEMPTS BELIEVED WORK OF MENTALLY-DERANGED

Smith's Falls, Ont., Apr. 13 (CP)—Three attempts to wreck trains and an equal number of complaints here today sent police on the trail of a hypothetical lunatic or a group of small boys.

Officers said they believed the train-wreck attempts, three in the space of a week, were the work of a mentally-deranged adult rather than boys. They declared it seemed unlikely boys could have carried heavy ties such as were placed last Saturday night in three piles along the eastbound Canadian Pacific Railway tracks at the northwest end of the town.

A freight train ploughed through the obstructions, but the crew had been warned after the piles of ties were sighted by the crew of a westbound train and the engineer was proceeding cautiously.

Two previous attempts were made to wreck Canadian National Railways trains by placing obstructions on the rails, ties once and small boulders once, during Saturday's attempt officers found a child's mitt and small foot prints near the scene but it was not known if they were connected with the incident.

Three men, two conducting garages and automobiles and a third concurring in a blizzard room at the designated minute, gave rise to belief there was some connection between them and wrecking attempts.

A large detachment of Canadian National Railway police arrived here yesterday and there were reports officials might seek assistance of the provincial police and Mounted Police to track the saboteur.

MISSIONARY FROM CHINA IS HEARD

Annual Convention Now Proceeding at Alliance Tabernacle

The annual missionary convention of the local body of the Christian and Missionary Alliance opened Sunday morning to the Tabernacle on Metcalfe Street West.

Following the customary order of service and the wholehearted singing of stirring missionary hymns the pastor, Rev. Guy A. Stoner, introduced the speaker of the day, a keen stalwart young man, in the person of Rev. Frank Grobb, who with his faithful wife, has labored for several years in the interior of Present China. The large congregation though deeply stirred and almost motionless as the speaker told in his own forceful manner of his work out yonder in the provinces of Lace and challenged them with the great responsibility resting upon Christians everywhere in speeding by their gifts and by their prayers, "The Winds Blble to the Whole World."

Rev. Mr. Grobb dressed in native costume addressed a splendid congregation at the evening service and showed by his words and expressive chalks brought in to accomplish the effect, the wonderful power of His message Mr. Grobb stopped long enough to render a sacred solo on a violin, which added to the adornment of bamboo and reed construction. At the conclusion of his message, the speaker invited the young people of the congregation to stand to their feet signifying their desire to consecrate all to the Master, to be sent where and when He chose, Following this, parents who were willing to give their sons and daughters to the great missionary field were asked to stand. In both instances a number responded after which the pastor closed the meeting in prayer and the singing of a consecration hymn.

Mission Banners Seen

The Tabernacle was most fittingly bedecked for the occasion with an array of twenty-one different banners each with the name of a different mission field for which the society is responsible, neatly arranged about the four walls. In the rear gallery a well filled table of free missionary literature, fruit of the work of the Christian Missionary Alliance in the regions beyond.

This being the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the society, the congregation was reminded of the Lord's blessing which attested so greatly upon it since its beginning.

Today the society maintains at a monthly cost of many thousands of dollars, a staff of five hundred missionaries and fifteen hundred native workers, a force which is working in twenty-one mission fields and circulating the gospel to ninety-three language groups. It is one of the greatest evangelical world wide missionary societies of the present day and is ever pushing forward into new and unoccupied areas.

ROTARIANS LOOK BEHIND THE SCENES IN 'PHONE WORLD

Belleville Rotarians were treated to a very fine exposition of the genius behind the telephone with talking pictures explaining its development, step by step, from a so-called toy in 1877 to its present-day eminence as a world-wide utility, tremendously useful in the development of trade and commerce. The pictures were projected by Mr. F. W. Motion, of Montreal, who was introduced by Mr. G. W. Proctor, Belleville 'Phone manager. Rotary appreciation was expressed by Capt. Thos. Huston and Ross Neal, chairman pro tem.

An extended description will be found in another column.

President Jos. Sheritt presided for the first part of the meeting, turning the gavel over to Ross Neal. Sandy Burrows led the singing, while Leo Riggs, presided at the piano and Steve Plunkett acted as sergeant-at-arms.

Bob Dewer made the announcements in regard to future meetings, and Past President Ed. Bernstein lined up the delegates who will represent the club at the District Convention in Erie next month.

SHOW WORKERS ASK WAGE INCREASE

Oshawa, Ont., April 13.—(CP)—A four-member committee of workers at the Robson Leather Company plant here planned today to meet company officials to seek an increase in wages and recognition of their newly-formed union, Local 11 of the Canadian Show Workers' Union. The decision was made at a mass meeting yesterday. Robert MacDonald, president, announced:

"We are to meet the management for a general increase for the 230 workers." Mr. MacDonald said the union has 100 per cent of the workers as members.

Pictorial Presentation of The Progress and Development of Telephone Science From Crude Beginnings in 1877 to the World-Wide Service of Today—Talking Pictures Tell The Story to Rotarians and Kiwanians of Belleville

Telephone history from 1877 to the present time was given in talking pictures in a very interesting manner before the Rotary Club Monday and the Kiwanis Club Tuesday under the auspices of the Bell Telephone Company, with F. W. Motion, projectionist, of Montreal, handling the machine. The pictures traced the progress and development of the telephone from 18- when it was regarded as little more than a toy, down to the present day — showing pictures of scoffers and prophets, with the prophecy that some day the telephone would be indispensable and that the voice with distant places. Pictures of the first telephones were shown and contrasted with present day efficiency with a family phone call between Japan and this country.

Pictures were shown of the first exchange established, in Hamilton, in 1878. Of the first experiments in long distance telephoning in 1885 and its gradual development with the overcoming of difficulties as they presented themselves —the discovery and perfection of the loading coil and vacuum tube and the amplification of the voice as it tends to fade at stated points in its trip across the continent.

Talking to Cuba

Transcontinental service was followed by international connections and the first conversation with Cuba was was made a very notable event with high dignitaries of both countries taking part in national felicitations and in congratulations to the inventor who had made it possible. Then in 1926 and in 1927 came London, another notable achievement and another step in the great scientific adventure of taking the human voice around the world.

In 1933 Canada was linked up from coast to coast with telephone service and with the globe wire encircled, all this being shown in moving pictures with sound attachment.

Grey Owl's Little Brother

A nature pictures entitled "Grey Owl's Little Brother" was shown and proved very interesting and instructive. "Grey Owl" is an Apache Indian who has made his home in Canada for some time and made his life's hobby that of protecting wild life from wanton slaughter by commercial trappers and hunters. "Grey Owl" has the love for the crowded cities but prefers life far away in the wild places with his furry and feathered friends of the wilderness who has learned that he means them no harm and is in fact their protector. His work of conservation keeps him almost constantly in Canada's national parks, but he finds time in his thoughts on paper and several books have been published under his name. He also left the open spaces to enlist in the Great War with the 13th Montreal Battalion and served at the front, returning with wounds and an experience he would not exchange for much money.

Busy Beavers

"Grey Owl's Little Brother" is a beaver which this Indian author adopted when a wee pup, after the parent beavers had been killed in a trap. "Grey Owl" brought the baby beaver up without curtailing its liberty in any way, and now has only to call his pet and it will come hurrying from any distance. Other beavers have learned to love this remarkable Indian and come at his call.

Pictures were shown of beavers building a dam and lodge and it was quite evident that the term "busy as a beaver" was not misapplied.

"Getting Together" was another picture shown, illustrating the immense number of parts which go to make up any piece of telephone apparatus. This film is presented in cartoon style and is a revelation of the tremendous development in telephone science since the first instruments were termed "toys."

Mr. G. W. Proctor, Belleville manager for the Bell Telephone Company, made a brief address preceding the presentation of the pictures, explaining the object of the showing which was to give a faint idea of what is behind your telephone and which annonis of machinery, technical knowledge, and organization which produces efficiency in such a world-wide service in a more than magical way.

Mr. Proctor introduced the projectionist, Mr. F. W. Motion, and the latter said he would let the pictures speak for themselves.

Workers Accept Offer Of Hon. Norman Rogers To Conciliate Dispute

OFFER THROUGH MAYOR

Organizer Thompson of C.I.O. Pleased by Court Decision

By H. IVERS KELLY

Oshawa, Ont., Apr. 13 (CP)—An official reply was awaited today from General Motors of Canada to the offer of Hon. Norman Rogers, Federal Minister of Labor, to mediate the dispute between the company and its 3,700 workers, now on the sixth day of their strike.

The workers have accepted the minister's offer to conciliate the dispute but an executive of the company indicated last night General Motors will decline his suggestion, at least for the present. The company has been co-operating with Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario in his effort to settle the strike.

Mr. Rogers made his offer through Mayor Alex Hall of Oshawa. The mayor transmitted it to both the United Automobile Workers of America and the company and expects a reply from General Motors today.

A meeting of union stewards last night formally endorsed federal intervention after Organizer Hugh Thompson had assured Mayor Hall of the union's willingness to bring the dispute to federal conciliation.

The stewards also passed a vote of confidence in Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Labor, who conducted early negotiations between General Motors and the strikers. The stewards expressed regret that he was not given a free hand to continue what he had started.

Demand Minimum of 75 Cents.

The union leaders voted against discussion of wage increases while Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Croche had been admitted to talk to General Motors. Thompson had said earlier, "We will not discuss it because it hasn't been made to us directly. In any event our demands are for a minimum for all workers at 75 cents an hour."

Thompson charged that the offer the premier announced was not the highest General Motors told Mr. Hepburn it was prepared to make. "He might as well come out now with the ultimate offer instead of beating around the bush," Thompson declared. The increase Mr. Hepburn announced were seven cents an hour for those receiving 55 cents an hour or less and five cents an hour to those receiving more than 55 cents.

In a statement last night Thompson, an organizer for the Committee for Industrial Organization, suggested that the Supreme Court decision in Washington yesterday upholding the Wagner National Labor Relations Act would eventually settle the Oshawa strike.

May Recast Agreement.

Thompson said that under the Act a union having 75 per cent of a company's employees as members becomes the collective bargaining agency for all employees. "This would make U.A.W.A. the sole bargaining force for General Motors employees in the United States and force a recasting of the agreement recently signed in Detroit," Thompson said.

When the new agreement was signed it would be made in honor of General Motors of Canada, Thompson declared. He made the statement after a long distance conversation with Homer Martin, international president of the U.A.W.A.

An effort is being made in Oshawa to sign all employees of General Motors as members of the Union. Union heads said the maintenance group signed up yesterday "almost to a man" and that the Union previously had only a few members in that department of the plant. Attempts are also being made to sign up employees of the parts department, 85 of whom went to work yesterday. Union officials claim this drive also is meeting with success.

Union officials also claim public opinion in Oshawa is behind the workers. Thompson announced merchants are donating food and that the Union has been promised 200 loaves of bread free every day of the strike. Cars are donating elements and cheese to help feed the picketers.

No Appeal For Funds

Thompson said the Oshawa local of the U.A.W.A. has not yet appealed to the International organization for funds. He said the strikers still have not spent their last pay and that a week's wages is owing to them by General Motors.

"There is no need as yet for financial assistance to be given the Union," he said, "but when it is needed it will be there."

On the subject of money Thompson referred to a reported statement of Premier Hepburn. Thompson and Martin were "highly paid professional agitators, making a fat living out of the pay envelopes of our working class."

Thompson offered to sell his bank account for $15 and claimed he is paid only $6 a day five days a week and has a limited expense allowance. He said Martin could make 10 times his present salary in private business and that he, Thompson, has turned down a $10,000 a year job as sales manager because he found more satisfaction in labor organization.

CONCRETE OFFER

After detailing proposed adjustments in hours, seniority rights and rest periods, Mr. Hepburn urged "serious and immediate consideration" by the Company's offer, adding that each day of delay means failure to grasp present opportunities for export trade.

Heeds No Rebuke

"I hold no brief whatsoever, for the General Motors Company nor any industrial or financial organization," said the Premier, "but am simply assuming my responsibility as chief executive of the Province of Ontario."

Meanwhile, Harry J. Carmichael, Canadian Vice-President and General Manager of General Motors of Canada, denied the suggestion the heads of the General Motors Corporation at Detroit had given any intimation they would advise the management of the Canadian Company to reach an agreement with the C.I.O. Automobile Workers' Union.

"I have received no instructions whatsoever from executives of the General Motors Corporation in Detroit other than that the situation in Oshawa is a Canadian situation in another country," he stated.

Not Applicable

Definite statements have been made that the agreements made in the United States were never intended to cover Canadian plants and he claimed, since the economic conditions of each country had to govern operations there.

Interference by "professional C.I.O. leaders, who obviously are supplied with huge funds, is experienced by the fact that most of them are now travelling in luxurious private automobiles," he said, presented by all Canadians, Premier Hepburn commended in his stable terms.

"I believe we are quite capable of settling our own domestic problems, alone or otherwise," he said. "I still offer my services as mediator between the company and employees and will meet any representative group of Oshawa citizens, or General Motors employees, at any time, at any place or at any hour. If I can contribute in any way to a settlement which will stop men walking the streets in idleness and place them back in gainful occupation."

Not Perturbed by Abuse

He was not perturbed by the "tirade of abuse" to which he had been subjected by those who "are not interested in your welfare in particular, but who are anxious to wax fat by exacting a monthly toll from your pay envelopes."

Premier Hepburn said it was not his function to act as mediator between the Company and its employees, but since he had been asked to receive a delegation of strikers, he had taken upon himself the responsibility of conveying to the General Motors' executive the strikers' grievances.

Mr. Hepburn made clear that General Motors' new offering to grant wage increases despite the fact that a recent increase was granted to all employees and that the Company's books for the year had been completed and price schedules announced, which meant that any further increase would have to be absorbed on the Company's balance sheet.

'GLASS BOOT' IS INSTALLED

Merciful Life-Saving Device Now Used at Preston Springs

Preston, Ont., April 13 — The tragedy of Moose River more than a year ago has had the effect of bringing to Canada as well as public interest in the "glass boot" used for a time in surgical therapy. The device is credited with saving the feet—and possibly the lives—of Alfred Nelson after he had been entombed in the Nova Scotia mine for ten days. It has just been installed in the Magnetic Clinic here.

Doctors explain that the "glass boot" a merciful life-saver for those endangered with gangrenous condition that is often followed by amputation of the feet or legs.

Nelson owes his life's rescue from the Nova Scotia mine, wrey in such a gangrenous condition it was feared amputation could not be avoided. Use of the "glass boot" undoubtedly saved his feet, physicians believe.

The "glass boot," one doctor explained, is a mechanical apparatus which reduces or increases the air pressure on the patient's lower circulation to the surface of the afflicted part. In the case of a case of frozen feet, the doctor explained, the equipment made possible a reduction of pressure on the circulation, thus restoring the feet by natural blood circulation in its stead.

The device operates on the principle of alternate pressure and suction. The equipment is the product of years of intensive experimental research based upon clinical and experimental research at the Department of Surgery of the College of Medicine, University of Cincinnati. Dr. G. L. Herrman, head of the department, is mainly responsible for the device.

The ROYAL ROAD to the CORONATION

Work awaited the Duke of York and almost encroached upon his honeymoon. As head of a King's son which is more exacting than that which falls to the lot of men in lesser spheres of life. But before we pass on to other scenes which have helped mould King George VI into the democratic and constitutional ruler whose coronation the world is now awaiting, we pause to look once more into the circle of his immediate family.

Yesterday we saw Their Majesties at their brilliant wedding in April of 1923. To-day we show another picture taken on that occasion, though the bride, as soon to be crowned as Britain's Queen, does not grace the occasion. It is a family group of the then Royal Family, headed by the late beloved King George V and Queen Mary, the Queen Mother, gathered as they were for Princess Mary, the only eldest son. Four stalwart sons are there as well as Princess Mary, now the Princess Royal who herself had wedded a so-called commoner only a few months ealrier. It is one of the few group pictures which show the House of Windsor, together in its entirety and the wedding of the Duke of York was notable if even for the fact that it brought all members of the family together. It often the call of empire has sent one or more of this family into the four corners of earth when personal desire would rather have taken them to the family fireside.

The duke was soon to leave on his honeymoon, spent first at Polsden Lacy near Dorking, later at Glamis in Scotland,before he and his bride returned to set up their abode at White Lodge, Richmond Park. They returned to enter into the service of their King, a service they then marks a stepping stone in the career of King George VI.

TEN CENTS A DANCE
CHAPTER FIVE

As she climbed the stairs to Loiusland that night, Anne felt depressed, perplexed, and low in her mind. Every beginning, she reflected, for a professional- entertainer. The difficult scene with David had settled nothing.

For two years, the years he had loved her, she had been uncertain; but this afternoon he had refused to believe that at last she was sure, that her answer was and would be—no.

"Thanks for so long, Anne", he had said over and over, wretchedly, shakenly. "For so long you've been wavering, for so long I've hoped that at any moment . . . I can't, I don't believe that all at once, for no reason, you've changed. You can't have changed so."

They had been sealed on the divan in the studio; David had pulled her there before. Now, with his face to face, she had seen his pain and misery. She could not answer her steady question.

"I've not changed, David, dear," she had tried to explain. "Only I know now that I've felt this way all along. Liking, but not—not—being loving you. I—do like you so much. Are you understand, David? Can't you see?"

"I see that I frightened you. I could kick myself for a fool for frightening you, Anne. But this can't be the end of it, honey; it can't be the end."

His eyes had implored her to say that it was the truth. Steadily, her own eyes full of tears, she had replied that it was the truth. Always he had asked if there were another man, only another man, to him, could explain the situation.

Anne sighed deeply and stepped into Loiusland.

The dance hall was alive with color, with sound, with motion. Lights from bulbs shaded by crepe-paper flowers shone on gilt columns and pink walls tinted with. Crepe-paper sprays of lotus blossoms festooned the balconies above. Around a big, square, empty floor little tables arranged in striped pink lines marched like an army. Gilt chairs were pulled invitingly close.

At one end of the room, beneath a round yellow moon, the Happy Hours Boys, six of them, all with polished hair and gleaming teeth, tuned up, with an occasional burst of jazz to endorse. The piano player's cigarette in mouth, investigated ex, experimentally the notes of a new song.

Conrad Smith, the manager of Loiusland, stood by, watching. He was the manager of a dance hall, and his own dancing days had long been over. Conrad, called Con by everyone, was fat, amiable and wise and had what he fancied to be a rather nice taste in dress. At the moment his plump body was encased in dinner clothes, which he wore with a soft shirt. He saw Anne, waved, and crossed the floor to meet her. Something about her, he murmured affably, glancing at the bag she carried. It did not occur to him to relieve her of the burden. Together they walked toward the dressing room, Anne offering suggestion and advice.

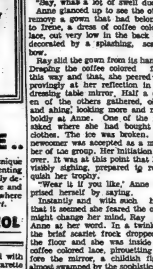
He paused once and said, grinning, "I see you've made a hit with the boss."

She flushed.

"Those things get around," he informed her.

"Are you talking about Mr. Greene?"

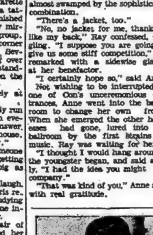
"None other," said Con cheerfully. "Dick turned up this afternoon, first time I'd seen him in weeks, announced he'd met a girl that was going to work for us and that he was to give you everything your little heart desired short of the hall itself."



"I don't want special favors," Anne began, annoyed. Conscious of the fat man's surprised curiosity, she added lifelessly, "That was nice of Mr. Greene."

"Nice fellow, Dick." Con mumbled, embarrassed, "It occurs to me that he might think I had been shooting off my mouth a little." He paused, and then added hurriedly from me." Anne promised.

They reached the dressing room.



Without troubling to knock, Con pushed into the room where a dozen girls, clad in wispy chemises, were pelting on stockings, lightening eyebrows or slipping into dance frocks. Two or three squealed mechanically at the opening and scrambled for kimonos. The majority unembarrassedly continued their toilettes.

Similarly unembarrassed, Conrad made the introductions. Sunny, Alicia, Jean, Maxie, Billie. He used only first names, and Anne, too, was only Anne. She did not mind. She had decided, almost at once that she liked Con. She was sure she liked the other girls. They seemed strangely stiff and unfriendly.

"No, it wasn't." Ray protested. She added with a shy little rush, "I like you a lot."

"And I like you."

Ensnared of her new friend, Ray twined thin, soft arms about the girl's waist and together the two strolled toward the ballroom. Feeling awkward and shy, Anne was acknowledging the close companionship. She was afraid of unpopularity for Ray. Instead, it was so.

"You'll wow 'em." declared Ray and added eagerly: "Everybody feels funny their first night. But the men will like you. I'll see to that. You watch how."

She opened the ballroom door.

RICHARD BREAKS A PROMISE

CHAPTER SIX

The ballroom was a blaze of sound and color. The orchestra was in full blast. A few couples were already revolving upon the polished floor. Anne, with Ray, and the girls still remained at their tables, powdering their noses and generally expectantly toward the orchestra and toward the door. Every minute brought in fresh customers from the street. Ann realized in the doorway of the ballroom, addressed hurriedly:

"I'm going to ask Con if we can't have our tables next to each other. I may be able to throw some business your way. Don't worry, I'll know you. You'll click by yourself eventually. Ray, I'll be one of your regulars, it's rough going."

Immediately after, before Anne could question her, Ray had sped across the floor toward Conrad, the girls following. Anne, left alone, was streaming like banners. A moment later Ray returned, beckoning and declaring that it was all right and that she and Anne had the best tables right by the door, "or would get them "coming and going".

Last evening members of the Presto Musical club were guests of the Association of Teachers and Instructors of the Deaf at the O. S. D., the occasion presenting an evening of delightful musical entertainment. Songs, piano music in solo, duo and quartet form, and vocal solos, music expressive of every musical mood entranced the guests with the splendid selections which has come to look upon this evening with the Presto Club as one of the most enjoyable in the program of the Association.

The auditorium of the school presented a charming appearance with the background of beautiful evergreens, pink glowing red tulips. Easy chairs and floor lamps were grouped about, giving more the appearance of a hospitable living room rather than a school hall.

On behalf of the Association, Mr. Arthur Ackerman welcomed the members of the Club and introduced their president, Mrs. W. N. Hurst, who introduced the pianiste, who had always given that organization so much of her invitation of the teachers to hold a meeting at the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Program

A varied and well arranged program was then prepared by the Club among whose members are outstanding artists in all phases of musical attainment, and the charm of the members and the skill with which they have executed parts, and sincere praise of all present who were reluctant to have the program come to an end. Miss Alec Gilmour acted as accompanist for the vocal numbers and violin solos, in her usual masterly style.

The appreciation of the Association was ably expressed by Mr. Arthur Clare and Mr. W. J. Morrison, superintendent of the School, spoke of the great pleasure it gave the teachers to welcome the Musical Club and all visitors at any time.

Delicious refreshments were served, many of the efficient lady assistants being senior girls of the School who carried out their duties very graciously, assisted by the teachers.

Mr. S. M. Anglin thanked the hosts and hostesses for the hospitality extended to them, at the conclusion of the evening.

30,000 ATTEND RED CROSS HOME NURSING SERVICE

As a service having the potential value of reaching most favourably upon the health of the people of Canada, the Red Cross today published the organization and progress of its courses in Home Nursing by means of the home study method already received practical instruction, on this subject.

The courses were initiated in 1931, and the enrolment numbers from thousands of Canadian women in all walks of life for accurate and practical knowledge on how to care for their families during illness, how to detect symptoms of disease, how to prevent the spread of infection, how to keep babies and children should be cared for to insure their health, how to advise their families during illness, how to give first aid for wounds, how to keep their families and many other "hows".

The home nursing course of the Red Cross is designed to answer these and many other questions; not only answers them clearly through practical demonstrations made by graduate nurses, doctors and dietitians, to show how a little scientific knowledge can bring comfort into a sick room, how ordinary household appliances can be substituted for hospital apparatus to ease a patient in bed, how a patient can be put in bed "bath without fear of a "chill" and how many other of the simpler duties of the nurse can be performed by women in caring for the sick members of their families during illness' elements and in carrying out intelligently the orders of the physician when a nurse is not available.

As a foundation for this instruction, an authoritative Manual for Home Nursing Classes has been prepared. It is written for popular use and contains the most reliable and appropriate information available upon Home Nursing and Home Hygiene, designed particularly for the needs of mothers in the care of infants and children.

The course itself consists of twelve lecture demonstrations, eight of which are given by graduate nurses, three by doctors, and one by a graduate dietitian, all of whose services are given gratuitously.

Such services as maintained by the Red Cross and to help finance its program the annual drive for funds begins here on April 26th.

SHANNONVILLE W. A.

On Thursday evening, April 8th, the W. A. of Shannonville United Church put on a pie social in the church hall which was very tastefully decorated in various colors. The first number on the program was a play "Ladies' Aid Beauty Parlor" in Shadows. The W. A. president, Mrs. Sam Elliott, enumerated some of the past activities of the Society and announced the opening of the new parlor. The following took the parts of the different characters:—

Operator—Miss Helen Clark.
Barber—Mrs. Bobbitt—Mrs. Orval Stratton.
Bobbed Haired Girl — Mrs. Ross Shelter.
Miss Cools—Mrs. W. D. Robertson.
Mrs. Frye—Mrs. G. Asselstine.
Mrs. Bump—Henry Winn.
Mr. Lee—Harvey Shelter.
Mother and son with big ears — Mrs. A. Osborne and Gerald Stratton.
Miss Flap—Mrs. Harvey Shelter.
Mrs. Addo—Wallace Robertson.
rM. Puff—Harry Murphy.

Pastor—Roy Asselstine.

The 14 who took part finished the play by all singing "Tell the Ladies' Aid" a song with 4 verses and chorus, and Will Leitch and Wallace Robertson gave several violin and guitar selections. Bill Wandby favored with a piano solo and encore. We had with us Mr. Jos Gow of Plainfield whose songs always delight any audience. Mr. Gow very kindly complimented their taking part in the shadow play saying it was the best he had ever seen in shadows. Mrs. H. Sine played the piano accompaniment for singing. Cows sang, his last selection being a sacred solo preceded the singing of the National Anthem.

Sandwiches, pie and coffee were served in abundance. The proceeds of the evening amounted to thirty seven dollars ($37) and the members of the W. A. are much pleased with the success of their efforts.

AT THE BELLE
Romantic Trio Star in "Love Is News"

The streamline, modern comedy of a private detective whose eyes kisses splash all over the front pages and whose adventures sell extra editions, with Tyrone Power, sensational film discovery of "Lloyds of London," lovely Loretta Young and Don Ameche fresh from his triumph with Sonja Henie in "One in a Million," as the thrilling three, score stepping out in a fast-moving, high-stepping gripping romance, will meet unprurious acclamation when the Twentieth Century-Fox picture, "Love is News" will be presented at the Belle tonight and Thursday, matinee daily.

Getting a quick-fire, hilarious pace at the very start, Director Gregory La Cava has produced a fast and different comedy romance of scandal-seeking newspapers and headline-dodging heiresses that brings new laurels to the screen's latest, which features Slim Summerville, Dudley Diggs, Walter Catlett, George Sanders, Jane Darwell, Stepin Fetchit and Pauline Moore.

Outstanding is the brilliant work in "Lloyds of London," Tyrone Power plays a thrilling lead opposite lovely Loretta Young, who brings a new grace to a dignity and loveliness distinctly different, with Don Ameche, outstanding in a vigorously exciting characterization.

Because he has just tricked her into a fake interview story, heiress Loretta Young swears revenge on Tyrone Power, so-called "scandal sheet" ace in the Daily Express (managing editor: Don Ameche.) Determined that he shall know just how it feels to be a newspaper "front-page-headline," and as little privacy as he allowed her, Loretta announces to the paper that she is engaged to Slim Summerville, and that she has presented him with a million dollars.

In a flash the former newsgatherer is news himself and Tyrone becomes the target of a thousand klnotypes and twice as many telephoto shots. To prove Loretta to admit the hoax, he chases her out to the country only to find himself in an adjoining cell when they are arrested for speeding.

Riotously exciting and amusing, the story ascends to a stirring, madcap climax in which the widely publicized love interest is disclosed truth as the modern pair find themselves truly in love.

Excellent Features

Another excellent varied group of features have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including the Belle Latest News Flashes, a funny all-star comedy "Parlor, Bed and Pie," and "Big Game Hunt," a very interesting Treasure Chest Adventure. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.15. The feature attraction "Love is News" starts daily at 3.00, 7.50 and 9.50 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL
"Her Husband's Secretary" and "Off to the Races"

Three excellent young players—all of whom seem to be getting along rapidly in filmdom—are featured equally in "Her Husband's Secretary," the first picture which comes to the Capitol on Wednesday with Jack Oakie, Mary Carlisle and "Off to the Races."

This picture is said to be very far from the typical "society" thing," where the three main figures all revolve and debate the circumstances they find themselves in—and don't get anywhere after all the talk.

They very definitely get somewhere, though it takes a nerve-wrecking forest fire to find them all in a spot where a decision must be reached as to which of the two girls shall have Warren. You may be sure the right one gets him.

Jack Oakie is no dreamy philosopher, mooning about the Hamlet and wondering what to do. Quite the contrary—he's a structural steel-worker when you first meet him, making the acquaintance of Jean from a girder which he is riding 10 stories above the street.

There's plenty of excitement and fun in this rapid-fire comedy about "Her Husband's Secretary."

"OFF TO THE RACES"

Hang on tight! That family's in again!

This time, however, it's not a private flight, for the Jones Family, in "Off to the Races," which comes to the Capitol on Wednesday, is best with a new complication—Slim Summerville's horse has been moved in!

The fourth Jones film in the popular series featuring the adventures of a typical American family rotates the family's head this time to Slim Jones family one of the country's fastest race horses. Ned Sparks, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Kenneth Howell, George Ernest, Marcia Mae Jones, Guinn Williams, Billy Mahan—and adds, as a new part Granville Bates opposite Shirley Deane, personable young Russel Gleason.

When Slim Summerville shows up with a mean-tempered little bundle of horse, which seems to be all appetite, the even tenor of the Jones life is thrown into a turmoil. Mr. Russell Gleason and Shirley Deane find their romance complicated by circumstances beyond their control.

Extensive War Program Being Enacted Over England

PROTECT LONDON

Trenton, April 13 (Special)—Trenton's annual Vimy Night was observed by a record gathering of Branch 110 of the Canadian Legion on Friday night, Ben Joyce, President of the local organization acted as chairman of the evening and conducted a one minute silence. Treasurers C. M. Harrison announced that the branch has $775 on hand and a recent show netted $450.00 for Memorial purposes. It was decided, that the ex-service men, will parade to Grace United Church on Sunday, May 9th, for Coronation service and be represented at the Ring Street Church on May 12th, for a similar ceremony. Three new comrades were accepted, W. George Spencer, B.A., Dr. VanLaven of Consecon, Ed Jackson. A letter of thanks from the Canadian Memorial at Vimy Ridge was presented to the branch by Past-President L. D. Foster. Comrade Connell issued an invitation to attend a smoker 9 nine meetings.

A most educational address on "Activities of the Royal Air Force" was given by Flight Lieutenant A. Wells, veteran pilot, who has recently returned from England to the R.A.F. Reserve. Under the extensive war program, that Great Britain is sponsoring for a five year period, he said, new aeroplane factories are being erected throughout the country. Every person in Britain are producing the fastest machine known, he stated, and they are the first line of defence in the British service. In the future, he said, the air will be the battle ground of war and enemy ships will fly over a city at 30,000 feet and drop death dealing gas bombs. An aircraft at four miles altitude is invisible and audible and therefore cannot stop them. Should a country strike at England such bombers all she can do is to return with a counter attack. The city of London is prepared for such a raid. Every one minute and a half after an opposing nation's aircraft is sighted off the coast, by an efficient volunteer observance corp consisting of all ranks and all ages, the alarm is sounded all along the south coast.

Informs London

Immediately after an observer sights approaching aircraft he climbs a telephone pole and informs London headquarters. From the time the enemy aircraft crosses the coast it is recorded by a lighting system. Every city in London alone can equip themselves with masks in time of gas raids. At present the R.A.F. are experimenting with a new apeon, that will surround a city or like important area with a smoke screen, that will surround a city or like important area with a smoke screen, that will obscure the vision of the enemy aircraft. Winnipeg Monarchs Tie Series Of Memorial Cup Finals Scoring 6-5 Victory Over Redmen

3 MAJORS GIVEN

Monarch Rap Home Three Goals in Less Than Four Minutes

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY

Toronto, Apr. 13 (CP)—Professionals and senior amateurs have moved Toronto hockey fans to fever pitch this season, but it took the juniors to stand 'em in the aisles—drive 'em to a point of hysteria. There's no telling what might happen at Maple Leaf Gardens where two great clubs are battling for the Memorial Cup.

For the second time in as many playoff games there was bedlam at Canada's biggest palace last night as Winnipeg Monarchs strengthened western hopes by edging out Copper Cliff Redmen 6-5 in a hectic overtime fixture. The teams battled 60 minutes before the second of a best-of-five game series was decided and the result left the contenders all square.

It was a tough game to lose but so was Saturday night's contest when the Reds jolted squad after squad in a three-goal lead erased in the dying minutes to enable Redmen to force second to a 4-3 decision. Breaks will likely decide which of two mighty fine clubs will be named Dominion junior champions.

Play Again Wednesday.

The boys go at it again tomorrow night, and even when a fellow can pick the winner will find plenty willing to bet on the other side. The big Monarch drive that tied them twice last night, once in overtime, but the desperate Monarchs fought out each time and crossed the finish line in front.

When husky Jack Fox drove home what proved to be the winning goal past Jack Forbes at 2:07 of the second period, the crowd of 8,675 fans showered the ice with programs, peanuts and paper cups. Hundreds of hats went high in the air and most of the owners wrestled little whitecaps they retrieved their headgear.

Both teams were at full strength when the winning counter was scored but Monarchs made their big stand in the second period, scoring three goals in two minutes and 20 seconds as Redmen were plagued with penalties. They held a one-man advantage during the spurge.

Three Majors Given.

Monarchs were two goals down when Jack Shewchuck and Alf Pike staged a wrestling match. Pike was on top and received a slight cut on the head as Roy Heximer skated into the mixup and cracked the Redmen centre with his stick. Shewchuck, Pike and Heximer were given major penalties and Percy Perry, Redmen defenceman, was banished for two minutes.

Although Redmen had three in the penalty box they never played with less than three men and were not tender. due to the delayed penalty rule. But Winnipeg was quick to take to-order for the short-passing Monarchs and when McCready, Fox and Dick Kowcinak rapped goals past little Mel Albright in quick order.

Alf Webster who nicked Redmen's first two goals in a faster 20 minutes the count for his team before the second session ended. He made a play for Winnipeg ace and the fleet winger scored. Heximer gave Redmen an advantage early in the third but McCready forced the game into overtime with his second goal of the night.

Fox Scores Winner.

After a scoreless first overtime session, Red Hamill, whose goal in extra play gave the young miners the nod in the first game, backhanded one past goalie Zeke Forbes, with but 2 seconds ticked off in the second overtime span. It looked like two straight for Redmen but such was not to be.

Less than two minutes later McCready let a three-way rush into Redmen's area, Kowcinak scoring on a pass from Fox. Monarchs were on the aggressive and past the half-way mark Fox fired the deciding goal past Albright, knocking the netminder over as he crashed into him after the shot.

Content to wait for breaks most of the way, Monarchs made the offensive and sent four forwards and Shewchuck into the fray. But they did not get a good scoring chance as the boys from Manitoba's captain checked like madmen in the centre ice zone.

SCHOOL LOOP IN LACROSSE TO BE FORMED IN CITY

Will Play Spring League With Old Timers Assisting Youngsters

AGE LIMIT MADE

Likely Intermediate Team Will Play in Lake Shore Group

Keen enthusiasm was shown towards the establishment of lacrosse in Belleville when over thirty students representing practically every junior school and the Collegiate in the city, answered a hurried call to the Y.M.C.A. last evening, when tentative plans towards the sponsoring of Canada's national summer pastime were drafted and completed, after entertaining the feeling of the meeting it was decided to eventually organize the Belleville Lacrosse Association and ultimately affiliate with the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association.

A school lacrosse league will be formed in Belleville, with Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra, Queen Victoria, Holy Cross, Albert and King George Schools in the junior schools plus a team of players from the Belleville Collegiate, all to be under the age of 16 years, was suggested and will be adopted. William Fry, mentor of the Collegiate team in Belleville, will represent the body at the town and was instructed to contact the O.A.L.A. relative to the purchase of the necessary sticks to be obtained, are to be placed at the disposal of the various schools and the spring school lacrosse league organized in Belleville. The meeting was impromptu, but will meet to-night, when a draft and more fully on Friday night at the "Y".

Interest in Schools

Mr. George Laughlin, physical instructor at the Belleville Collegiate and a former lacrosse star in Ontario, was present and materially assisted the meeting with his helpful suggestions. "In order to maintain the future of lacrosse in a community you must first stimulate interest in the junior school and teen-aged boys. The only way to interest that game is to commence in your public schools and later carry that work into your playgrounds," declared Laughlin. "The national summer game I believe should be fostered by the school of the game," stated Mr. Laughlin in addressing the meeting. He also added that throughout the Niagara Peninsula where he was more prominently identified with the game, sponsors deemed it advisable to form a league for juniors in the lacrosse and not permit them to play box lacrosse during the period of 16 years. Otherwise, he said there are sufficient players with which to organize, and he would coach the boys in the schools and "build a championship team on the foundation," added Mr. Laughlin. Present at the meeting were Jack Sandwell, Bert Coughlin, Ted Louis, two members of the champion Belleville Intermediate team, who have played lacrosse and both agreed to assist in the coaching of the local youngsters.

At the suggestion of Mr. Fry the meeting decided to continue by organizing the Belleville Lacrosse Association at the next meeting to be held Friday night and which business men and others interested, will be sponsoring of the game in Belleville are cordially invited to attend. In the meantime Mr. Fry will procure definite information regarding the quality and price of boys' lacrosse sticks and immediate action taken regarding the organizing of a Senior league within the schools of Belleville.

BAER AND LEVINSKY IN LINE FOR BIG DOUGH

London, Apr. 13 (AP)—Maxie Baer and King Levinsky, contender whom he was previously famed for judgment, are beginning to look like the two smart boys of pugilism.

At the moment they are mostly about to tap the rich vein of British gold that has been here all along for United States heavyweight to discover.

Baer has to pocket $22,500 tax exempt for what some observers consider an easy work-out Thursday night against the new British champion, Tommy Farr. Levinsky is believed to be guaranteed another big sum for fighting Irish Jack Doyle, rated a fair crooner, but a poor fighter.

Harringay interests already have sold 60,000 of tickets for Thursday's Baer-Farr fight. Baer has been established as favorite at odds of 3 to 1. If he wins, he'll drag down a rather nice purse next month for fighting Walter Neusel, the German heavyweight.

CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK

OLD and NEW

By Geo. H. Carver

Lester Patrick's mighty men of Manhattan, led by the youthful Neil Colville plus a broken jaw, met the haughty Rangers of Detroit with their own smashing lacrosse on Sunday evening and by virtue of a sustained attack, and the zen to "whittle the Redwings down to their own size" pulled out ahead in the current Stanley Cup series 3 to 2. And to an oldie going Mister Kerr, who does a spot of goal-keeping between intermissions, for the Canadiens, turned in another sparkling performance to add to his already imposing array of cup play shut-outs.

The checks were down and the chips were up, as the Ranger ladies met the Redwings and slugged it out toe-to-toe with the droppeddowners from the Motor City . . . And to go along with Mister Kerr, who does a spot of goal-keeping between intermissions, for the Canadiens, turned in another sparkling performance to add to his already imposing array of cup play shut-outs.

The checks were down and the chips were up, as the Ranger ladies met the Redwings and slugged it out toe-to-toe with the droppeddowners from the Motor City . . . And to go along with Mister Kerr, who does a spot of goal-keeping between intermissions, for the game of Prait glorying in the flatic name of Sweeney Schriner slug with the Redwing huskies, and drew a referee's decision. . . . Prait on all counts and nearly walked away from none. . . . The win again established the Manhattanites from the Big Town as favorites to wins home with the battered mug.

Bob Feller, Cleveland giant-killer whose baffling delivery and lightspeed have been the terror of Giants swinging like a beer-sign, discovered last night, the veteran lineman for whom his terrific speed held no terrors. The other day, Jim Thorpe, who's been with the Little Rock Travellers, swung at Feller's fast ball and the hard ball soared to unheard of heights for a home run, while three Travellers who had been packed on the sacks telling stories to the opposition ambled homewards to shut out the Indians by a 5-0 count . . . That ever thing.

These "hot" Yankees lived up to their name the other day down among the Southern belles . . . Most of the gang was sitting along the sidelines basking in the sun at the bench-warming, while his mates were pounding the offerings of a brace of opposing hurlers. . . . The sun was warm, and so were the Yanks . . . The ball game looked like . . . His head dropped and reached comfortably somewhere in the regions of his nose. . . . Lower dropped his head, his chin slipped and then fell in his lap. . . . The sun shone down in all its southern brilliance, causing perspiration to glisten sparkls and glalen. . . . Then a thin little smoke appeared from the Yankee lap. . . . A roar, then a yell, and the crumbling figure leaped to his feet and indulged in what looked to be a cross between a Highland Fling, Virginia Reel, Hawaiian war-dance and Harlem truckin'. . . . The sun had set fire to the pants, the apes and ignited the Yankee pants.

Here's one for the book. . . . You don't have to believe it but here is as it was told to us. . . . On Aug. 15, 1927 Tony Lo Bianco was a small town in Pennsylvania, slipped his opponent a Mickey Finn, a little over two hours, which according to Tony's calculations is just three per sixty' seconds. . . . Total elapsed time was 2 hours, 19 minutes. Then the referee extended the bout because cameras wanted to take pictures of the knock-out and Tony's admission. . . . The apples were pared and Tony grabbed them and rammed them in his mouth for two hours. . . . In the meantime the next meeting had disappeared down the De Lauretis Napoleon guillotine. . . . That's all . . . As an appetizer for his apple session Tony had consumed six soft-boiled eggs, a pound of ham, a half package of cereal, three cups of coffee and a quart of wine.

Old Peter Piper will took his grey beard inside his track shorts and lined up with the starters in the Boston Marathon on April 19th, in spite his eighty-three years. . . . At 68, Pete came in twenty-sixth after starting a minute behind the gun. . . . And he led many of the youngsters to the wire. . . . Four years ago he finished 40th. . . . "When I was on my way home in my car" he grinned, "I met a lot of them coming back. . . . That's the liner made his best showing in 1906 when he finished 3rd, completing the course in 3 hours, 4 minutes.

SMITH AND KELLY TO BE IN LINEUP OF THE RED WINGS

WINGS MUST WIN . .

Patrick Allows His Team to Rest And Told Not to Worry

Detroit, Apr. 13 (CP) — Normie Smith, leading goalie of the National Hockey League, returns to the Detroit Red Wings nets tonight as the Wings meet the mighty New York Rangers in the fourth game of the best three-of-five series for the Stanley Cup and the world hockey championship now resting in Detroit.

Smith, out with the flu for two games and part of a third in the Chicago-Wings series, comes back to the wars along with Pete Kelly, injured in the first New York game, to round out a team of "regulars", Coach Jack Adams, announcing he would not use his two rookies, Gaye Stewart and Johnny Sherf, said they had already done yeoman playoff duty but the greater experience of the veterans would bolster the morale of a team that can't lose and retain the cup.

Rangers, leading 2-1 in games by virtue of Sunday night's 1-0 win and Tuesday night's home ice 5-3 win, cup-round game, appeared optimistic over the outcome of the two matches. Adams, however, differed. "Tonight is another night," declared smiling Jack. "We'll count matters and win in a fifth game on Thursday."

Rangers Not Worrying.

"We have nothing to worry about," said Lesley Patrick, New York manager. "We've been in seven playoff games and I'm selling them the idea they're veterans now."

While the Detroiters went through a light skating drill yesterday Patrick called his men to rest after a conference on strategy. He said the only change would be Alex Shibicky for Coulter who had a gashed cheek but Lester feared this would not hinder the husky Winnipegger.

Adams dismissed Neil Colville's fast New York attack and the Rangers' the edge as a "cheap" marker. "We won't give them anything to score such goals," he declared. "Our defence will play a cautious game and will not rush in to help the puck chase Rangers to get a solid shot at the net."

Montreal Royals To Move Out of Second Division

By D. A. E. MacDONALD

Montreal, Apr. 14 (CP)—A new manager—and for the most part a new team—will carry the hopes of Montreal Royals in the International-Pacific Baseball League this season.

The club has been handed in the second division last season after winning the pennant in 1935. The roster has been drastically revised and much is expected of "the Rab", who won 18 pennant races in the New York-Pennsylvania League last season. He will come to the front ready been spenod and will be another Pittsburgh Pirate.

Built Around Holdovers.

Except for the pitching staff, more or less intact, the club will be built around three holdovers, shortstop Ben Sankey and outfielders Gus Dugas and Dave Harris. Most of the replacements will come from the major league teams, New York Yankees and Pittsburgh Pirates.

When the Yankees needed outfield replacements badly last fall on the Pacific Coast, Montreal Royals came to the rescue with the man they needed, Joe Gallagher. Another Yankee "import" having been with Newark last season. Dunlap, hit Smith Duke and Ellis Kinder, both last year and had almost as good an average the year previous in leagues of lower classification.

Two Hurlers From Pirates.

Pittsburgh Pirates have turned over two young pitchers, Russ Bauers, a southpaw, and Julian Wasco, following an agreement reached between the two clubs during the winter. Royals are also expecting to get an outfielder from the Pirates and they hope it will be Jack Dickshot, batting star with Buffalo last season, but this is not definite yet. Royals first baseman Bernie Cosbie, who was property of Boston Red Sox, has been obtained by the Royals from other sources. They drafted third baseman Joe Benning from Memphis Chicks and the Royals think they have in him a player who can bring the team into the park with his stick work as well as his glass-eating ability. As a hobby, Benning eats electric light bulbs.

At the minor league convention here last December, Royals bought second-baseman Sammy Bell from Albany for cash. Then they signed catcher Tex Chandler as a free agent and obtained Wally Stephenson, another smart receiver from the Cubs, on option.

KILREA SUBDUED

Even Stanley Cup play-off games do not feature hockey and only hockey as this picture would indicate. Although game between Detroit Red Wings and New York Rangers was a no-holds affair, the players found ways and means of staging impromptu side shows. The photo above brawl No. 1, which started when someone gave someone else the business as a player in 1922, Mr. Woodley remarked as the announcement of the game was read from the sidelines until 1925, when he joined the mighty staff of the Bay of Quinte Electric Valley transmission leagues, graduating to the C.O.B.L. in 1928. He remained in the Central League over the next few years, and in 1932 played one hot function. From 1933 to the close of last season "Twig" Woodley was secretary of the "provincial umpire" of the Central League.

Naturally the 13 years spent behind the catcher and umpiring in baseball gave Mr. Woodley a wonderful insight of the game, aside from his knowledge gained as a player. He is now in his hockey stick. Heller has the same ideas on baseball, but, like Kilrea, his urge is being subdued in the general scuffle.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Harold G. "Twig" Woodley, veteran Belleville umpire and manipulator of the indicator, recently announced his retirement from the ranks of the order of "blind Toms." For the past 12 years "Twig" Woodley has been engaged annually as an arbiter throughout the Central and Eastern Ontario districts. Mr. Woodley has forsaken the art of "guessing 'em" and will confine his baseball activities to coaching the Belleville Kiwanis Juniors, business manager Kiwanian Bill Cook completed arrangements to have Mr. Woodley to coach the Kiwani juniors and under his sole tutoring will the team be chosen and operated throughout the coming season.

"Twig" Woodley is been a close student of baseball and enjoys a well-deserved reprieve in the diamond game. After graduation as one of Cobourg Collegiate Institute students from old No. 5 school, "Twig" next popped up in Cobourg Senior ball, and from there played ball with the Summer Town team until late in 1925, when he removed home to confine his diamond activities to playing baseball with the Belleville in the old Trent Valley League. Retiring from active service on the diamond as a player in 1932, Mr. Woodley remained as an interested spectator of the game from the sidelines until 1935, when he joined the umpiring staff of the Bay of Quinte Electric Valley transmission leagues, graduating to the C.O.B.L. in 1928. He remained in the Central League over the next few years, and in 1932 played one hot function. The O.B.B.L. has been given more free publicity through the medium of the Ven Bishop Bacon than it could purchase over a period of years. Why the Niagara Peninsula Baldwin refer to the Central League as being responsible for Bishop's ministerial career is not only hard to understand, but ridiculous. There have been a few and always will be better hurlers in the O.B.B.L. than Bishop will ever hope to be.

The Peterborough Baseball Club organized the other evening and named Fred Calihan, former Western Canada baseball member, as manager of the 1937 entry in the O.B.B.L. Calihan comes out highly recommended as a baseball executive and many local users of that much-needed fight (a fight without the help of old) Inspector Peles. Senior baseball will be dished up in Peterboro at "ten bits" a throw, with the Duke of Kent Memorial Park the middlings until 1925, when he joined the mighty staff of the Bay of Quinte Electric Valley transmission leagues, graduating to the C.O.B.L. in 1928. He remained in the Central League over the next few years, and in 1932 played one hot function. In previous years efforts to promote and foster lacrosse in Peterboro have been tried with indifferent results in the past, however, this year, Mr. Geo. Laughlin, athletic instructor at the Collegiate Institute, has the nail firmly on the head, when he announced at the Y.M.C.A. meeting recently, that the only way to introduce lacrosse and assure its future was through the medium of our public schools. Mr. Laughlin's advice is good, but into practice, some years ago we suggested the same thing in regards to baseball, and today at that time the complete annihilation of that game unless it was revived in our schools. Like with us today, so it looks like in Peterboro, lacrosse is going to get its long-awaited break in Belleville and

DAILY SHORT STORY

A Disturbed Decision

By A. W. Peach

Sometimes it seems as if into our moments of supreme happiness fate dropped a regret or disaster that immediately comes pretty near to dissolving that happiness. So it seemed to Richard Avery when he read and re-read the letter upon his desk.

The preceding evening he had gone to the little cottage at the end of the broad street where Avery Wells lived with her pleasant-faced mother, and there, in the homelike quiet of the cottage living room, he had looked into Avery's dark eyes and asked the question as old as he could, which she had answered in a whisper.

He had spent most of the night dreaming in his room, building castles. He loved the village, and the village people trusted him. His future did not promise glory and gold, but it did promise happiness with Avery to share it with him. And now, from beyond the grave, Fate had reached ingeniously to spoil a dream he could not share.

March turned to the letter. It was from a New York Philadelphia. It said in precise phrases that Mabel Skinner had died, that in his will a bequest of $100,000 was made to Miss Avery Wells.

He knew that as far as he was concerned two things were plain; he could not marry Avery if she accepted this money bequeathed to her by his old and bitter rival; yet that sum of money meant for her and her mother independence and comfort, the realization of their long years of severe and frugal living.

One thing he was sure of: if Avery knew how he felt she would not accept the bequest. March reasoned, "I cannot ask her to give the fortune up; and Skinner knew I would not. Funny, how a dead man in his grave can stand up like a living."

Under the stress of his suffering memories, his thinking became a bit hazy, but he came to a decision. He heard the front door slamming, the hearty greetings as men came into the post office below him; faint as they were they were clear enough to make him think of the wholesome, friendly life of his village. With the thought came his decision. A friend in a northern city had written to him repeatedly to join him where opportunity was rich and money ready. He would go, refuse to assume charge of the fund and shut the door quietly but firmly in his little house of dreams.

A week passed. He did not see Avery, and pleaded as an excuse that he was very busy. He was not the grievous business of slowly murdering all the kindly impulses to the home of his boyhood and his manhood.

Sometimes he was doubtful of the wisdom of his purpose, at times when his great longing for Avery broke through the barriers his judgment had set, at times when his dream castles were all bright-ly on the hills that they seemed almost real. But ever and anon he returned once more to his decision.

Then came the incident. It clinched the matter. A friend had come in his voice a-thrill with the news. "Uncle Abe Wells died last night, early. I've heard Avery left every $100,000 Wells made. Some start! You never should think it would. And, say, Avery is going to accept it."

T-stopped in to get her to sing at the church fair, and she told me about it—said she would. She was happy as a lark over it." His friend's face grew sober. "I suppose this will make a little difference with you, but not serious."

"Serious!" March laughed bitterly, his mind whirling at the thought of her acceptance. He had hoped in a dim way she would refuse the money. "Serious! No, except I'm going to leave the village for good!"

The realization dawning upon him that he had given himself away under the strain, he swore his friend to silence, and he heard him pounding down the stairs, muttering as he went.

He turned to his desk. Dusk came down over the village.

He did not hear Avery until she stood beside him.

Then she spoke, and the office seemed filled with pleasant music. "Dear, Ted swore to keep his word to you, but he came to me; said he would keep no such fool promise as he made you. I think I know all that is wrong. They wrote me of the money as Skinner told them to, that you were to have charge of it. They want me to have a few of what you think is mother's happiness said mine, and you were to come to me if I do take it. You see, I know. Why, I couldn't take it. I couldn't be happy with it. I love you, the village and the ones who have thrown from good. I couldn't touch a penny of it, because I love you. Can you see? see—"

He rose to his feet trembling. "But you accepted it!"

Her white teeth gleamde a bit in a smile. "For others! I'm going to turn every cent of it over to that hospital for crippled children, you know, the one we visited. That will nearly broke my heart—seeing them. I'm going to make his money forget its black past. Oh, dear, I simply could have you! I simply must! Take me and say—"

The door opened slightly, and Ted stuck his head in, gasped at what he saw and with the silence still softly, lingeringly, gently closed it.

COURTS LIKE BAZAARS

LAHORE, India— (CP) —Sir Douglas Young, Chief Justice of Lahore, wonders how courts in the province can arrive at correct decisions. "I have been in district courts which are more like bazaars than courts of justice," he said.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating supper, being stake under onions, and me said to pop, I tried to get Mr. and Mrs. Heves to come over for bridge game, this evening, Willyum, but it seems Maud Heves had a little accident so it's impossible for them to get over. She sprained her ankle without going so far as to brake it, ma said.

That's too bad for Maud and perfectly wonderful for me, another evening without bridge, pop said. And for Pete sake how did you know I didn't have anything important to do tonite? he said, and ma said. Well anyway they're not coming, so why cry into spilt milk?

As a matter of fact I have something important to do, pop said. As a matter of several facts I have a wholee of important things. I dont know whether to polish up my golf clubs, or manage my bald spot, or just read over some old letters, he said, and me said, As a matter of fact Maud couldn't of come over anyway, it seems her sister in law is leaving town on the eleven 15 train and Maud had the greatest contempt for her, but still she's her sister in law, so Maud was going to swallow her aversion and see her off at the station.

Well that's a shame, I mean at that rate she didn't need to sprain her ankle on my account after all, pop said, and ma said, I see you can say how very feeling for people with sprained ankles. Really, I felt so sorry for her that I promised we'd go over there and play if she can sit up, and she said she can. Do you think you can smoke your after dinner cigar on the way over, Willyum, they like it start early, she said.

It's a woman's world and I dont think anything about anything, pop said.

Meaning what was a use.

HEPBURN CALLS ON CROLL, ROEBUCK TO RESIGN

Two Cabinet Ministers Sent Communications; Croll Gives Up Post

Premier Will Administer Labor Department And Hon. Paul Leduc, Mines Minister, Will Act as Attorney General

GREAT ECONOMIC CRISIS SAYS PREMIER

Letter Calling For Resignation Mentions Regret at Necessity of Action—Hepburn "Unhappy at Parting of Ways"

Toronto, April 14—(CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn today dictated a letter calling for the resignations of Labor Minister David Croll and Attorney General Arthur W. Roebuck. Thus he made good his ultimatum of yesterday that he would have unity in his cabinet "or else."

The Premier calling on the Labor Minister and Attorney General to step out because of their apparent disagreement with him on his stand against committees for industrial organization's activity in the Oshawa General Motors strike, told his secretary to have the letter typed at once. He said he would not confer with Croll or Roebuck before the demand for their resignations was presented.

'No Turning Back' He Says

"There can be no turning back as far as I am concerned," said the Premier.

He said he has not decided on permanent appointments to fill the vacated portfolios. In the meantime he will administer the Labor Department, with Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines, as Acting Attorney General.

The Premier's letter:

"My dear colleague:

"It is with deep regret that I find myself in a position where it is necessary to ask your resignation as a member of the present administration. It is quite clear to me and all concerned that you are not in accord with the policy of the government in fighting against the inroads of the Lewis organization and communism in general.

Great Economic Crisis Faced

"To my way of thinking Ontario faces one of the greatest economic crises, and that for reason there must be solidarity and unanimity within our ranks.

"Needless to say, the decision I have arrived at is one that is causing me both grief and unhappiness, but I am determined to carry out the policy that I believe to be in the best interests of the people I was elected to serve.

"I deeply appreciate your loyalty up to this point and shall always remember our close and intimate ... tions, both in politics and in a social way and I ... happy indeed that we have arrived at the parting of the ways on a matter of policy.

"There is nothing personal in this matter and I hope that in the future I shall always enjoy your friendship as I have in the past."

VETERANS OPPOSE HEPBURN'S STAND; PASS RESOLUTION

Object to Recruiting of Comrades as Special Police

EFFICIENCY SCORED

Thompson Claims Union Demands Industrial Democracy

Oshawa, Ont., April 14.—(CP)—A resolution of protest against Premier Mitchell Hepburn's attitude in the Oshawa General Motors strike was approved today, when more than 1,000 men and women gathered in Memorial Park where war veterans attended services in memory of the fallen.

The veterans, members of the Welfare Automobile Workers of America which aided the strike at the General Motors of Canada plant here, pointed out that during the strike, 500 of them wearing Union badges, formed the "Legion of the Long Way to Tipperary" and "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall".

Mrs. Ada Kearney Long, the members of the Canadian Legion and the Ladies' Auxiliary joined in "Say Save the King". Hugh Thompson, organizer for John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, whose presence in Oshawa brought protests from Premier Hepburn and General Motors, joined in the singing.

Object to Recruiting

Veterans objected to their comrades being recruited as special police in case of disturbances on the picket lines. Mrs. Ada Kearney Long, of Toronto yesterday from Toronto veterans and Ladies' Auxiliary groups, sought by Premier Hepburn in case of emergency.

The resolution unanimously passed by the veterans said:

"We, hundred ex-service men, veterans of the Great War who are members of Oshawa Local Union, Canadian Automobile Workers of America, affiliated with the committee for industrial organization, under the leadership of John L. Lewis, do most vigorously protest against your enlistment of veterans of the Great War for the purpose of using old comrades who are now peacefully fighting in our midst as Labor men and free citizens of Canada, in the strike at the Oshawa plant of General Motors of Canada, Limited".

VOTE OF CENSURE MOVED IN HOUSE

Home Secretary Says England to Remain Strictly Neutral

London, April 14 (CP)—Clement Attlee, Labor leader, announced a vote of censure against the government in the House of Commons this afternoon "for its failure to protect its foreign subjects in respect to foodships bound for Bilbao and its acquiescence in a gross breach of international law" and "surrender of the rights of this country."

The government has refused to extend protection to foodships by three-mile limit of Spanish territorial waters, Attlee declared, when men attempting to enter Bilbao through the Insurgent blockade.

Ambassador Llelena

Pablo Ascarte Y. Florez the Spanish Ambassador, entered the lobby in the diplomatic gallery as Attlee announced the motion that: "This House, taking note of the statement of the Prime Minister of the (Bilbao) situation, deplores the failure of His Majesty's Government to give protection to merchant ships on their lawful occasions (Sic)."

He charged the government was "not in fact recognizing Franco as the Insurgent leader, and that "to support Franco is to encourage barbarism and to discourage law."

Says White Flag Hung Up

Attlee declared "thousands of starving women and children" were "deliberately holding:

"The greatest maritime country in the world has run up the white flag!"

Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, replying for the government, declared the cabinet had adopted a firm policy of refraining strictly from "all interference, whether direct or indirect, in the internal affairs of Spain."

The entry of Mrs. Faulkner and Mrs. Anderson in the Masters' Tournament created much interest as they were the only Canadians invited to take part. Such prom-

GENERAL CHAN PREDICTS WAR

States in Interview Conflict Will Come This Summer

Hollywood, April 14 (AP)— The man Chinese Know as General Chan turned his face today toward Europe and predicted war.

"It's coming this summer," said Bert Hall.

"Mussolini and the Italian legion will see France through in Spain. When the last bones were melted, there will stand the world's largest marching on the Russian Ukraine," Hall has been doing screen plays dashing them off in long hand with the careless ease that he used in fighting Japs in China and in Lafayette Escadrille.

"They can't avoid the war from coming. It will show, for one thing, that the Russian army's power is greatly exaggerated," he said.

FLESH IS SEARED WITH BLOW TORCH

Savage Lynching of Two Negroes is Investigated

Winona, Miss., Apr. 14 (AP)—The savage lynching of two negroes, their bodies seared with a blow torch to exact "confessions" to the killing of a white man, faced a two-fold investigation today even as the United States Congress considered legislation to curb such violence of such character.

Governor Hugh White ordered an inquiry when apprised of the killing of Roosevelt Townes and "Bootjack" Shelton last night by a Governor's Sunflower county deputy and Attorney-General Greg Cochran finished telling a Jackson farm conference that Mississippi had had but a lynching in fifteen months.

"This terrible thing will be immediately investigated by the grand jury," announced Circuit Judge John S. Allen, of Kosciusko, from which the negroes had been arraigned and pleaded innocent.

The negroes, accused of killing George Windham, a storekeeper, were taken from the county jail by Sheriff E. A. Wright and two deputies by a mob variously estimated in number as high as 500—which the sheriff described as "orderly".

Their bodies were found being led from the courthouse to the jail yard.

Thrown into a school bus, the handcuffed negroes were motored to a spot near Duck Hill, Miss., while they screamed for mercy. Some 30 automobiles followed in the bus' wake. Arrived at the scene, Townes and McDaniels were tied to trees and stripped to their waists.

Blowtorch flames cooked their chests. Townes died from the burns. McDaniels was shot through the head.

WAGE AND HOUR RULING STUDIED

New Set of Recommendations Expected by Roosevelt's Advisers

Washington, Apr. 14 (AP)—Leaders of United States government long insistent that the judiciary reorganization bill had precedence over wage and hour legislation, reconsidered their strategy today in the light of the decisions by the Supreme Court on the Wagner Act.

President Roosevelt's advisers expected to complete soon a new set of recommendations on establishment of minimum wage and maximum hour standards. These may be transmitted to Congress regardless of the court bill's status.

Precedence of Legislation.

Whether wage and hour or similar proposals would get floor consideration ahead of the judiciary measure appeared to depend on how soon the Senate Judiciary Committee ends its hearings.

Senator Ashurst, (D., Ariz.) said the committee would consider when to close testimony at an executive session on Friday.

White House callers received the impression that President Roosevelt was considering, in addition to wage and hour standards, whether recent Supreme Court rulings left leeway for a ban on child labor.

Comment Restored.

Intimates described him as uncertain that it did. He reserved comment on the Wagner decisions, saying he had read them only in a cursory way.

One high official summed up the administration reaction to the five to four opinions of the court as "so what?" His laughingly quoted one of the President's helpers as observing that "no man's land is now Roberts' Land."

MAJ. GEN. HUGHES IS LAID TO REST

Eight Generals Act as Pall-Bearers at Funeral Today

Toronto, Apr. 14 (CP)—Military funeral of Major General Garnet Hughes was held today with eight generals as pall-bearers. After a short service the body was taken to Lindsay, Ont., in the Peterborough district, where it was to rest in the family plot. He will be buried beside his father, General Sir Sam Hughes, Canada's wartime Minister of Defence.

Officers and men of the Royal Canadian Regiment led the long cortege. Beside the casket, mounted on a gun carriage, marched the generals. They were: Major General Robert Rennie, Major General C. F. Constantine, Major General Gwatkin-Elliot, Brigadier General C. H. Mitchell, Brigadier General C. R. Mitchell and Brigadier General D. Ormond.

Immediately following the casket was a charger with an empty saddle and with boots reversed in the stirrup-irons. The infantry escort of honour was Canadian regulars. The military service was conducted by Major the Rev. Canon Baynes-Reed.

FORMER CONSTABLE OF TORONTO ARRESTED

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—Arthur Evans, 31, former Toronto police constable, today faced four charges of automobile theft. Police arrested Evans last night and said he was the "tip-off" man while still on the force for five other men now facing charges on theft of 9 automobiles. All the automobiles were stolen in Toronto. Evans was discharged from the force several weeks ago after 12 years service.

CANADIANS LOSE WHILE AMERICANS GAIN, HE CLAIMS

He Will Advise Workers to Drop Recognition if No Action Taken

STRENGTH NEGATIVED

Federal Intervention Does Not Appear Likely Says Ottawa

Oshawa, Ont., Apr. 14. (CP) Youthful Mayor Alex Hall today demanded immediate Union of United Automobile Workers of America go out on strike in support of General Motors strikers here unless an agreement is negotiated before the end of the week. Failing this request the Union may be would advise all Canadian workmen to withdraw support and abandon recognition of the union idea.

Prominent in the strike picture since the walkout last Thursday, the mayor sent an "ultimatum" to Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers by telegraph and then confirmed his letter to the union head.

"I cannot bear to see Canadian workmen losing while American workmen are gaining ground," demanded Martin. "Such conduct negatives the strength of an international union."

The Ultimatum.

The Telegram reads:

"The Oshawa strike going into second week. Negotiations deadlocked on international union issue. Oshawa workmen lost time during January strikes in the United States through action of executive on Canadian matters.

"Canadian workmen are losing ground under Canadian charter while American workmen are gaining. Unless agreement is signed between Canadian workmen and General Motors (Canada) United States members of union must agree. Failing this I am advising all Canadian workmen on Monday night to abandon recognition of union idea. My duty as a Canadian citizen and head of Oshawa district No. 222 compels me to consider this an ultimatum. Letter following. (Signed) Mayor Alex C. Hall."

Says Action Not Precipitate.

A long letter confirmed the wire to hear the mayor's statement. "This is not a precipitate action," he said. "I have given a great deal of thought and work to the matter and my sole desire is to endeavor to be impartial. I must look after the welfare of the men who elected me to office.

"Unless an agreement is signed no Canadian workmen can return to work Monday morning 1 - expect General Motors (Canada) Ltd. and United States to be on strike Monday, the mayor told Homer Martin in a letter mailed today. "Failing this I am calling a mass meeting of all Oshawa citizens and I shall tell them they are being fooled and hoodwinked and that the international union is not playing the game with them."

Mayor Hall's Letter.

Text of Mayor Hall's Letter follows:

"Following my telegram of this morning, I wish to remind you that the Oshawa strike is now going into its second week. Government intervention has failed to reach a settle-

Titanic Disaster Recalled When 1,513 Lives Lost

Boat at The Time Was Believed to be Unsinkable

RUSH TO RESCUE

New York, Apr. 14.—Shortly before midnight on the night of April 14, 1912, the S.S. Titanic struck an iceberg in the North Atlantic 900 miles off Cape Race. Unfortunately, a light shock was felt by many of the 2,224 passengers and crew aboard. The largest ship afloat had been struck an iceberg.

At 2:20 a.m. on the 15th, just 2 hours and 40 minutes after the crash, the pride of the White Star line plunged into a long, slanting dive never to be seen again. The greatest sea disaster had occurred, taking a toll of 1,513 lives.

The "Unsinkable Titanic" had sailed from Southampton, England, on April 10, on her maiden voyage to New York. A sister ship of the S.S. Olympic the Titanic was the last word in ships. The super liner was 882 feet long, of 66,000 tons displacement and was capable of carrying 3,500 passengers and a crew of 860.

New Type Construction.

The mighty floating mansion had required three years to build. Designed by the late Lord Pirrie, Titanic was supposed to be the safest ship afloat. Construction of She was divided into fifteen heavy steel, water-tight compartments from the bottom to the deck of the hull. Doors to these bulkheads could be closed automatically from the bridge.

If any part of the vessel should be damaged and flooded, only the flooded compartments could be closed and the remaining water-tight compartments theoretically would keep the ship afloat. But this theory was exploded when the Titanic's starboard side was sheared by the submerged arm of a giant berg. None of the fifteen compartments were flooded and the remaining six were sufficient to keep the ship afloat.

"Have struck iceberg—badly damaged."

Firms Across Canada Suffering from Strike Claims Mayor A. Hall

General Motors Strike at Oshawa Active on Three Fronts

CITY QUITE QUIET

Communists to Get 'Short Shift' Statement Made

Oshawa's General Motors strike took on a three-front appearance today with the least action seemingly centred on a trading plaken line before the stilled plants.

On the western flank, 35 miles away, came reports of a developing crisis in the Ontario cabinet over the strike that sent 3,700 employees into idleness last Thursday.

To the east, at Canada Car, capital 250 miles from the strike scene, there arose the possibility of federal intervention in the industrial stalemate.

Leaders of the United Automobile Workers of America, affiliate of John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization sat in the background last night and watched the developments in the premature crisis.

Mayor Alex Hall's announcement in the Federal Department of Labor had been invited to attend Monday's meeting with verbal and newspaper reports of a cabinet disagreement. Minister David Croll and Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck were blamed as failing to agree with Premier Hepburn's stand in the strike.

Mayor Sets Deadline

The Mayor early in the evening issued a 10 p.m. deadline for General Motors to agree or disagree with a request for Federal intervention. No statement came from the company.

The Mayor dispatched a telegram to Hon. Norman Rogers, Federal Minister of Labor, in which he said he outlined the circumstances to the Minister and requested him to enter the dispute as mediator.

Union leaders previously had announced their agreement with the proposal, and Mayor Hall said he knew the move on his own responsibility, realizing that "all parties to the dispute are losing and firms across Canada are suffering from the strike."

At the same time, in reference to the gathering of reinforcements of police for the emergency force here at Toronto, the Mayor said Oshawa continued quiet and that the city police had sent out reports of Toronto.

Mayor Levels Charge

He described Premier Hepburn as "attempting to build up a bogey, which would allow him to send troops into Oshawa." In a brief statement, that Toronto Communists were reported appearing on the strike scene, Mayor Hall promised they would "get short shift" if they created trouble. He might be more concerned with guarding Communistic activities, he said, "who are a very high type of men."

Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer, whom Premier Hepburn refused to meet, declared that the union was maintained the Union had gained strength during the strike.

Recruits, he claimed, came from workers of the parts department, which has been in operation for shipment of supplies to dealers and other General Motors warehouses. First foremen are now being used in the parts department, Thompson said.

General Motors officials yesterday announced that export orders, particular to England, normally filled by the Canadian plant, would have to be filled from the Detroit plant if the deadlock continues.

The high Canadian market, officials buys half as many Canadian-made cars produced by the company as all of Canada.

Foolish to Enroll In Labor Unions Says Henry Ford

Detroit, April 14—(AP)— Henry Ford made clear today employees of the Ford Motor Company want to join anything "except what is to" but he considers it "foolish" for them to enrol in labor unions.

The head of a vast industrial empire, in an interview yesterday, indicated he was not concerned about the decision of the United States Supreme Court upholding the Wagner National Labor Relations Act.

"useful" provisions of the Act. Ford said, long "have been policies of the Ford Motor Company."

He declined to say what he would do if a union presented formal demands to him.

"Ask me that when the demands are made to be remarked, answered Ford, back from a vacation at his Georgia plantation, appeared not the least perturbed by the furore created by his recent statement that company men would reconsider the United Automobile Workers of America or any other union.

He did not repeat that statement in his interview, but reiterated his advice to workers not to join any union.

"That's foolish," he said. "They will lose their liberty and not get anything in return."

A few hours before the interview the U.A.W.A. announced it would start an intensive campaign to enroll Ford employees. Homer Martin, union president, said that "strikes to force Henry Ford to recognize the union are not necessary" in view of the Wagner Act ruling.

The Automotive Daily News estimated the reopening of the strike-bound Cleveland Hudson plants would increase this week's production of cars and trucks to 126,000, barely under the highest week this year.

Seymour Farmer Thrown from Wagon

Campbellford, April 14—Percy Farmer, 3rd, son of Seymour Farmer, suffered a fractured pelvis when he was thrown from a hay waggon on Bridge Street here as his team of horses bolted. Farr also received a broken hand and was taken to hospital for treatment. The horses dashed down the sidewalk and collided with a gasoline tank. The waggon was pulled from the horses from the waggon as they ran across a lawn. They were finally halted on the outskirts of the town.

Tornado cloud! The tornado cloud is the most ominous and terrible spectacle of the atmosphere. It would strike terror in anyone even seeing it for the first time. Before the tornado has arrived the sky may be of a greenish tint, covered with black or dark green or purple clouds. Then comes the distinctive funnel-shaped tornado cloud. The axis of the funnel may be vertical, but usually it is inclined and twisted. The tip may reach the ground or it may dangle in the air and only occasionally reach the ground. Then it enlarges and is shaped like an hour glass.

REFORM LIBERAL SAYS MINISTER

Letter of Resignation Outlines His Attitude on Rights of Labor

Toronto, April 14—(CP)—Following is the letter of Hon. David Croll's letter of resignation to Premier Mitchell Hepburn:

"Dear Mitch:

"In compliance with your written request I herewith submit to you my resignation as Minister of Public Welfare, Municipal Affairs and Labor for the Province of Ontario.

"My regret is that you have made no effort personally to obtain a knowledge of the facts which I have brought to Toronto and notified you at one o'clock that my services were available at any time thereafter. I did not hear from you again until this morning when your letter reached me. Had you so appreciated the situation you would have learned directly that there was only one course which I can conscientiously take, and that is to follow in my road from the very beginning of my career: that of my own ideals as a reform Liberal.

Says Hepburn Knew Ideals

"You knew that these were my ideals when you honored me with an invitation to accept a portfolio; it happens that I have clung to them through these three years and that, now the test is come, I am guided by this higher loyalty.

Have Right to Strike.

"For instance, I have never swerved from a conviction that the working people have a right to form their associations for the purpose of collective bargaining; that they have the privilege of joining the lawful union of their own choice; that if they, in their wisdom and in their knowledge of the conditions under which they work, consider that they should make the final resort to a strike, that to do so is their right and, having struck, that they shall not be molested if they picket peacefully and within the law. These I have considered are the rights which our law ensures to them and which Liberalism throughout the years has upheld.

Department Is 'Breaker'

"I have never considered it my duty as Minister of Public Welfare to refuse relief to strikers and so have my department become the greatest strike breaker of all.' As I have seen it, my responsibility has not been to

FALL GRAIN CROPS IN GOOD SHAPE

In spite of the adverse weather of the past winter fall grain crops are expected to show little signs of frost injury, according to report issued recently by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Lennox and Addington County crops are beginning to show a green tinge, although the cold weather of the past ten days has retarded the usual Spring growth to some extent.

All four counties suffered from the shortage of maple syrup which apparently was general all over the province. The average price was $2.00 per gallon. The low price of eggs on local markets has created a tendency on the part of farmers to kill their chickens and dispose of them, rather than feed them where the price of grain remains high.

KILLDEERS SEEN FOR FIRST TIME

Killdeers made their appearance in the district for the first time this morning, according to the vicinity of the bay shore in large flocks after winging their way here from the south. Scores of the birds were observed picking their living on the fringe of the marshes.

MARSH NEAR CITY IS SET ON FIRE

Racing through the dry reeds under billowing clouds of smoke which hung over the southern section of the city in a blue haze last evening the first marsh fire of the season licked through the dried out area of marsh west of the city last evening. Fanned by a stiff breeze flames became ignited through the blaze. Its lurid glow lasted far into the night.

WOOD IN OVEN CAUSE OF FIRE

City firemen were called to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Frost at 44 Church James street shortly after nine o'clock this morning, when fire broke out in the kitchen range. The stove and wood which had been placed in the oven of the stove, ignited, and the residents caused firemen to force an entrance by breaking through the door, although the quick action of the room was caused by smoke and water.

The steam on the marsh near the Bay Bridge was ignited yesterday blazing over a large area and causing fire to a phone pole at the side of the highway. Firemen extinguished the blaze before the pole was seriously damaged, and confined the marsh fire to its own area.

Picton Farmers Protest Closing Of Lunch Counter

Up in business arms because farmers and other vendors of the town market bought meals at a lunch counter situated on the market, Picton residents have petitioned the Town Council to pass a bylaw to prohibit the sale of meals on the town hall. The first round of what appears to be a farmers' revolt, the Council passed the motion and instructed the town solicitor to prepare an amendment to the market by-law prohibiting the sale of meals on the market. The petitioners also claim that since they pay taxes to the town they are entitled to some protection. Meals sold on the market were affecting their business they said.

But the farmers launched a counter-attack on Saturday when they issued an ultimatum that in event of the market lunch-counter being closed they would build their own meals. A petition is being circulated for signatures which will be presented to the Council formally protesting against the closing of the counter. Meanwhile the war goes merrily on.

THREE TRANSIENTS HELD FOR THEFT AT BONARLAW

Arrested Near Anson Station Today by Provincial Police

IN CUSTODY

Most of The Articles Taken Were Being Worn by Accused, it is Said

Surrounded by police and a posse of farmers, three transients were arrested and taken into custody near Anson Station early today charged with the breaking and entering and theft from the general store and post office, operated by Wm. Bell and J. W. Barlow at Bonarlaw. Upon their arrival at the police station in Belleville this morning the men gave their names as Fred Lallanz, 22, Campbellbrown, Ont., Victor MacIlmar, 21, of Halifax, N.S., and Harold Draper, 40, Copper Cliff and all admitted they were transients and that no way denied the robbery from the Bonarlaw store. Most of the goods stolen from Bell and Barlow's store was found on the persons of the trio arrested.

Late last night Mr. J. W. Barlow one of the proprietors of the store, Bell and Barlow, learned, that three suspicious looking men had been in the neighborhood of Springbrook station. Early on Tuesday morning the general store of Bell and Barlow was broken into and entered and $75.00 worth of clothing, gents furnishings and Mr. Barlow's .22 calibre rifle and a quantity of shells. A posse was immediately organized and although no attempt to apprehend the suspected men was made, their presence was kept under surveillance until the police were notified. Early today Inspector Frank Gardner, of the O.P.P., accompanied by Provincial Constable Ernest Izard rushed to the vicinity of Anson station, where it was reported the suspected robbers were in hiding. A. Corp. J. G. McPhee and Constable Beattie of the R.C.M.P. were dispatched in another direction on the west side of Trent River, thus cutting off any possible means of escape. Shortly after arrival of the former men and joined by Mr. Barlow and his posse Inspector Gardner and Constable Izard closed in on the trio and made their arrest without a struggle.

Found Wrappers

"Last night at Bonarlaw station I found a number of chocolate bar and chewing gum wrappers, which led me to believe we were on the right trail of the robbers," stated Mr. J. W. Barlow to the Ontario Intelligencer this morning. "Of course knowing the robbers had stolen my rifle and ammunition, we did not attempt to apprehend them but awaited the arrival of the police this morning," added Mr. Barlow. When arrested the trio of transients gave themselves up without a struggle and intimated they were lost. They made no attempt to deny the breaking, entering and theft from the Bonarlaw store, two of the men wearing clothing identified by Mr. Barlow as having been stolen from his store. The $4.00 in cash taken from the post office cash box was also recovered intact.

When approached by Inspector Gardner and Provincial Constable Fred Izard, the trio made no attempt to break for freedom, but on the contrary seemed to accept the incident as somewhat of a joke. When searched at the police station Lallanz was found wearing two pair of overalls stolen from Barlow's store. "Those are yours but as MacPariane threw me his pair of trousers away I guess you'll have to let me keep the overalls as souvenirs," laughingly aided Lallanz.

The men were taken before J. R. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace and remanded in custody for one week. They are charged with breaking, entering and theft. Mr. Barlow stated to police today it was the third break-in suffered by him this year, one of the last eight months. "We have suffered considerable from looses through theft" added Mr. Barlow as he stated he was of the opinion, that transients were solely responsible in each incident. Mr. Barlow's rifle was also recovered today.

Attractive programs with red cardinal and blue lettering printed on a yellow background will be available for 500 people. The program itself will consist of hymns, to be addressed by prominent speakers, children's choirs and incidental music by the bands. The ceremony will start at the 4 o'clock sharp and will last approximately fifty-five minutes and a twenty-one gun salute will be fired if present tentative plans materialize.

100% Co-operation

School children of the city will be ready, and will give 100 per cent co-operation, the committee was informed by Colonel A. C. Hubbs Pringle, the wholehearted assistance of the local militia regiment. Boy scouts, various organizations also promised to assist to the best of their ability.

Chairman Russell Wright of the Decoration Committee, stated that each store would be responsible for its own decoration.

In view of the fact that the $700.00 granted by the City Council will not be sufficient for the needs of the committee, efforts will be made to secure a further appropriation, it was decided by the committee as a whole.

The committee will meet next Tuesday, when the route of the parade and the personnel of officials in charge will be decided.

AMY MOLLISON FINED FOR EXCESSIVE SPEED

Croydon Surrey April 14.—(CP Cable)—Amy Johnson Mollison was fined £1 ($4.90) in police court here today for exceeding the 30-mile speed limit on the London Road.

Mrs. Mollison was allegedly going 40 miles an hour in heavy traffic. "There is no answer to this charge," her solicitor said. "The lady flew won the admiration of the whole world for her wonderfully intrepid flights and it is possible that being accustomed to 150 and 200 miles an hour she would not notice the difference between 30 and 40."

The flier, at present in New York, sent a cablegram expressing her "extreme regret at the unintentional offence."

SCHOOL CLUB HEARS REPORTS OF FEDERATION

Queen Alexandra School Organization Has Enjoyable Program

Reports of the annual meeting in Toronto during Easter week of the Federation of Home and School Clubs of the Province were presented at a meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club when they entertained the King George Home and School Association. The reports were presented in a splendid manner by two delegates who had represented the King George Home and School Club at the meetings Mrs. Harlen Allen and Mrs. Cowman.

Mrs. W. H. Pinkie president of the Queen Alexandra Club, who was in the chair welcomed the visitors. Miss Marjorie Lashbrook read the minutes of the previous meeting. The business included the announcement that the next meeting would be held on May 4; the appointing of a nominating committee Mrs. C. Cameron, Mrs. Hankin and Mrs. Hamilton. Mrs. Bird reported the result of the sewing program now completed. A vote of thanks was tendered Miss Bird and Miss Ellis for their help in conducting cooking classes.

Reports of Federation Meet

Mrs. Cowman gave a report of the program were a piano trio by Mrs. Franklin, Miss Brown and Mrs. Rowland; a reading by Howard Truesdale; a solo by Margaret Semple, accompanied by Miss Brown, and a violin and piano number by Morris and Ray Sandercon. At the conclusion of the meeting, refreshments were served.

Mrs. Allen gave a report of Tuesday session of the Home and School Federation convention held in Toronto at the Royal York. The delegates consisted of fourteen and the afternoon of the first day with the Public School Department. The reports dealt with the development of the work in his address citizenship in education, emphasizing the importance of a spirit of service and high moral standards.

Report of Movement

Greetings from 18,000 members of the Women's Institutes of Ontario conveyed by Mrs. Reece, president of the Institutes and Rondeau made up of 361 units. She reviewed the growth of the movement having as its inspiration "the child in our midst" urging parents to take their duties more seriously in view of the many parent study groups now in operation gave evidence that much is being done along this line. Co-operation with the teacher, was essential. Miss J. Allen, supervisor of nursing the school nursing service.

Dr. O. I. Christie, president of Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph was another speaker and dealt with rats in his address. Lack of parental education and co-operation in home conditions were blamed by him for the recent outbreak of the Guelph epidemic. He also said he had questioned a number of children and found that in the majority of cases of them left home with no breakfast or possibly a piece of pie left over in the cupboard, or a bun, very inadequate physical preparation for the day. The child who is still in bed. Parents should be warned in the matter of the responsibility in sending children to school properly fed and clothed and in a happy frame of mind.

He made an appeal to all to lend a helping hand to the child who is a misfit in school and the parent, who is a misfit in the community. Other interesting addresses were given at the sessions.

Musical numbers were entertained at various social events, one of these being the reception and tea at which the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Bruce were hosts at Chorley Park.

Dr. Simpson's Address

At the evening session, the Honorable Dr. J. L. Simpson, Minister of Education outlined the proposed changes in the educational program of Ontario, which Mrs. Harrison explained in detail in her report.

The report of Wednesday, prepared by Mrs. Turner was given by Mrs. Coleman. In the address of the Hon. Premier President, the objectives for the year were stressed namely co-operation between teachers and parents in the various communities and efforts to find out what is most needed in the school and to work for it. The Club should be a group of earnest workers banded together to work for educational benefit and school welfare system. The health of the child should be an important phase of the work. The report of secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Maltby was read showing a splendid balance on hand.

The chief speaker on Wednesday afternoon was Dr. H. R. Brillinger who gave his address following music by Murray Gibbon, Thomas James and Gwendolines Williams. The subject of his talk was Mental Health and Parent Education, who impressed on the parents their grave responsibilities. Children should be made to feel that they are loved, that their affairs are interesting to their parents. They should also be taught responsibility at an early age.

The reports were most interesting and instructive and were heard with keen appreciation by yesterday's large attendance.

GERMAN DOCTORS ARE CALLED ON TO HELP GOVT.

Urged to Use Substitutes in Surgery For Imported Materials

PART OF 4 YEAR PLAN

Berlin, April 13 (CP-Havas)—German surgeons were called upon to aid the Government in its four-year plan by avoiding use of foreign medical material products for which German "ersatz" (substitute) goods have been created.

The call was sounded by Professor Reinhold Stitch of the University of Goettingen at a meeting of the German Surgery Society.

"All hospitals and other surgeons must aid in realizing the aims of our Fuehrer," he said. "The difficulties of national economy do not permit a patriotic German doctor to stitch up with catgut—he must first ask himself if we do not have a German product as satisfactory and cheaper.

"Likewise, surgeons should not use up yards and bandages in an inefficient and extravagant manner around the limbs of the wounded nor use an undue amount of cotton where cellulose would do as well. By replacing operation gloves manufactured of foreign rubber for German gloves of buna (synthetic rubber) a surgeon will prove his goodwill."

RACING PLANT AT WINDSOR IS SOLD

Devonshire Course Purchased For a Fraction of Original Cost

Windsor, Ont., April 13—(CP)—Devonshire racetrack here has been sold by Simon Mereticky of Windsor, it was announced today. Neither the purchaser nor George Yates, solicitor for the vendors, would reveal the price involved but it was authoritatively reported to be $2,000—a fraction of the original cost of the well-equipped racing plant.

Mereticky believes Devonshire would make an ideal park for the city of Windsor and said he is willing to sell it to the city for a fraction of its worth. He said he would like to see it converted into a municipal park and named for his father, the late Aaron Mereticky, a parks commissioner for many years.

On the other hand, he may scrap the grandstand and clubhouse for the metal they contain.

The property is composed of 130 acres, and the complete racing plant originally cost approximately $200,000. Water was piped at a cost of several thousand dollars and a fence around the property also cost thousands, of dollars, according to solicitor Yates.

Greeting Ras Tafari as a Royal Emissary

When the Duke and Duchess of York returned from their honeymoon to set up residence in Richmond Park, it was to begin an even more strenuous existence than either had known before. Welcomed into the royal family as one of its own, the duchess accepted her new station with grace and charm, while for the duke the ever-broadening sphere of his duties made more and more calls upon his time and strength.

He became the second unofficial ambassador of the realm, taking part of the burden from the shoulders of his father the King and the Prince of Wales. Not that this job of representing the throne or England was new to Albert, for as early as 1918 he had been present in place of his father at the re-entry into Brussels of the king of the Belgians. Not only Belgium, but Serbia, Roumania aid many another European state saw the likeable prince of England in those post-war years, and to his mind, trained to observe and analyze and remember, a valuable understanding of European political and diplomatic tendencies took place. Indeed, it was an education, albeit an arduous one, that stands him in good stead now.

Our picture presents the duke at his first official ceremonies, a scene that bears an ironical tinge now, more than ten years later. The duke is greeting Ras Tafari, regent-ambassador from the independent state of Ethiopia, when that dignitary visited Britain in 1924. Ras Tafari, regent of his country then, was soon to be crowned king as Haile Selassie, Conqueror of the Lion, tribal head to the throne, as Emperor of Ethiopia, in Addis Ababa.

But Ras Tafari lives in England now, an exile, and the country he so proudly represented in this scene is ruled by its Italian conquerors. And Albert extending as Duke of York, his country's welcome to the visitor from the free African domain, is king and emperor. Thus has King George VI watched history made.

Seriousness of Incendiarism Causes Action to be Taken

Nelson, B.C., Apr. 13 (CP)—Seriousness of incendiarism sweeping west Kootenay Doukhobor communities was indicated today as police took steps to guard against a recurrence and Premier T. D. Pattullo sought solution of the problem as "one of national well-being."

Sergeant C. G. Barber of the provincial police said he had received information leading him to believe attempts might be made to blow up railway bridges between Nelson and Midway, 90 miles west, and the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company plant at Trail.

Guards stationed at public buildings and factories were doubled and 36 men were posted at railway bridge and at the Trail shelter. Eleven community halls and schools have been destroyed or damaged, since the trouble broke out April 4.

Virigin Summoned.

Mr. Pattullo announced he would ask Dominion government co-operation in reaching a permanent solution of the problems of Doukhobor residence in British Columbia. Nine deaths and enormous property damage have resulted from troubles in the district since 1923.

The last outbreak occurred in 1932 and was stopped when more than 500 members of the Sons of Freedom sect were sentenced to three years imprisonment for nude parading. The total population of Doukhobors in the province is 13,000.

W. H. MORTON, PUBLISHER.

LATE M. W. MOTT

Thousands of scholars who passed through his hands in his long service in teaching mourn Miller W. Mott, former principal of Queen Alexandra School. Pupil and former pupil are always into closest touch with a teacher for no one outside of parents and immediate relatives leaves a more enduring influence upon the lives of the young who are being moulded into citizenship and noble living.

Mr. Mott in entering upon teaching chose a way with the heaviest responsibilities, results of much of his effort he could never realize, though he had a fairly correct appreciation of his life work as shown by the later lives of his former scholars. Yet with its burdens, to the real teacher it is the pleasantest duty to be influencing the young for good and to know that the result of the work is lasting; to realize that his or her work has been exceedingly well done, and that the seed sown has fallen on good ground.

Mr. Mott as teacher and principal filled a role in citizenship here which cannot be forgotten, for he had a large proportion of the rising citizens under his care and instruction for the most formative period of their lives. That his former scholars loved him when they attended school and remember him today is proof of the blessings which come to the teacher's share.

Mr. Mott also served the cause of education in no small way on the Board of Education as a trustee. Here his wise counsel and his long experience in teaching and facing problems of education were of benefit to the board. Though the teacher and trustee involve quite different duties within the bounds of education, he filled the latter office as ably as he served in the classroom or as principal. Always kindly and courteous in debate, sympathetic to the young and their problems, he was held in high estimation by his fellow members of the Board of Education.

Through his office as teacher-principal, the late Mr. Mott was a noble example to the boys and girls, who today know what his guidance meant in those tender years when they learned instruction under his mentorship.

NOT TO PREACH 'ISMS'

That Pastors should shun propaganda, even when crying out against the evils of the world said the Rev. Dr. George Arthur Buttrick of Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York.

"Sometimes people take issue with a minister because he is disturbed by present conditions in commerce and nationhood which are a threat to the good life. But what other course can he honorably pursue?

He declared that his pulpit would never argue for the co-operative movement, for the political parties or for socialistic principles. The minister speaks not to plead for 'isms' but for the good life. He comes to plead that all our endeavors shall be for man's sake 'unto God.'

"From the train window he sees the huddled homes of blackened cities or hovels in the midst of fertile fields. In his mind's eye he can see millions in India or China subsisting on a handful of rice. Yet he remembers that mankind has both the means and the fruitfulness to lift the shadow of war and poverty."

The real glory of the church, he declared was that it raises a standard of judgment, renders a tender solace, offers a friendly comradeship and contributes a true sacrifice. "The genuine church admits that pain lacerates and that death is sad. It would be pure mockery for the church to deny the pain and the sorrow of the recent tragedy in New London, Texas. But if we pray and live good lives, then a new springtime breaks from within the pain which is not denied.

"Rome fell but the tiny church remains. Kingdoms have toppled, but men and women still live together to the sacrament. Sciences and philosophies change, but the cross remains on the ancient hill. Today the church is one comradeship to which we can yield a whole heart."

Shallow men believe in luck, believe in circumstances. If it was somebody's name or he happened to be there at the time, or it was so then and another day, it would have been otherwise. Strong men believe in cause and effect. The man was born to do it and his father was born to be the father of him and of this deed and by looking narrowly you shall see there was no luck in the matter, but it was all a problem in arithmetic or an experiment in chemistry. —Emerson.

TOILING, REJOICING, SORROWING

"The position of the village smith is now better than it has been for some years," —Report at the British Development Commissioners.

Under the spreading chestnut tree
The village smithy stood,
In days when horses used to be,
And trade was pretty good.
His hammer clanged, his bellows blew
From morn till dewy eve.
He liked to have a lot to do,
As you can well believe.

Were countless horses needing shoes,
And carts to be repaired,
And implements that farmers use;
The blacksmith also cared
For prams and bikes and broken grates
And pots and pans and sich,
All paid for at the usual rates:
No wonder he grew rich.

Alas! The horses went their way,
The motor came instead;
The forge no longer seemed to pay,
The blacksmith's trade was dead,
Under the spreading chestnut tree
He sat and cursed his luck,
Or watched his hard-earned savings flee
All in the Dog and Duck.

Then came another change. The smith
Who sought for work in vain,
And talked of living on his kith,
Is hard at work again.
No chestnut boughs the forge unwreath,
The anvil's on the dump,
For now he works all day beneath
The spreading petrol pump.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S APPEAL NEVER SEEMS TO LOSE ITS FORCE, hence it was no surprise to find capacity houses enjoying Charlie's antics in "Modern Times" in a local theatre this week. Mass production of modern times is here shown with humorous twist, tinged with satire, also mass parades of workingmen with banners and such-like symptoms of unrest common to modern times. Coupled with Charlie in a two-feature bill was the delicious old classic "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" with Pauline Lord, Zasu Pitts, W. C. Fields and the same delightful cast which made us laugh and cry some years ago. All of which resulted from the revival of old time favorites, and some not so old-time by the Capitol Theatre beginning Sunday midnight, continuing Monday and Tuesday. Thus far the innovation has been quite popular, and if the comments of the small boys on Charlie Chaplin after the show is any criterion he has still a strong hold on the youthful hearts and emotions. For instance the writer followed one gang of boys, about ten in number, from the theatre for several blocks and all they talked about was Charlie's antics, his boots, his cane and his clothes—and so the controversy among critics as to whether Charlie is an artist or only a ham actor would seem to be immaterial in the face of box office figures for revivals. Incidentally it may be remarked that the spoken word is never missed in 'Modern Times', a triumph in itself, suggesting that there is perhaps too much talky-talk in modern pictures and not enough real acting which explains itself without words. On the way back is that masterpiece "Ruggles of Red Gap" in which Charles Laughton shows how even an Old Country butler can be metamorphosed into a big business man by the stimulation of the energy which flows from the lordly mountains of the vast open spaces of the Great West.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES AND DEATHS FREE—a weekly newspaper published in a small place in Ontario announces in its list of rates for subscriptions, advertising, etc., that birth, marriage and death notices are inserted free. Rather an odd thing in newspaperdom. We have heard of loss leaders in merchandising—perhaps this is a subtle form of that. Strange to say, free or not, there was not one notice in the paper which could have come under that head, but quite a lot of paid advertising. Proving again that folks are not attracted by something that they do not have to pay for.

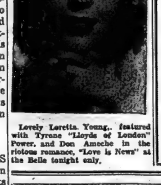
The steamer Hero has been thoroughly overhauled during the past winter at Kingston. The improvements made to her will make the Hero, it is claimed, the strongest, swiftest and prettiest steamer that skims the Bay of Quinte and River St. Lawrence. The Hero will be under the same popular management as last year, viz, C. H. Nicholson, Captain; William Bloomfield, 1st Mate; E. J. Hooper, Purser; James Stewart, 1st Engineer.

Deserved promotions at the Belleville Post Office. Mr. Thomas Duncan, who has occupied the position of head clerk for some years, has been made Assistant Postmaster and Mr. Alfred Gillen will take the position vacated by Mr. Duncan. Both are young men, capable an energetic. Their promotion will, no doubt, give general satisfaction; they have earned it by hard work. The recognition by the department of past services faithfully performed, is the right kind of stimulant to put into the service.

Mr. F. G. Lockett of the firm of Haines and Lockett is now at Montreal completing spring purchases.

Mr. George H. Pope left today for Duluth, Minn.

HOPE SUN SHINES ON CROWNING DAY



But Visitors to London Urged to Bring Raincoats Anyway

LONDON, April 14—(CP)—The threat of rain, with its attendant possibility of financial loss, worried Great Britain as it cast a collective eye at the weather for Coronation Day — even though it is a month away.

Everyone who will strive for glimpses of the procession may be hoping May 12 would be dry. Just drying out after the wettest winter in years and glancing at the weather on May 12 for the past 25 years the wise ones say:

If you are going to the coronation, don't forget your raincoat, overshoes and umbrella."

A mild, wet winter over here promises a late and rainy spring. Records for 25 years showed that while there had been only one May 12 when there was sunshine, it rained on 13 of the 25, making it a little better than even chance it will rain on the day King George and Queen Elizabeth are crowned.

DROOPS
. . . but that distant clatter of cups says "Here comes your afternoon tea and that will put you right".
IN FACT they know a thing or two in bis office. They know the good of that mid-afternoon tea: how it banishes the "Droops": gets work back into full swing; pleases every member of the staff. The "droops" in the afternoon are Nature's warning. The nerves from your brain are like telegraph wires that flash messages to the muscles. Fatigue interferes with those "messages". That's when you feel "foggy", and mistakes creep into your work. The remedy, say, doctors, is a cup of tea. Almost at once it stimulates your internal "telegraph system"—safely, harmlessly, gently, and so very pleasantly.

Collegiate Drama Group Has a Busy Season

The Drama Group at Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School has had a busy season, with their regional drama festival entry which won good placing and recommendation from the adjudicator, their own festival entry, "The Valiant" which was described by Norman Vanden as the best play by a secondary school group he had seen in recent years. This play was invited to the O.E.A. meeting during Easter week and delighted the educationists present.

The next offering is of course the annual school play, this year "The Crime at Blossoms." The cast includes Miss Mary Vose Thomson whom Mr. De Warfaz described as a charming young actress showing much promise, and other talented actors. The cast includes twenty-two, and the play is quite an ambitious attempt by the group, being a psychological study of the effect of ill-gotten money. It has been produced on Broadway and is a favourite with amateurs. Commenting on the play Mr. Lonsdale Evening News says that "the author has achieved a distinction in preventing what T believe, to be a completely original plot. If you don't see this play, I think you will be missing one of the best written and most original plays of the year." The cast of the Collegiate which is presenting the play on Friday evening has been greatly helped by the coaching of Miss Sylvia Tutt.

AT THE BELLE

"We're on the Jury" Funny

Two players who for years were ranked as the funniest actor and actress in Broadway musical comedy, and who in recent months have been highlighting dramatic motion pictures, are starred together for the first time in RKO Radio's "We're on the Jury," based on the successful play, "Ladies of the Jury," by Fred Ballard. Produced as the second feature attraction on the same program with the start at the Belle Thursday and Friday with Ann Sothern, Melville Cooper and Chot Pope in "Quality Street" and Wendall Hall, Billy Jones and Ernie Starz in "A new constellation."

Helen Broderick, who stands in a class by herself for wise-cracking sarcastic portrayals, and Victor Moore, whose rotund, innocent brand of comedy has won him a huge following, were first teamed in "Swing Time" with Astaire and Rogers. The new offering however, marks their initial co-star appearance, and the result is said to be hilarious entertainment.

The Red Cross hospital coach needed hospital and nursing service by isolated northern Ontario districts. It also forms part of this Red Cross Disaster Organization.

Stirling and District

Stirling—The members and officers of Stirling Community Welfare Club met for their regular monthly meeting in St. John's Memorial Hall where they were guests of St. John's Anglican Men's Association repaying a fraternal visit of the last mentioned organization to their banquet hall a little over a month ago. The program committee of the Welfare Club was responsible for the fine program provided and great interest was taken in the fine address presented by Mr. Harold Thurston, the guest speaker for the evening.

The spacious banquet hall presented a very pleasing appearance with the long tables bedecked with colours of the organizations and occasional bouquets of cut spring flowers. The splendid dinner was provided by the ladies of St. John's Women's Guild and every desire of the guests was promptly attended to by a group of efficient waitresses who worked very systemically so that the time was low. The guests were welcomed by Dr. E. A. Carle, president of St. John's Men's Club and Rev. W. J. Scott of St. John's United Church returned thanked the St. John's Men's Club for the excellent evening and Dr. E. J. Carleton thanked the members of the program committee for the fine program provided. A delightful sing-song climaxed an evening that was greatly enjoyed by all present.

Personals

Mr. Harry Morrow is spending a few days holiday at his home here where he is an official delegate to the Grand Lodge of Ontario East, now in session there. Mr. Morrow is representing L.O.L. 940 Frankford.

Misses Mabel Duncan and Edna Hollis of Toronto, have returned home after spending the week end visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hulin and the former's brother, Mr. Arthur Duncan. Miss Duncan assisted in the musical part of the morning worship at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bennett, and Miss Roy of Frankford, spend Sunday visiting at the home of their daughter and sister, Mrs. Arthur Hulin and Mr. and Mrs. George Bennett.

Mr. Edmond Jackman has accepted a position in the local branch of the Dominion Canners. Mr. Jackman for the past few months has been assistant to the Belleville branch of the organization.

Mr. Wm. Jones spent the week-end visiting friends in Toronto. St. Paul's Young People's Union was held in the church parlors on Monday evening, with a large number of members and friends in attendance. Mr. E. Hall presided as Chairman for the evening and the devotional period was followed by prayer and song service, followed by prayer by Mrs. G. W. Hockey. The Scripture Lesson was taken from the fourth chapter of St. Matthew by Mrs. Lessor. Miss Neta Cranston. Miss Mae Curtis presented a very interesting reading entitled "Love Thyself Last" and in keeping with the thoughts embodied therein all joined in the singing of the hymn "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go". The short business part of the meeting which included the Secretary's report, as read by Miss. Nora Wilkinson and Mary Hulin was appointed Pianist for the ensuing month and the balance of the season, the resignation of Donald Williams being brought about by increased Presbyterial duties.

Guest Speaker is Mrs. Arthur Fryar

The guest speaker was Mrs. Arthur Fyar, who delivered an interesting address on the subject "Canadian Missions, Or New Canadians in the Church". The guest speaker pointed out how challenging the new Canadian is reaching the elders of the Church, and how this large share in the work of Christianizing the New Canadian and to accomplish this missions which we choose to call home missions, are set up in all parts of the Dominion. Among the opposing forces in the work, is the widespread Communistic Propaganda. It is estimated that each year over fifty thousand dollars is spent in circulating Communistic literature in the city of Winnipeg alone. Such material in many cases is the only reading matter available in their own tongue, if Bolshevik still read by those misguided people.

COULD NOT LIFT ARMS ABOVE HEAD

Owing to Painful Rheumatism

This woman suffered from rheumatism in her back, arms and legs. For two months, she endured this painful condition, then, like many another sufferer, she decided to try Kruschen Salts. Read her letter:—

"About fifteen months ago I had rheumatism in my arms, back and legs. The pains in my arms and legs after sitting warm in bed were almost unbearable. At times like that for two months, I could not reach above my head. I read so much about Kruschen Salts that I thought I would try them. I am so glad to say that for more than a year I have not had the slightest return of my rheumatism."—(Mrs.) H. S.

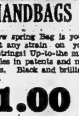
The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are frequently due to deposits of uric acid in the muscles and joints. Kruschen Salts assist in stimulating the internal organs to healthy, regular activity, and help them to get rid of this excess uric acid.

SCIENTISTS TOY WITH POWERFUL NEW SOLVENT

Can Dissolve Everything Except Glass And Platinum

HIGH FREEZING POINT

(By Howard Blakeslee, Associated Press Science Editor)



Chapel Hill, N.C., April 14 (AP)—A new straw-colored liquid that can dissolve almost every substance except glass, platinum and tungsten was reported to the American Chemical Society today.

Somewhere in the universe a cold penalty exists with this liquid, selenium oxychloride, substituted for water, said Prof. Golbert T. Smith of the Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn, N.Y.

"In such a strange liquid would" he said, "the temperature zones would be studded with huge glaciers of white crystals, the frozen solvent, which has the high freezing point of about 6 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Mountains would consist of glass of feldspar, and all bridges and boats would have to be constructed of glass, tungsten, or tungsten, virtually the only metals which do not react readily to it.

"There would fall every time the temperature dropped below the chilly mark of zero, fine, powdery glass, and bright blue

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Hastings, England, April 14 — (AP)—Preparations for the coronation climaxed their first casualties today.

In the nearby village of Battle, one man was killed and another gravely injured while constructing a "Saddle Seater," fireworks made according to a method handed down for generations.

Tokyo, April 14 (AP)—Selection of Dr. Yokuro Sugimura, now Japanese Ambassador in Rome, to be Ambassador to Berlin was announced today.

Dr. Sugimura is a former Undersecretary General of the League of Nations.

Torrington, Conn., April 14 — (AP)—When Dr. G. H. Wadhams found an oblong box lying in front of his office door he called the police. They gingerly soused the box in water and then opened it.

Three wet kittens emerged.

Tokiopori, Ind., April 14 (CP) —Service at the Pentecost Tokephone Company was paralyzed today because Miss Mae Lail, lone operator for 20 years, quit her job; She said she had not been paid since February.

The company has eight patrons.

Richmond, Va., April 14 (CP)— Percy Satterwhite telephoned police to say he found a suitcase in the street. Then W. C. Satterwhite called to say he lost one.

And a little telephoning, Percy turned over the suitcase to L. T. who delivered it to W. C. Satterwhite.

Nagano City, Japan, April 14— (AP)—Twenty workers, most of them women, were burned to death, seriously injured or missing in an explosion at a fireworks factory here today.

Washington, April 14 (CP)—If the children don't like spinach, there's no need for a family crisis.

Home economics experts in the United States Agriculture Department suggest trying other greens instead. They list beet tops, chard, dandelion greens, mustard greens, turnip tops and watercress as quite as good for vitamins and often richer in calcium and iron.

Nagoya, Japan, April 14 (AP)— A despondent man threw himself under a freight train today. The result:

He was killed.

The locomotive and 16 cars were wrecked.

Traffic all the way from Tokyo to Shimonoseki was tied up.

The damage totaled $75,000.

Watch Pockets If Going to Corpnation

London, April 14—(AP)— If you're coming to the Coronation you'd better be on your toes in a good many ways. Thirty thousand policemen will be on hand to help and direct visitors, but they can't do the impossible.

Men of letters will have plenty to do solving the traffic problem. Fisticuffers detectives scattered through the crowds to watch for pickpockets might, indeed, get a finked themselves. It's a thought.

Police efforts are directed toward suppressing the influx of criminals, petty thieves and confidence men.

Many old-timers remember how a few weeks before the Coronation of the late King George an ambitious but not overly scrupulous "parson maid; a small fortune by selling what he described in his advertisements as "good coronation seats for 2s 6d (about 62 cents.)"

Those who didn't get the seats received a folding stool-absolutely serviceable and comfortable but no commanding view of the procession.

Then there was that spry, ingenius soul who specialized in "curbed noses" for about 2s cents.

Those who endured their noses on that one received a neatly-typed answer which playfully read: "Drink more; it will turn blue."

Two powerful boy guidings, Vigour and Dre, ordinarily earning their hay and oats by pulling a dray, have been hired to pull the 2 1-2 ton coach of Captain Pitkroy, Speaker of the House of Commons, in the Coronation procession. They will wear enough spangles and gilt to satisfy any horse.

The Sultan of Zanzibar has sailed for England to attend the Coronation. He is travelling to his own steamer, Al said, to Mombasa and should arrive in London about May 10.

BEAVERS HOPEFUL OF TIEING SERIES

Sudbury Tigers Troubled With Injuries to Players

Calgary, April 14—(CP)—North Battleford Beavers, growing tougher as their Allan Cup Hockey Series with Sudbury Tigers progresses, are confident they can even the game round at 2-all in the fourth contest tonight.

Their 5-3 victory Monday in overtime after tying the score 16 seconds before the third period ended injected much confidence into the Beavers, Manager Jack Abbott said last night. He believes his fine Saskatchewan team can come back after losing the first two games.

Abbott said his players are in good condition. Sudbury Athletes, on the other hand, are troubled with injuries. Rudolph (Bingo) Kampman, regular defenceman, received a gash in his right foot in the first game and has not been in the line-up since. He is not expected to play tonight. Bill Regan, defenceman, stopped a flying puck with his nose in the first game. At first it was thought to be only a cut but yesterday it was found it had been broken. A bash from a stick in the third game further injured the nose.

CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK
By Geo. H. Carver

The Winnipeg Monarchs came out of the West to Toronto and won the series, they now look the best....As least that is the consensus of the number of local fans, who made the trek to Toronto the other evening to watch the second game between the Copper Cliff Redmen and the western representatives. ....Those Winnipeg practices can sure lay it on, and at times they make those highly touted Redmen look like horse-posts" opined one....Why those fans checked the Redmen often on different occasions that they thought they were going the wrong way" chipped in another.... And a Red fan grunted "Oh Yeah, well you guys also seem nuthin' yez-wait till those northerners turn on the heat!.... All of which goes to show a thing indeed it is that both squads are up against the toughest opposition they have met this season.....

Which is as it should be..... Two junior squads, which in our humble opinion provide the fastest calibre of the fastest game in the world, should not be pushovers for each other, when they reach the finals of the Dominion of Canada..... From reports we have seen that the western crop of juniors have it over those of the East. The Copper Cliff youngsters, which are comprised of the pick of the litter and the cream of the south had little opposition down this way knocking aside their competitors with apparent ease..... On the other hand the Monarchs have thrown only after a hard struggle.....However both are splendid squads and as far as we are concerned Canada belongs to any one so far.... The remaining games will surely go down in the book as scene of the "hottest" ever contested in the series for the junior title for Canada.

The Rose and the Thistle will tangle in "Glesgy" on Saturday in the concluding game of the International Football Tournament, when England and Scotland meet for the title this year. ....In the meantime Wales will look on from the sidelines, as the undisputed champion of the series, when Ireland edged with a 2-0 defeat Jacked on their greenhitts on March 13th for the Welshmen's third straight win..... "Red" Thomas's junior mushballers will get the chance of a lifetime when they meet the Boston Bruins, at present a guest of the Maple Leafs, Thursday, at Olenora, Prince Edward County.

"Screaming Jawn" Adams, loquacious mentor of the Bearlings, who can outscream Lester Patrick when his men are taking it on the bottom, yelped that the goal scored by the Goldmine on the other night was a "cheap" one.....I ain't that gratifuide after the nice things the Oshawa sports scribblers said about his Redwings....

Howie Morenz flashed down centre ice flanked by Aurel Joliat and Johnny Gagnon the other night in Charlottetown, P.E.I., and taking a perfect pass from Joliat, promptly planted the rubber behind the Island goalie..... And a roaring cheer of Spud Island fans stood up on their hind legs, and cheered the ten-year-old son of the immortal Howie, to the echo.

Ching Johnson has an offer to coach the Dartgrouth hockey squad next year.....Van Mungo is being groomed to pitch the opener for the Brooklyn Dodgers this season..... The Black Hawks were worth $12,000 more at the box-office this season than were the champion Redwings.....Detroit Tigers "Dizzy Dean" has been shipped to the Toledo Mud Hens..... "Okay by me" grinned the irrepressible Nan, "but I'll be back. You can't keep a Frost down. He's a game fish"..... Oral Hildebrand will fire the opening ball for St. Louis against the White Sox, come opening "day..... Dazzy Vance, former Brooklyn pitching ace now Trout, is with Jacksonville.....He is now shooting highballs instead of fireballs..... Apparently Big Time baseball has as much appeal to Tampa fans as a fandancer to a blind man.....Nuf mess was so bad the other day, that the business end of baseball was in an in the local sheet to attract the natives to a game between the Chicy Reds and the local lads..... The box-office returns did not pay for the newspapering.....

ENGLISH HOCKEY STAR IN CITY

Jo Jo Grabouski And Jerry Shannon Visit Belleville

Jo-Jo Grabouski, star centre-ice lane player for the Wembley Lions, formerly of the British Ice Hockey League, was a visitor in the city last evening. Mr. Grabouski is the manager with the Wembley Lions and will participate in the forthcoming world's amateur hockey series in which the Wembley club, winners of the B.I.H.L., the Hershey Bars, champions of the United States Amateur Hockey League, the winners of the Allan Cup series now in progress and also the winners of the Memorial Cup junior champions of Canada, will also compete.

Mr. Grabouski visited friends in the city for a short period and left shortly after for Toronto, where he will turn out with his team for practice tonight. Mr. Grabouski puts highly of his trip to England and his season of hockey over there.

Jerry Shannon, hockey player of the Bolton Bruins of the National Hockey League, was also a visitor in the city for a short period this morning. Travelling by motor enroute to his home in Niagara Falls, Ont. Mr. Shannon, accompanied by Mr. Grabouski, stopped over in Belleville and enjoyed an hour's hockey discussion. Shannon decked in a leather windbreaker bearing the name of the Boston Bruins, Mr. Shannon stated that each member of Art Ross' battling Bruins was given a new windbreaker as a present of the club when the season terminated.,

BASKETBALL

(By The Canadian Press)

Semi-finals for Canada's Senior Basketball championship will open Friday at Vancouver and Windsor. The two rounds will pit University of British Columbia Thunderbirds against Raymond Union Jacks and McGill University Grads of Montreal against Windsor Purdy. Present champions are Fords, who represented the province at the 1936 Olympic games.

Raymond's Athletic winners joined the select quartet last night by defeating Winnipe St. Andrew's, Manitoba titlists, 42-17, taking their total points round the 100 mark. Edmonton and Hall had eliminated Saint John in previous intercontinental play.

A long jaunt awaits the Windsor-McGill survivor, for Dominion finals are to be played in the Canadian Chateau of Fords, who would be favorites in any event. Were enhanced today with tidings five members of the Grad team, including football stars Obs Olson and Johnny Ferraro, were suffering injuries. All five are expected to play at Windsor, however.

The semi-final rounds will be on two-game, total-points basis.

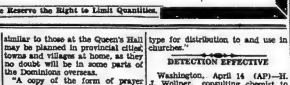
CALL TO PRAYER FOR CORONATION

Hope Expressed That Dominions Will Plan Services May 11

LONDON, April 14—(CP)—In preparation for the forthcoming Coronation of George VI and "in view of the widely-felt need for a revival of true and spiritual religion", on England, a day of united intercession and conference has been arranged for London, Tuesday, may 11, it is announced in the Bath and Wells' diocesan Gazette.

"The arrangements for this great occasion are being planned to influence and to secure the co-operation of oversea churches throughout the Empire," the announcement goes on, "and it is hoped that (as at the time of the Coronation of George V in 1911) united meetings similar to those at the Queen's Hall may be planned in provincial cities, towns and villages at home, as they no doubt will be in some parts of the Dominions overseas.



"A copy of the form of prayer and intercession has been prepared by the Bishop of Norwich for use on the day at home, and throughout the Empire.

"The Archbishop of Canterbury allows it to be said that this form of prayer and intercession is being sent out with his knowledge and approval in the hope that with one voice all may approach the Throne of Grace on this solemn occasion. It will be printed in small size and type for distribution to and use in churches."

DETECTION EFFECTIVE

Washington, April 14 (AP)—H. J. Walker, consulting chemist to the United States Treasury, said today that methods for detecting the presence of narcotics in race horses have been made 100 times more effective in the last two years.

Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger of the Narcotics Bureau added that experts now can determine though a saliva test the presence of narcotics weighing as little as one-millionth the weight of a five-cent piece.

QUEEN KEPT OUT WHEN GEORGE IV RECEIVED CROWN

Hopeless Caroline Refused Admittance to Abbey Festive Coronation of Monarch

LONDON, April 14—(CP)—One of the most amazing coronations in English history was that of George IV in 1821. This monarch, many years Regent owing to the mental malady of his father, George III, was labelled by some biographers as the most accomplished blackguard in Europe.

He spent, his earlier years in a whirl of pleasure-seeking and was a leader in all the license and luxury of the "gay society" of the time. His long alliance with the famous Mrs. Fitzherbert was notorious and any happiness from his formal marriage to Princess Caroline of Brunswick was short-lived.

Caroline was accused of adultery with the Italian Count Pergamo after she fled England and George IV attempted to put through the House of Lords a bill degrading her of her royal title and divorcing her. This bill was abandoned as its supporting vote decreased in successive legislative stages.

The King, however, gave orders that Caroline, who had returned to England, must not be admitted to West-minister Abbey, through fear that she might interrupt the coronation ceremony. Arriving at the Abbey at six o'clock in the morning the Queen went from door to door vainly by striving to be allowed to enter and take her place by the king. The popular support failed her on this occasion.

To begin with scandal had been caused by the cost of the ceremony, which amounted to nearly three-quarters of a million sterling. The day was hot, and the portly sovereign constantly mopped his streaming brow with a succession of handkerchiefs, passing them to the Archbishop of Canterbury, who in turn handed them to the Bishop of Salisbury.

It is recounted how, even during the communion service, George repeatedly kissed a ring given him by his latest favorite, Elizabeth Lady Conyngham, who smiled on him from a seat as close by as decency allowed.

From time to time the King would pass into the chapel of St. Edward, which had been fitted up as a sort of snack bar, and while he refreshed himself the coronation ceremonies naturally had to be suspended.

12 FAMOUS HOCKEY STARS GO FOR THE 1937 Studebaker IN A BIG WAY

ON March 31st, twelve top flight nationally known players of the National Hockey League bought and took delivery of twelve 1937 Studebakers.

They chose Studebaker in preference to any other 1937 car, just as you will if you make side by side comparisons.

Studebaker unreservedly asserts that the 1937 Dictator is Canada's finest 6-cylinder car . . . and all 9 other sixes, regardless of name, fame or price are invited to contest that statement.

World's only six with non-slam doors that close lightly, tightly and silently . . . world's first six to offer the triple safety of steel-reinforced body-steel bodies, automatic hill holder and feather-touch hydraulic brakes . . . world's first six to offer the sensational dual economy of the Fram oil cleaner and the gas-saving automatic overdrive.

Follow the lead of these hockey stars—see and drive the Studebaker Dictator and see for yourself—as they did—that nothing less than the Dictator can seriously interest you.

Well Executed Play by Barry Results in Detroit Score to Even Series with Rangers

Earl Robertson in Goal Brilliant to Hold Rangers Scoreless

SYD HOWE STARS

Plays Defence And Forward When Goodfellow Absent by Injuries

By ALLAN WICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Detroit, April 14—(CP)—Scoring a well-executed play, Marty Barry, smart centre on the Canadian Press all-star National Hockey League team this season, found the corner of the net on a shot from an almost impossible angle, the third period Stanley Cup holders will not be known until Thursday night, but that means the series goes the five-game limit and it's just as close as that.

Barry, former Ottawa Senator veteran, shot the counter past sagging Davy Kerr, in the New York Rangers' nets at 13:45 of the third period to win the game 2 to 1 and tie the series at two victories apiece.

Critics pronounced the hard-hitting struggle the best tilt of the series to date.

A jammed arena of 13,318 paid customers poured forth thunderous applause when Barry flashed the red light. Detroit players were filled with shrieks and yells and held the game into the closing minutes by paper, peanuts, programs and other missiles on the ice. It was a scene of hectic bedlam the likes of which even in this rabid hockey city.

Syd Howe, alternating at centre and defence in the absence of rearguard Hobbs Goodfellow through an injured left knee, and six-foot Johnny Sorrell were credited with assists on the play.

Howe Started Rush

Howe started a rush from the Detroit defence zone and passed to Sorrell, who appeared to momentarily fumble the puck. Barry picked the puck up mid-ice-and-down he ice, crossed over into deep left wing and let fly. The puck never stopped until it hit the far corner of the twine.

Howe, taking on the task of replacing Goodfellow, All-Star right defenceman, and performing on the forward line as well, played approximately 45 minutes of the hard struggle and gave one of the greatest displays ever seen here.

Not a big fellow as defencemen go, the rugged, 26-year-old Ottawa boy took on the best from behind Ranger forwards, while playing the rear-guard, especially in the first period. Hell has no fury like Howe for more.

The early ending of the game was a spark, that touched off another dynamite charge of cheers and applause for the Wings. Earl Robertson, Barry, Howe and goalkeeper Earl Robertson.

Robertson to Stay in

Because of the sensational game he played in holding the sharp-shooting Rangers scoreless for the first time since the N.H.L. season began—a total of eight games—Robertson will play tomorrow night, Coach Jack Adams told Jim Norris, president of the battle.

"You're wonderful!" King John told the Bemidji, Sask., lad who played for Pittsburgh, Detroit farm team, this season, and took his place in the Wing's nets, after Smith injured his ankle in an N. H. L. championship game with Montreal Maroons.

"You're going to stay in there."

Good-natured Ching Johnson, the smiling defcer, who has been a fixture after Thursday's game, received the only penalty of the match, 25 cents with seconds to go in the second period after he tripped Mud Bruneteau and grabbed into the third frame.

Manager Lester Patrick of the Gothamites praised Detroit in the win. He felt the present Stanley Cup holders outplayed his charges slightly and that Barry's counter was made on a "beautiful play and a beautiful shot."

ORIOLES STRENGTHEN HURLING CORPS FOR FAST WINNING RACE

By RANDALL CASSELL
(The Baltimore Evening Sun)

Winter Garden, Fla., April 14 (AP)—Winter book favorites in the International League, the Baltimore Orioles hope to make the experts look good by stepping out this summer and setting a fast winning pace for the rest of the clubs in President Frank Shaughnessy's circuit.

Hurling Manager Mahlon Ogden, general manager, nor Guy Sturdy, manager, are making any pennant boast but it is no secret that this year's Baltimore team is one of the strongest on the field in several years. Ogden set about making some sound trades to strengthen his club for 1937 during the winter season.

Heading the pitching staff are two real winners from last year, Harry Eisenstat and Randall (Dry) Vandenberg Matmark won 18 games, 14 with the Orioles and four with Buffalo and a 6-and-4 record with the Birds after being bought from Syracuse in mid-season.

Jim Bivin, who won eight out of 16 games with the Orioles before joining Milt Shirman, who was out most of the summer, Winker Goon Spencer and Ed Heusser, all from Montreal, Gordon (Dusty) Rhoden from the Atlantic coast League and Petit from Albany.

Two Catchers Carried

George Savino and Milton Gray will handle the catching duties both with Orioles in 1936. Gray hitting .327 for the Rock after coming from Johnstown (Middle Atlantic League) where he hit .327. Savino hit .277 last year but has done better in the past and is ready for a big season.

The infield is entirely set with the return by New York Giants of Lee Powers for first base. Lee covered the position for the Birds last summer after being sought from the New York Club.

Roy Schalk, costing the Birds around $8,000, was bought from Newark during the winter to play second base. Schalk will team up nicely with Bill (Ted) Hoffner, lithe shortstop. Rocky Joe Mc-Carthy is back for third base duty. He hit .297 last year. For utility duty there are Bill Knickerbocker from Montreal, and Lyle Judy the baseball star of 1935 when he pilfered 107 bases for Springfield of the Western Association.

In the outfield the Orioles have great offensive strength there in George (Peanut) Metkovich, brought from Athletics; Ab Wright and Woodley Abernathy, holdovers from 1936, and Ed Remorvoska, big Russian youth, drafted from Trenton (Sal.).

MAX BAER HAS A SOFT TOUCH

Meets Tommy Farr an "Accidental" Champ in London

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, April 14—(AP)—Some 12,000 Englishmen are expected to shell out around $100,000 tomorrow to see their new idol from North Wales, Tom Farr, go 15 fast rounds or less against Tommy Farr, the "accidental" British champion.

The former world heavyweight boxing champion, whose invasion of the United Britain comes certain to carry him a long way on the comeback road he is trying to travel, is practically the whole attraction for this crowd. Farr is rated by this country's best boxing experts as a good second-rater.

The unsmiling Weishman, little known to fame recently won the British title from Ben Foord in one of the soundest fights ever seen in London, is cast as the official "stooge" for the Cleveland Max.

Farr's personality and "clowning" already have made him a favorite with the fans, although they haven't seen him fight yet.

Baer is a hero to the one favorite and has announced he has a goodly sum to back himself at that price. He's due to get $22,500, tax exempt, for tomorrow's bout and if he wins as expected, he'll continue in the big money for some time. A victory will win him another rich match with the German, Walter Neusel, next month.

Beyond that, there's no telling what will happen but already there's talk of bringing over Joe Louis to provide a climax show for the crowds that will invade London for the Coronation festivities. There's no doubt tomorrow's fight will be the biggest in years from a financial standpoint. Three hundred specialists will be occupying ringside seats at $50 each, a price unsurpassed in England since the Carpentier—Beckett fight shortly after the war.

Spartanburg, S.C., April 14 (AP)—Crowds of approximately 17,000 have turned out to watch the New York Yankees in their spring baseball training games this season, the boss Joseph Dan Shows the palmy days of 1929 and 1930.

Thomaston, Ga.—New York Giants are confident they will hit Bob Fellor, when Cleveland Indians' southpaw hurls here today. Steve O'Neill has announced that Fellor will go into training and with three or four chances to bat against him the New Yorkers feel sure they will hit.

Norfolk, Va.—Watson Clark, catcher, has left hander of Brooklyn Dodgers, has apparently reached the end of his career as an active moundsman. He is working only as a coach and although confident he can help the club on the mound, will not refuse a coaching job if it is offered.

SOFTBALL MOGULS COMPLETE PLANS FOR 6 TEAM LOOP

Playing Schedule Will Be Drawn Up in Near Future

PROTEST FEE SET

Each Team to Name Three Umpires But League to Appoint

With the exception of a playing schedule, which is paramountly the main feature that is being awaited today, the local softball monitors convened last night at the Asiman Club Rooms and completed all other playing arrangements, the amendment of rules and regulations and set their activities going ready-for action, awaiting only the announcement of the opening day and the words "play ball".

Six clubs were represented last night, no additional teams seeking entrance to the Belleville Softball Association, additional baseball clubs, Belleville Sargent (1936 group champions), Corbins Lock and the "Ice Cooler" squad from the C.I.A.C.O. village, and the provincial Intermediate "A" Intermediate champions, the Belleville Percivals, along with the Bay Shore Acme "B" team, 1936 semi-finalists for provincial honors will compete as representatives of Belleville, and Canada Cup Juniors have been added to the league roster.

Protest Fee Set

Last night it was decided to have one member from each club form the group on the league executive, "The executive to set the fee for protests at $3.00 for the protesting club and a similar fee for the defending club. If the protestment is absolutely necessary a 36 hour notice must be given, the protesting club, the failure of which will see a fine of one dollar imposed upon the offending club, the fine to be paid before the offending club can participate in another league game.

The question of umpires brought considerable controversy to the delegates. Finally President Todd suggested that each club submit the names of three umpires and from this list will be selected the umpires for the season. The league executive will appoint all umpires.

Playoffs Arranged

The first four teams in the standing at the conclusion of the regular playing schedule will compete in the league play-offs, with the first and third place clubs meeting in the second and fourth placed teams playing in a best two-out-of-three series in the semi-finals with the ultimate winners eventually playing in the finals for the league title and a special prize donated by the National Billiard Parlors. The final play-offs will be of the best-three-in-five series. Efforts to provide better playing conditions and a suitable diamond for softball is the immediate objective that confronts the local softballers and negotiations to remedy this fault are now under way.

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
with
Ken J. Colling

Chalk up up with another error. Last week at six sharp recent date, we announced, that the four local service clubs, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Kinsmen, were to play a hoots to certain winning sporting circles of the city. Either we were wrongly informed, or most likely it was our own blunderings. At any rate the big sports banquet is still on and will be held at the Quinte Hotel on Monday evening April the 26th, but the get-together is to honor the Belleville Redmen, intermediate "B" champions of the O.H.A. and the R.O.A.F. "Flyers" intermediate "A" tiulists. We also understand the Kiwanis Club may play special host to a N.Y. club which winner as an added feature. "Dit" Clapper, star N.H.L. player of the Boston Bruins, will be the guest speaker of the night, while Percy Short, President of the Rotary Club, informed us the combined gathering of the two will be arranged primarily to honor our O.H.A. champions.

Although this also may be inclined in the category of rumour and gossip, we do hear that some members of the champion Belleville Redmen would like to see the Hyers form another O.H.A. club next season. Although no official word mentioned, it has been intimated by certain Niagara Peninsula sports writers that their eyes have been cast in the general direction of the "Decoronto trio," with the hope that they would locate here. For our selection we would recommend Bobby Kromm, the classy midfielder club in the province. Incidentally, we also hear that Frank Lowery, Albby centre player of the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" is another worthy candidate. Hell knows while Johnnie Lalonde is back on the job, the Hyers Junction bunch has returned to normalcy. Lalonde only seemed to play his best with three-or-four-score to his native haunts around Ottawa.

Will history repeat itself? Do you remember when the Winnipeg Monarchs were crowned junior hockey champions of the Dominion? Winners of the Memorial Cup two years ago tonight when they defeated Sudbury Wolves 4-1 at Winnipeg. The Winnipeggers Western Canada finals again this year, won the first game of the series 7-6 but dropped to the Wolves 7-3 in the second game.

Yesterday the Wembley Lions, champions of the National Hockey League of England, arrived in Toronto for the forthcoming British amateur hockey championship tournament, Herb Mitchell's Hershey Bears, the pride of Pennsylvania, the Union Station scene hours late and not-so-early this morning, as did the Maple Leaf Gardens contingent and followed a large gallery of rail-birds. When these two clubs cross sticks Jo-Jo Graboski will get the call. Here locally, the 4 very fine young lady inmates will be playing against his brother Tony Graboski for the first time, they worked a Hershey Bear form, while Jo-Jo has been taking the Old Country hockey fans by storm with his clever stickwork and dazzling playing. The winner of the Allan Cup series, either North Battleford or Sudbury Tigers, we favours the latter of course, will be the chief team to be opposed world's championship hockey tournament.

The mentors of this world tournament, that brings together the leading champion key clubs from England, the United States and Canada, naturally need a fourth club to round out a workable playing schedule and doubtless the Memorial Cup winning Winnipeg Monarchs or Copper Cliff Redmen will get the call. It has been suggested that the winning team of these speedy and gamey junior clubs be the logical choice for the club to compete in the world's amateur tournament, with the winner having the right to command and use any of the available juniors of the vanquished club in the Memorial Cup series. The Monarchs and Redmen have both had their fine matter of years, but when it comes to hockey Winnipeg has the edge by many more than interesting for even the most fanatic senior clubs. It should be a great series.

George Gay, manager of the Belleville Arena, and Dick Beare, assistant manager, motored to Cooper Cliff-Winnipeg game on Monday and returned home high in their praise for the Monarchs. "They're the fastest skating aggregation of juniors I ever hope to see, although they are a little on the under-weight side" commented Mr. Gay. "That next game should be a honey to all that Bears would say, however. Both were highly impressed by the class of hockey played by the junior finalists.

Local hockey fans may remember the "sit-down strike staged by two teams of feminine hockey players out in Lindsay last winter. The buildeal was quite amusing at the time as the girls refused to leave the ice and permit a scheduled game to be played. It seems the story of the sit-down reached the far-off shores of England, where a certain Major Patton, of London,

JUNIORS BATTLE AGAIN TONIGHT

Monarchs Expect to Have Atchison And Rheault In Lineup

Toronto, April 14—(CP)—You can toss a 'bob, draw straws, spin the bottle or take any other means of deciding on which club will win the third Memorial Cup hockey game here tonight and likely be wrong in any event. Copper Cliff Redmen and Winnipeg Monarchs both look like good bets.

The teams have each won once and tonight's fixture may be the turning point of the five-game series but more than one expert figures that regardless of tonight's result, the series will go full five games before the Dominion Junior Championship is decided.

In two overtime contests the clubs have played 150 minutes and each scored nine goals. The Northern Ontario Miners won the first game 4—3 after one extra session and Monarchs came back to win the second fixture 6—5 after two overtime periods.

Both camps brim with confidence. Redmen's lineup will probably be unchanged but Monarchs hope to laminate two new wingmen on their second string, Jack Atchison and Paul Rheault, out of the first two games due to injuries.

The LONG-LIFE Bicycle

DID you ever stop to consider the tens of thousands of revolutions that are made by the fast moving parts of a bicycle every day that it is ridden—and the millions of revolutions that means in a year?

Yes, in spite of these countless turnings of metal against metal, the C.C.M. bicycle gives many long years of trouble-free service. This is possible in a C.C.M. bicycle because of the extreme accuracy with which it is made and because of the high grade steels used in its manufacture—these steels are heat-treated in C.C.M.'s own furnaces. These qualities are especially important in the three fast-moving parts—the hubs, the crank-shaft and the big main sprocket bearing or hanger.

First in importance is the C.C.M. Hercules Coaster Brake which is a marvel of mechanical ingenuity and accuracy. The least touch of back-pedalling and on goes the brake, smooth and sure, increasing in its effectiveness as you increase the back pressure. Then a forward turn and the C.C.M. Hercules instantly drives you onward.

Then comes the C.C.M. Triplex Hanger to which the main sprocket, cranks and pedals are attached. This Triplex Hanger is virtually the power plant of a C.C.M. bicycle. All of its parts (except ball bearings) are made in the C.C.M. factory, and they include hardened ball races, stout cranks, an accurate sprocket and other rugged parts. Because of the smooth running of the C.C.M. Triplex Hanger all of your pedalling effort is converted into power to roll you along.

The other fast-moving part of a C.C.M. bicycle—the hubs—is also made and carefully built mechanism with a sturdy axle, ball bearings and hardened steel races.

These three accurately made important parts of a C.C.M. Bicycle together with steel rims, stainless steel spokes and nut-locking combine to make the C.C.M. "The Long-Life Bicycle".

Remember, when you go to buy a bicycle, that a C.C.M. has everything that you can find in any bicycle plus many exclusive C.C.M. features, plus long life.

FLORIDA TOURISTS LEAVE FOR HOME

Matilda Arthur Writes of Festivities Concluding The Season

St. Petersburg, April 9,

To the Editor:

There are over 62,000 tourists registered here at the Chamber of Commerce, and there are over 2,000 Canadians alone. Now that the Festival of States is over, many are going home. The crowds seem to be thinning on the streets and at the eating places. Some of the Belleville people still linger, as loath to leave the warm sun and comparative quiet and peacefulness. Mrs. Nugent and Mrs. Taylor are in a fine apartment near us, as well as Mrs. Weller, of Rose, formerly of Trenton, Ontario. We were invited to call at 3rd Avenue South recently to see Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Holmes, also of Belleville some years ago. Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Derbyshire and Mrs. Fiskie, of Trenton, are at their respective homes. I've found luck overtook them on the way home. Mr. and Mrs. Davis, his mother and Miss Craig will go next Tuesday. They are waiting for the Bishop to return, that they may "go up" before they leave. Mrs. Davis has travelled extensively on this Continent and elsewhere and flew from London to Paris some years ago. They are occupying the Folson Apartments while here. Folson Apartments are among the best and most expensive in St. Petersburg. We then lived there 7 years ago when we were here. Mrs. Stroud, of Ottawa, was in this party that year.

By the first of May there will be only a few scattered groups left. We expect to be among those who start on the long northward trek. It gives us a feeling of loneliness to see them start for the north with their loaded and packed cars.

St. Petersburg has certainly entertained the tourists well. A whole week of festivities have been given in their honor, from the time the Havana was the beginning. Then the selection of the Festival Queens and their attendants and their appearance at the Band Shell in Williams' Park one afternoon was indeed a colorful scene. They moved gracefully along the platform and down the steps to the music of Major F. Messer Band. They really earned the title of Queens. Their youth and beauty and queenly appearl brought approval from the vast audience that filled the Park. Nearly every State in the Union was represented. Canada selected a Queen last year and had a float in the parade and took a part in the great pageant at the waterfront, culminating in the death of Sir Lawrence, the leader, they withdrew from the parade this year. Then the Coronation Ball in the Coliseum where all the Queens of gathered and the Queen of all States was chosen and crowned, was as "crowning" event, indeed. The State of Maine was given the honor of having the loveliest queen and she was duly crowned and given a free trip to Havana with all her expenses paid.

The greatest event was the parade of Friday that took two hours to pass a given point. It was estimated that about 19,000 people viewed the parade. Four girls clothed in gold on beautiful horses were the first to appear. Then the army trucks with cannons attached and the bands from the different military colleges and schools in Florida reminded us that the United States was not wholly unprepared for war. It is impossible to describe the beauty and splendour of the great floats. One can hardly imagine that the design and workmanship displayed could originate in the minds of the members of the different societies and be carried out by them. They seemed the work of a master mind and hand.

The State of West Virginia was judged worthy of the prize. It was a long and beautiful white float with a great golden apple at the back, while branches of apple blossoms adorned the front held in place by the beautiful queen and her attendants. Virginia is noted for its apples and the words "Mother Golden" were in large letters beneath the fruit. Then the pageant at Round Lake in the evening where under artificial lights with the white swans moving about and where Queen Cleopatra appeared in her boat with Antony and her retinue in all the beauty and splendour of that ancient time. This was only one of the brilliant scenes presented there. The setting, the great white building with its long colonnades and the platform extending out over the lake, made the historical event grand and glorious, a scene never to be forgotten.

It is with feeling of sadness that we will bid goodbye to the city that has so welcomed us and tried in every way to make us happy. We are not strangers here but are like one big family, who do not wait to be introduced to each other but who talk freely as if we had always been acquainted.

MATILDA ARTHUR.

Picton—Dr. and Mrs. Walter Hobson of Perth were in Belleville on Monday in attendance at the funeral of Mrs. Fenton McMahon, coming on to Prince Edward County where they were guests of Mr. Norman Hobson and Mr. and Mrs. Allan Shannon, Black Creek.

Picton friends were shocked at the passing in Kingston General Hospital on Friday of Mrs. Fenton McMahon. The deceased was Libby, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Purtelle of Picton, who spent her girlhood near Bloomfield and later lived in Picton. Following her marriage she made her home with her husband in Wellington, until going to Belleville to reside. She had many friends here who regret her early passing. Interment was made in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Picton, on Monday.

Mr. Frank Smith of Bloomfield sustained a severe loss on Monday afternoon when his residence in the village was completely destroyed by fire. Mr. Smith was sawing wood in his yard and did not notice any sign of the fire until passers-by noticed smoke and the whole interior was a mass of flames, and entrance to the interior could not be gained.

Mr. Wm. Bor of Adolphustown underwent an operation for appendicitis in the local hospital on Friday and is doing nicely for his recovery.

Mr. Roy Welsh of Rochester and friends were guests of his mother Mrs., Welsh, Sr., and sister Mrs. Hogan on Thursday, April 8th.

Mrs. John McClellan and family entertained Mrs. George Lowe and party at tea on Thursday evening. On Friday the latter left for their home in Rochester, N. Y.

The local Hydro decided to install heavy wiring free of charge in homes where new electric stoves are purchased, from any one of a group of local merchants, who petitioned the Hydro regarding this at their regular meeting on Friday evening.

The lunch stand at the market continued to do a rushing business on Saturday in hot dogs, pie etc. despite the fact that the town council have decreed that it soon must close. Farmers attending market are loud in their praise of its convenience. Mr. and Mrs. Reid of West Lake are the proprietors.

Crossing from Adolphustown to Glenora is being made in row boats these days as the ferry there is not yet operating.

Rawdon and District

Rawdon. — Springbrook Young People staged their play, "Chimney Cottage" on Friday evening, April 9th, in the Orange Hall, with a large attendance. Mrs. George Williams introduced the cast as follows:

Grace Kent—Miss Audrey Price.
Peter Kent—Mr. Emerson Reid.
Miss Tillington, a spinster—Miss Bessie McMullen.
Mr. Kent—Mr. Harold Bateman.
Mrs. Dean—Miss Jeana Nickle.

The scene was laid in Meadowbank, Derbyshire, England, in modern times and the platform was prettily arranged to form the Main room at Minty's cottage. Act I takes place on a June morning as Minty arrives and is inspecting her new home. The other two acts take place that same evening. The players get in several awkward entanglements but what looks at first to be foul play turns out to be all a mistake and everyone is happy at the close. The proceeds of the evening amounted to over eighty dollars.

Mrs. Fred Thrasher, Oshawa, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Farrell.

Miss Janet Hendry returned to Toronto after a holiday with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bracegirdle.

CLAIMS HE MET FORCE WITH FORCE

Mike Drotorav Pleads He Was Forced to Use Knife

Chatham, Ont., April 14 (CP)—That he met force with force, and wielded his knife in self defence when he found himself in a "tight spot" was the answer given by Mike Drotorav, Jugo-Slavian, to a charge of wounding Norman Johnson, 24-year-old Indian, in an Easter morning brawl in a Duke Street dwelling when he faced trial before Magistrate Arnold today. Judgment was reserved until this afternoon when others present when the fight occurred will face charges.

Norman Johnson, the Indian who almost bled to death from the stab wounds in his chest and back, will be tried on a charge of assaulting Drotorav.

Lavina Palmer, who has rooms at the Duke Street place, will be tried on a charge of robbing Drotorav of $6.

Bertha Robinson, in whose quarters a party was held which was broken up with the stabbing, will face trial on a charge of keeping liquor for sale.

Evidence in the stabbing case indicated that Drotorav had been with Palmer in her room. When he accused her of "running him", the woman called upon the Indian and the fight followed.

The Jugo-Stavian claimed that Johnson struck him and knocked him down, and then when others crowded him into a corner of the room, he used his knife to fight his way out.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blocks up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful bile poisons your entire system. Your face sours, gloomy. You feel punk, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere boycott has reduced Chicago's garbage at the source. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 65c. 30

TWEED

Tweed—In speaking of the Toll Brothers Travelogue "Hitchhiking around the world" given at Tweed United Church on Friday evening by Leroy Toll, no praise could be excessive. As is usual wherever this travelogue is presented the church was taxed to the utmost to accommodate the audience of nearly five hundred people who gathered from Tweed and vicinity. At the conclusion of the two hours' programme many stated that it was the most thrilling, the most fascinating and the most beautiful illustrated travel story they had ever heard.

The colored slides were marvellous in their beauty as well as exceedingly interesting and educational. Of especial beauty were scenes of the Lake District in England, Paris at night, the Garden of Gethsemane, Sunrise over the Sea of Galilee, the Taj Mahal by Moonlight and Sunset scenes in the South China Sea.

Miss Lois Richardson, organist of the United Church gave a short organ recital prior to the travelogue and played also during the intermission.

The ice is gradually moving out of Stoco Lake. Already a wide channel has opened across the middle of the lake. Despite the milder winter the ice is not going out as early as in the spring of 1936 when the lake was entirely free of ice on April 8th.

An alarm of fire was sounded at eleven o'clock on Sunday morning just as church goers had settled into their pews. Fortunately it was only a chimney fire at the home of Mr. Chas. McCrow and no damage was done.

A Tweed Auditorium was packed to the doors on Sunday evening at 8.30 after church service with a crowd of nearly 500 persons assembled to enjoy a musical concert provided by the Tweed Sulphide Band under the direction of Walter E. Dark, assisted by, Mr. J. C. Young of Toronto, soloist cornet and his Tweed pupils on Hawaiian guitar.

In addition to several excellent selections by the band, the concert was featured by a fine cornet solo "I hear you calling me" played by Peter Macdonald (Gingie) Houmslow, accompanied by Miss Lois Richardson. This was Donaldson Houmslow's first attempt at solo playing and his maiden effort met with the warm approval of the audience. Two budding musicians Ferrol and Billie Dunlop and Hugh Phillips completely captivated the audience with their delightful piano duet, "Hawaiian Paradise". Frank Tummon a favorite with Tweed audiences, sang "Sunshine of your smile" in splendid style. Miss Richardson played the accompaniment.

Mr. J. C. Young who is an accomplished guitarist, delighted the audience with two numbers on the electric guitar. He was encored repeatedly and responded generously. His Class played two numbers. The junior group composed of Heath Jones, Maurice Leal, George Leal, Merrill Dales Jr., Grant Locke, Jack Beatty and Douglas Connor played "Home Sweet Home" and "Auld Lang Syne". The senior group composed of Miss E. Stinson, Miss Ivy Mercer, T. Graham, T. Nashoite, E. Bergeron, J. Nashoite and O. LaValle also contributed numbers on the Hawaiian Guitar.

Other selections were:

O Canada; March, National Emblem; Overture, Ritempure; Novelette, Mercury; Waltz, Sleep; Hymn, Sun of My Soul, arranged by W. E. Dark; Overture, Mercury; God Save The King.

Mr. S. S. Gordon on behalf of the audience thanked Bandmaster Dark and Mr. Young for what he termed the finest musical treat that had ever been given by local talent. This sentiment met with a hearty response from the audience.

CROLL, ROEBUCK HOLD ATTENTION IN STRIKE CASE

Expected Ministers Will Resign Over Grand Taken by Premier

REFUSE STATEMENTS

Hepburn Willing to Have Rogers Step in as Mediator

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—A repartee crisis in the Ontario cabinet over Premier Hepburn's handling of the Oshawa General Motors strike centered the attention of the Province on Queen's Park today.

It may be known before nightfall whether Labor Minister David Croll and Attorney General Arthur Roebuck will continue in the Hepburn ministry. Although both have refused to state their views, the two cabinet members were reported at odds with the Premier's strike position.

The Globe and Mail said in a news story that resignations of the two Ministers "are expected some time today." The newspaper said it was reported reliably in Liberal party circles that "if they are not tendered voluntarily they will be demanded by Premier Hepburn."

Parallel in 1926

Political observers went back to 1926 for a parallel to the present reported crisis. W. G. Macdonald of Kingston then Attorney-General in the Ferguson Conservative administration broke with the government on the eve of a general election. He differed with Premier Howard Ferguson's plan to institute government control of liquor sales.

However, there is no official indication of a general election being called in Ontario at present. Mr. Hepburn said at the recently concluded legislature session that there would be none this year.

The possibility of an intra-government upheaval arising from the strike but settlement negotiations in the background for the present at least.

Mr. Hepburn is holding to his strong stand against participation in any negotiations that include Hugh Thompson, organiser for the committee for industrial organization and a leader in the seven-day-old strike of 3,700 General Motors workers.

Willing to Step Aside

The Premier has offered to step aside for Hon. Norman Rogers, Dominion Minister of Labor, moves into the dispute as mediator. "If Ontario thinks it can succeed where I've apparently failed they are welcome to try," he said.

The reported conflict between Mr. Croll and the Prime Minister centred on the question of giving relief allowances to the strikers. Thompson declared at Oshawa last Saturday, that Mr. Croll promised strikers relief if they were in need. The Premier has declared no relief will be given them.

He made this statement when the strike broke out Wednesday night, while the Labor Minister and Mr. Roebuck were absent from Toronto on holidays.

Refuse Comment

With the two Ministers absent, Mr. Hepburn put his position on the strike before the rest of the Cabinet. Since their return Mr. Croll and Mr. Roebuck have refused to comment in any way on the Premier's course.

Yesterday Mr. Hepburn said he would insist on cabinet solidarity on his strike policy. If any member was out of sympathy with him there was only one course for him to pursue. That member must resign, the Premier said.

Stressing that he sympathizes with Labor, Mr. Hepburn said his fight is directed against forces of the L.I.O., Lewis, chairman of the C.I.O., and Communism "which are now marching hand-in-hand." He charged there was a definite tie-up between the two forces.

"We are going to hold back the spread of Communism in this province as long as I am here," he declared. "Force of Communism and Communists are ready and willing to enter the Oshawa situation which he said was a little more tense."

The Premier emphasized, his belief in the Communist threat by ordering more than 300 police added to the force of 80 Ontario constables and more than 100 Royal Canadian Mounted Police stationed in Toronto. They are being held ready for any trouble in the strike zone 35 miles away.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

A very pleasant birthday party was held at the home of Mrs. Wilbert Cross in honor of her daughter Mabel on April 6th from 4 to 6 o'clock. All of her schoolmates were invited as guests. The table was adorned with pink and yellow streamers. In the centre of the table was a most delicious birthday cake trimmed with pink and yellow candles. There was much excitement over the birthday trinkets which were done up in pink paper bags with yellow streamers. The children sat down to a delicious dinner at 5 o'clock. Mabel received many beautiful and useful gifts which showed the high esteem in which she was held by her schoolmates. The guests spent a pleasant two hours playing games. They all returned home very happy.

Katharine Hepburn and Franchot Tone in Romantic Comedy

Phoebe Throssel, quaint character of Sir James M. Barrie's romantic comedy "Quality Street" first brought to life by Maude Adams, has been recreated by Katharine Hepburn in her own inimitable manner for the screen version of the play coming to the Belle Thursday and Friday, matinee daily. As co-star, Franchot Tone plays the role of Dr. Valentine Brown. Both headliners triumph in their roles.

A ten-year romance between the two is interrupted by the dashing young doctor's enlistment to fight against Napoleon. The situations which arise after Valentine's return form the basis of the story. They are in turn quaint, humorous, appealing and strikingly dramatic.

Besides Katharine Hepburn and Franchot Tone, the film also presents Fay Bainter, noted stage star, who portrays Susan Throssel, the "old maid" sister of Phoebe. Eric Blore, the funny butler of the Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers musicals, is seen as the bluff and hearty recruiting sergeant. Estelle Winwood and Helen Grandi, stage favorites, have the roles of gossipy and curious neighbors, with Cora Witherspoon, another well known stage actress, as the peppery maid. Florence Lake, Hinda Granville and Joan Fontaine are also seen in prominent roles.

RKO Radio has taken extraordinary care with the sets, reproducing a street of the title's name, and its buildings. Fifteen homes in varying types of Georgian architecture, line the two sides of the street with its brick paving and sidewalk and ornamental iron fences. Equal care has been taken with the interiors and lovely Sheraton and Chippendale furnitures and the plaster cornices, spinets, old prints and water-colors typical of the era delight the eye.

Join the fun at the community sing, the second of this popular series featuring Wendall Hall, Billy Jones and Ernie Hare, conducting a real fun-fest of song, these popular favorites of the Gillette Hour, Radio's ace Sunday evening event will be presented on the same program with an all-star comedy, and an interesting topical reel.

"Love is News," Funny

Three comedy stars who hail from widely separated fields find featured roles in the cast of "Love is News," sparkling new romantic hit starring Tyrone Power of "Lloyds of London" fame. Loretta Young and Don Ameche announcing for exhibition at the Belle tonight for the last times. The three are Slim Summerville who gained his stardom on the screen and has never appeared on the stage; Walter Catlett, who starred for years in Ziegfeld's Follies, and Stepin Fetchit, all united for hilarity in this riotous romance. A very interesting newsreel a funny comedy and classic cartoon complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Her Husband's Secretary" and "Off to the Races"

With Jean Muir, Beverly Roberts and Warren Hull as the three points of a new sort of movie triangle, "Her Husband's Secretary," a First National melodrama, opens today at the Capitol with his no. 2 Slim Summerville in "Off to the Races."

Hull, naturally is the husband, Miss Muir is the wife, and Miss Roberts, last seen as George Brent's leading lady in "God's Country and the Woman," is the office aide who comes between them.

Unlike the usual triangle stories which are entirely of the "intellectual" type—wherein the characters solve the situation by conversation, this one is solved by a novel and thrilling climax.

Such physical things as a man riding a steel girder 50 feet in the air, and an inferno of a forest-fire threatening all the leading characters, were brought into the story by its author, Crane Wilbur, the veteran writer of many a movie thriller in the old days of silent pictures.

"Her Husband's Secretary" is a fast-moving, lively film, with settings varying from modernistic offices to a camp in the Maine woods.

"Off to the Races"

That happy, scrappy Jones family is back again for a new picture and as funny as your neighbor's, moves into a new and hilarious phase of his career in "Off to the Races," fourth in a series of pictures of the Jones Family, which is shown as bit no. 2.

When Uncle Slim Summerville and his horse drop in on the Joneses, the shenanigans begin, and the typical American household is off on the most laughable, side-splitting time it has ever experienced. Add for good measure, Slim's provoking daughter, Ann Gillis, a menace from the word go, and you have a rough idea what the harried Jones Family is up against.

All the players who have made the Jones Family the country's best-loved clan are here again—Jed Prouty, Shirley Dodge, Spring Byington, Kenneth Howell, George Ernest, Juns Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan—and Russell Gleason makes a new heart-interest opposite lovely young Shirley Deane.

Russell and Shirley find their engagement prematurely announced by Slim's niece, Mrs. Jones learns with dismay that hay and oats have suddenly become the biggest item on the family's bills, and Mr. Jones, posing for a picture with Jerry B. is thrown from the sulky when the brother chases after a passing engine.

Meanwhile, Slim has inveigled the family into supporting his chances of winning the big race at the county fair. When he is unable to drive in the crucial heat, Jed Prouty fearfully takes his place, driving Slim's noble steed in a mad, wild race that climaxes the thrillingest funniest Jones Family mix-up you've ever seen.

Little Benny's Note Book

Sam Cross was sitting on his front steps looking mad as usual, and me and Puds Simkins went over, me saying, What's a matter, Sam? and Puds saying, What's you looking so fearse about, Sam?

I'll show them, Sam Cross said. They're not going to make me eat fish just because I dont like it. I'm not going to and I've warned them and now it's too late. I'm going to run away from home, that's what I'm going to do, he said, and I said, Aw, we've heard that before.

You're always saying that, Puds said, and Sam said, Well this time I'm really going to do it, I've been too late to of ever saw me again, because I've got a big suitcase all packed and I'm just about ready to leave forever. They can eat their own fish. Well, I guess I'll get the suitcase and start, he said.

And he went in and came out again with a big black shiny suitcase and started to walk away saying, Well, so long, I'll write to you from diffrent places.

Aw, that thing's empty, I said, and Sam said, Come and lift it and you'll find out.

And he put it down and me and Puds both lifted it and it was pretty heavy all rite Sam saying There's plenty in it, there's stuff for about a year, I've even got canned stuff and my allegeshun in case I get stuck some place and have to shoot birds.

And he picked up the suitcase again and one side of the handle broke and the suitcase banged down and opened and a lot of dirty laundry spill out, Sam saying, Aw rats, I went and took the wrong bag by mistake. O well, as long as I've got it this far I mite as well take it around to the laundry and get done with it.

Wich he kept on doing, proving he's still the biggest liar around.

CANADA HAS PART IN STORIED PAST OF EMPIRE ABBEY

Great Edifice Where Crowning Will Take Place May 12th Was Scene of Various Dominion Rites

By Thomas T. Champion

Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 14—(CP)—One of the last great services in Westminster Abbey, where King George and Queen Elizabeth will be crowned next month, was of special interest to Canada — the memorial service to General Sir Arthur Currie. This took place in the Abbey in December, 1933, simultaneously with the funeral in Montreal of the great Canadian war leader. The Abbey was also the scene of the funeral service of the first Lord Strathcona, great pioneer of the Canadian West in 1914.

Canada's Golden Jubilee was celebrated by a special service in the ancient edifice on Dominion Day in 1917, when the vast congregation consisted largely of war-wounded Canadians, of nurses, and of other men and women from Canada and the rest of the Empire engaged in London on war service. Another such service was held in 1927 to mark the Dominion's Diamond Jubilee.

Of all the commemorations to be held within the Abbey undoubtedly the most impressive was the burial of the Unknown Warrior Nov. 11, 1920. Immediately before the interment in the Abbey King George unveiled the cenotaph in Whitehall, less than a quarter of a mile away.

Memory of the spectacle of that one day remains ineffaceable with those who were privileged to witness it. One recalls the solemn quiet brooding over the great space of Whitehall, with the cenotaph standing solitary in its wrappings.

In the Abbey the open grave was within a few spaces of the west wall. King George stood at the head while sergeants of the Guards lowered the body into the depth, and the silence was broken only by the creaking of a cable in some distant corner. Part of the royal family, including the then Queen of Spain, stood at the far side of the grave while the sentences of committal were pronounced by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Gladstone's funeral in 1898 drew to the Abbey followers of Liberal thought from all corners of Europe, and in 1905 the funeral of Sir Henry Irving, the greatest stage presence of his day, drew the attention of the world to the arch-transept of the Abbey, familiarly known as Poets' Corner, where repose the dust of Chaucer and Spenser, and of Garrick, Irving's greatest predecessor.

Happier events in the Abbey of late years were the wedding of the present King and Queen, and the Duke and Duchess of Kent.

NEW WORKS MARK MUSIC SELLINGS FOR CORONATION

Tradition Big Element in Choral Program For Crowning But Modern Masters Are Given Salient Place.

By Thomas T. Champion
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, April 14—(CP)—Musical arrangements for the coronation in velvet-like Westminster Abbey are being made on an elaborate scale. Dr. James Bullock, organist of the Abbey, Sir Henry Walford Davies, Master of the King's Music and other prominent musicians, have for some months been considering the four-hour program in which a choir of about 500 will participate.

Some of the music for a coronation is traditional, including the setting of Tallis for the Litany, and that of Merbeck for the Nicene Creed, Purcell's setting of the Psalm "I Was Glad," has been rendered at every coronation since that of Charles I.

In additional to such traditional pieces the directors of the music are likely to endeavor to include examples of the work of representative English masters of different ages.

At the coronation of Edward VII, for instance, the more modern composers were represented by S. S. Wesley, Stainer and Sullivan. At the coronation of George V a place was found for works by Sir Edward Elgar, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Sir Edward Cowman, Sir Walford Davies celebrated. Solemn Melody was also included.

It will be specially interesting to learn whether Canada are to be included in the choir. For such a precedent one has to go back to the coronation of Queen Victoria, when one or two famous centatrices (whose names now are too lonely forgotten) found a place in the choir.

Primarily the choir will consist of the regular Abbey choir, with the "gentlemen and boys of the Chapels Royal," assisted by the choir of St. George's, Windsor. No doubt the Temple Church, which possesses a musical reputation equal to that of the Abbey, will send a contingent of shoristers. Picked singers from practically all over England will be eager to participate in so historic a ceremony, and there will be an orchestra of about 70 of the finest of London's instrumentalists.

Under the superintendency of Dr. Bullock, the Abbey is being completely rebuilt at a cost of $100,000. There are parts of the old instrument which go back to 1727, if not earlier. These, as far as possible will be preserved.

The new organ will have four manuals, 103 speaking stops and 34 couplers. The whole of the mechanism will be electrically-operated. In some of the details the organ will incorporate devices which have proved successful in the small instrument installed in the famous King's College, Cambridge.

Music World Famed

For the devout and finished rendering of its music the Abbey choirs have a reputation as widely established as Westminster Abbey. Even before the Reformation visitors from foreign countries journeyed especially to the Abbey because of its fine centuries included much masters as Orlando Gibbons, Henry Purcell, John Blow and William Croft.

The music composed by Purcell for the funeral of Queen Mary of Orange and sung at her funeral six months later Purcell was himself laid to rest in the Abbey as the Musicians' Aisle of the Abbey.

OUTLINES STAGES OF DEMOCRACY

Rev. W. J. Walker is Guest Speaker at Y's Men's

Rev. W. J. Walker, of the Presbyterian Church addressed the Y's Men's Club, Monday evening on "How I Would Solve the Economic Problems of the World", at their weekly meeting held in the Y.M.C.A.

Rev. Walker outlined the various stages of democracy from the very beginning. He started back at the time of depotic kings tracing the forms of government down through the militaristic Spartan State, the Athenian democracy, in which there were various class differences, the Roman State in which Caesar was worshipped as a god and the Christian democracy of the middle ages, the church being the head training all students and dictating to the State.

"The government under democracy is rapidly going further and further into debt," said Rev. Walker. "Every year, our taxes increase and must increase for years to come. Large industrial corporations that have become unwieldy and burdened with debt have been taken over by the government. Sooner or later we will reach the stage where the government takes over all industry and every thing else, when this stage is reached, the government will become a dictator. We must chose whether we want a dictatorship such as in Russia, where the dictatorship is held by the people or as in Germany where an individual is the dictator."

"If we could place our faith in God," continued Rev. Walker, "we could easily solve our problems. We have reached the cross roads, we must either take the road to Christianity or the road to a dictatorship. Which is it to be?"

Misses Jean and Betty Shorey favoured the club with two lovely vocal selections. George Paisley was Sergeant-at-arms and Newton Thompson the song leader.

Crosscutting is also proceeding to pick up the extension of the No. 1 vein, which has already been opened up for about 150 feet showing high grade ore over good widths. This will give the ore body a determined length of approximately 775 feet north east of the shaft on the one level. The No. 3 vein has been drifted on for approximately 200 feet showing an average grade of about one ounce gold per ton.

FLAGS CARRIED IN PICKET LINE

Plan to Show Union of Employees Not a Communistic One

Oshawa, Ont., April 14—(CP)—A picket line of 100 girl strikers carrying Union flags, paraded about the foremen and other employees who were working in the parts and service department of General Motors of Canada, Limited, as the strike entered its second week-end today at seventh day.

The girls carried the flags to show the Employees' Union, the United Automobile Workers of America, was not communistic and to show they had no dealings with communism, Union officials said. There were no men in the picket line. About 400 employees entered the building at seven o'clock and 100 entered the plant an hour later. The picket line was to be finished.

"I am not afraid of all the people in the union. Nothing Bolshevistic is in the union. We are all loyal British subjects, loyal to the King. If we can eradicate some of the wrongs of industrial efficiency have been done we are quite content."

Gave Lives For Democracy

Thompson told the gathering many of the veterans' comrades gave their lives for democracy.

"It is up to the Premier of this province of Ontario to do his part also to force the Government you fought for," Thompson said.

"We demand industrial democracy no matter what the cost. We maintain it is a right," he said. "We demand it and by the help of God we will get it they want to live.

"This meeting here is a beacon to anyone who wishes to tear down democratic institutions by dictatorial methods to force the workers and men from having anyone they wish to represent them. It is the right of every Canadian to fight for industrial democracy."

Mrs. Ada McNeily, United Church minister, declared during the war all soldiers were equal alike to take a three-fold oath to God, King and Country."

"We want to be sons the less virile in peace time," he said.

"Our task is to defend the empire. Let no one say that veterans are lawless or lacking in obedience to the King, the country or his laws."

VETERANS OPPOSE

in the strike who happened to come here from the United States," said Dr. R. B. Kaiser, former Conservative member of parliament for Ontario County, who addressed the veterans.

"I have this observation to make: So far as the citizens of Oshawa are concerned the first invasion of Canadians into this city was in the nature of what has been called effectives.

"It was an American poison, which says a man should not have to belong to a union if he does not oppose it. It is that phase of Americanism I oppose and oppose strongly.

"Where that poison grows and spreads there is only misery and ruin by an attitude, and it seems that the so-called American labor agitators are that antidote. I am not going to oppose there being here a union. That is finished.

"I am not afraid of all the people in the union. Nothing Bolshevistic is in the union. We are all loyal British subjects, loyal to the King. If we can eradicate some of the wrongs of industrial efficiency have been done we are quite content."

Gave Lives For Democracy

Thompson told the gathering many of the veterans' comrades gave their lives for democracy.

"It is up to the Premier of this province of Ontario to do his part also to force the Government you fought for," Thompson said.

"We demand industrial democracy no matter what the cost. We maintain it is a right," he said. "We demand it and by the help of God we will get it they want to live.

"This meeting here is a beacon to anyone who wishes to tear down democratic institutions by dictatorial methods to force the workers and men from having anyone they wish to represent them. It is the right of every Canadian to fight for industrial democracy."

Mrs. Ada McNeily, United Church minister, declared during the war all soldiers were equal alike to take a three-fold oath to God, King and Country."

"We want to be sons the less virile in peace time," he said.

"Our task is to defend the empire. Let no one say that veterans are lawless or lacking in obedience to the King, the country or his laws."

Rocky Bluff

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck whose resignation with Ontario Cabinet Minister was asked for today by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, declared he had nothing to say when questioned.

The attorney general arrived at Osgoode Hall by bridge shortly after o'clock. The letter from the premier asking for his resignation reached at Hon. David A. Croll, Labor Minister, was on the attorney general's desk when he arrived. Reporters heard of the situation before reaching their respective offices and began questioning.

"Well, I suppose you are expecting something different from my usual attitude," said the attorney general. "Well, it's the same. I have nothing to say."

Mr. Roebuck then entered his office where work seemed suspended, his staff standing in whispering groups.

No Statement By Croll

Mr. Croll also had no comment to make. It was declared no statement would be forthcoming from the Labor minister.

Toronto, Apr. 14 (CP)—Premier Hepburn's action in requesting two cabinet ministers today was a result of disagreements and not of disturbances that traced lagged recently across the political seismograph during the Ontario legislature was closed in March.

Nothing would any bearing on the other, or on today's developments, Hepburn said, between the Premier and his colleagues.

ridge Conservative Association in Kingstreng; my function has been that of mediator and conciliator, my duty to effect amicable settlements and so restore production in the industry. Demands of a reasonable nature of men in the Province of Ontario have come to look to me as their protector and friend. I am confident, I feel that I cannot now fail them. If the impression gets abroad that the government is anti-labor, anti-worker or anti-union, all the very splendid social legislation produced by this government will become of no value —and industrial peace which I have tried so hard and until last week successfully, to establish, will vanish from our province.

ALEMITE PLANT CONTINUES WORK

Strike at Oshawa Will Not Curtail Manufacturing Here

"Irrespective of the fact we have received orders from the General Motors Corp. that we are to cease fabrication of parts for the company's plant in Oshawa to forget on working" declared Mr. W. R. Rowsome, general manager of the local plant of the Alemite and Warner-Alemite Corporation of Canada.

Mr. Rowsome scotched rumours that the plant had or intended to shut down.

"We're going to keep right on working. We have about 175 employees here and we're going to provide work for them just as long as we can. We have no intention of shutting down, regardless of what they may do in Oshawa," stated the general manager.

"As far as General Motors parts are concerned we are not affected, but we have sufficient orders for parts from other companies to keep us going for some time." it was added.

MRS. FAULKNER

inent Mrs. Faulkner and Arnold Moody, David Burnahine and Waldemar Wilson, were among those competing and the tournament was a supreme test of bridge skill.

Mrs. Faulkner flew to Montreal from Toronto with her her collection of bridge trophies. They completely cover the long mantel piece in her home in Bowden and are a dazzling array of beautifully designed cups, twenty-eight in all by actual count. Although Mrs. Faulkner herself had no idea of the total number she has acquired. The cups range in size from tiny individual awards to the magnificent solid silver trophy worth seven hundred dollars, received by her when she won the American title in Chicago on the occasion of four. It bears the names of such distinguished former winners as Culbertson, Burnside, etc. The latest tournament she won in New York is a striking cup topped with a golden figurine in silver. In addition to conventional cups, Mrs. Faulkner has some lovely gifts, an inlaid card table, table silver pieces and other mementoes.

Complimented by Press

Writing of the two Canadian women the Montreal Press says: "Mrs. Faulkner and Mrs. Anderson competed for the southern New York contract bridge title. The Canadian women said by the Herald Tribune League officials to hold the best 1936 women's record in the United States and Canada yesterday captured the women's pair championship in the Contract Bridge League's 1937 contract bridge tournament by an ample 34 to 4 match victory.

"The same pair, Mrs. W. M. Anderson and Mrs. Faulkner, who, as Mrs. Faulkner of Belleville, wife of the Province's Minister of Health, will represent Canada in the qualifying round for the Binghampton Trophy tournament in Buffalo next month, defeated the national team of four event, 1936 champions, by a score of the Canadian-American team of Mrs. Dwight Parker, who was the first among the women in the national league tournament to accomplish in New York recently and Mrs. Anderson was second.

"The board on which they made their biggest swing was the twenty-two-point one which they scored seven diamonds. Only one other of the 22 points scored by the winners that other bid was a small slam made without overtricks in a make on a three no trump bid at one board at other tables was game."

Mrs. Faulkner has now to begin defending the title she won in Montreal on Monday for New York with Mrs. Anderson. Mr. Shearer-down and Mr. Faulkner will take part in a tournament the winning team of which is to be Budapest for a world tourney.

CANADIANS LOSE

ment. Three hundred feeder planes in Canada are out of work. Oshawa workmen are losing wages. Canada's citizens are losing business. The matter cannot continue indefinitely, and there may be a showdown at any time.

"The matter could be settled within half an hour's time except for the point that the General Motors will not recognize the Union," declared Mr. Ketchen. "If the International union will recognize the men, then it may be that they will have reason for instituting upon recognition. The sole point of difference, however, involves international united action. To date such has not been forthcoming. Not only are General Motors cars not being sold in Canada, but we are losing our export trade. My duty is clear cut to me. I must endeavor to protect the interests of my fellow citizens."

The Ultimatum.

"Unless an agreement is negotiated between the General Motors and the Union at a conference before the end of the week, I am demanding that the members of your union in the United States go out on strike. I cannot bear to see Canadian workmen losing. Already 4,000 are unemployed, and growing. Such conduct negatives the standing of an international union.

"Unless the agreement is signed so that these men can start to work Monday morning, I expect the General Motors plants in the United States will be closed down. Failing this I am calling a mass meeting of citizens of Oshawa, and laying the matter before them. I shall tell them that they are being fooled and misled, and that the union is a national union is not playing the game with Canada. It is now also any antagonistic sense, but in order to force a showdown. Further negotiations are merely delay the issue.

Interests of Men.

"All of the powers at my command will be called in to advise the men that the position I have taken and am confident that the reason that I will be upheld at any time that I am sufficiently sound to convince the men. Please consider that the issue is now at a head.

"I am forwarding copies of this letter to the Hon. W. Cumberland and to Mr. Hugh Thompson.

"Yours very truly, Mayor Alex C. Hall."

Federal Action Remote.

Ottawa, April 14 (CP)—Dominion government intervention in the Oshawa motor strike appeared more remote today than at any time since the dispute began. Hon. Norman Rogers, minister of labour, followed conversations with close interest but declined to say that an agreement was

2ND THURLOW

2nd Thurlow—A large crowd of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Atkins on Friday night in honor of their son, Gordon and his wife who have started house keeping recently, and held a miscellaneous shower. A lot of useful and lovely gifts were received. An address was read by Mrs. Arnold Mitchell to which suitable replies were made. Cards and dancing were in progress, cake, coffee and sandwiches were served. All report a good time. The Address was as follows:—

Dear Helen and Gordon:

A home is built of wood and stone
Of sills, and posts, and piers,
But a home is built of loving deeds
That last a thousand years.

We welcome the establishment of a new home in the community and have gathered here tonight to extend our good wishes to you, its founders. We hope that it will be a happy abode, where may be found at all times, the friendly individuals who make it up. In continued harmony and co-operation. Since you, Gordon, have always been, and Helen was for some time a member in our community, we do not need to sound the welcome note, but offer our wishes that your stay in the neighborhood may be long and happy.

Now that you are assuming the responsibilities of life, we have gathered here to enjoy social intercourse, which we hope, will be followed by many more such occasions bringing to you their tidings It is well that you both have been associated with the activities of this neighborhood, so that you may feel "at home" among us, and feel free to take part in the general routine of the community life.

We expect that all times you will meet with the obstacles which occasionally appear along life's way, and so in that regard we say,

Should clouds arise, we grant that they
With silver may be lined,
But quickly vanish even those
Leaving no trace behind.

And happy may your voyage be,
With sunshine all along,
To brighten both your paths, and make
Your lives one grand sweet song.

Now with yourselves your joys may rest,
We hope they will not be few,
When many years have rolled around,
With pleasure you'll review.

Now again we wish to extend to you our good wishes by way of a little start along your life's journey and ask you to accept the gifts we have brought that they may in the years to come, remind you of many happy thoughts which surround this gathering here tonight. Signed on behalf of the community by:

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw—On Tuesday evening of last week Mr. A. B. Baird, Ecclesiologist in charge of Department of Agriculture Parasite Laboratory, Belleville, gave a splendid address to the members of St. Mark's Church Men's Club, explaining in a most interesting manner the work being carried by the Entomological Branch. A number of the ladies were also present.

The Rector, Canon W. G. Swayne, presided at the meeting. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Baird for his kindness in addressing the club, and in return he gave a pressing invitation to all to visit the Laboratory whenever they could make it convenient to do so.

On Wednesday evening of last week a large number of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Fleming to bid them adieu and wish them all success and happiness in their new home. Mr. and Mrs. Fleming and family are moving to Marmora in the near future.

Mr. W. J. Barlow called the meeting to order and read an address expressing the regret of the community in losing them from our immediate vicinity and wishing them well during the years to come.

As a token of respect and a remembrance Mr. and Mrs. Fleming were presented with a beautiful electric table lamp and an occasional chair, Ralph was given a pair of military brushes, Ross a fountain pen, and Nellie a doll cradle.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Fleming made suitable replies thanking their friends and inviting them to visit them at any time in their new home.

After singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds," the ladies served sandwiches, cake and coffee and a very social hour or two was enjoyed by all.

The Address

To Mr. and Mrs. D. Fleming and family:—

Your near neighbors and fellow citizens who have known you for many years and have had intercourse with you in various ways but always with amity and good will, feel a sense of great loss individually and collectively at the prospect of your removal from our immediate neighborhood. You have always manifested a keen interest in the welfare and progress of our community, agriculturally, educationally, socially and religiously.

Your two sons Ralph and Ross have and are taking their places and are endeavouring to do their part steadfastly and well. We will miss them very much.

Little Nellie in her brief life of two years in our midst has endeared herself to all by her sweetness and happy smiles which we shall always remember.

Part of the large crowd of striking workers who heard Homer Martin, Detroit organizer for the United Automobile Workers of America and other C.I.O. representatives address striking workers from the General Motors plant at Oshawa, Ont., in a mass meeting, are shown at right. They heard Martin castigate Premier Hepburn of Ontario and General Motors' executives for their adamant refusal to parley with "American organizers" in efforts to settle the strike. Martin and his aides declared that General Motors must sign an agreement at Oshawa similar to the one signed by the parent corporation in United States, and voiced threats to call out the American factories in a new strike if their demands were refused. Homer Martin, who arrived from Detroit by aeroplane, is pictured at LEFT.

BRITAIN SENDS H.M.S. HOOD TO BILBAO TO PROT ECT SHIPPING

Giving point to repeated warnings to the insurgent government against interference with British merchantmen on the high seas, Britain sent to Bilbao, where an insurgent fleet has established an armed blockade to prevent food and war materials reaching the Loyalist garrison, the huge battleship H.M.S. Hood, the world's largest fighting craft. An emergency meeting of the full cabinet was called in London when insurgent commander Franco warned Sir Henry Chilton (left), British ambassador in Spain that he would risk an international incident rather than allow seven British food ships to enter Bilbao harbor. The Hood steamed at full speed from Gibraltar as a warning of Britain's naval might, but as present orders are to protect British shipping on the high seas only, ships entering Spanish territorial waters will not be accorded armed protection. The Hood, stripped for action, is at the RIGHT.

N.Y. POLICE STILL SEEKING KILLER'S SUSPECT

Conflicting reports, some indicating that their quarry had committed suicide, others that he is ready to surrender and still others that he is still fleeing, faced New York police frantically seeking Robert Irwin, youthful sculptor whom they allege was the murderer of Ronnie Gedeon, her mother and a boarder in New York's Easter Sunday triple murder. Police followed their clues over many states, still without definite knowledge of Irwin's whereabouts. Officials indicated that they believed him mentally deranged and unfit for trial while he is pictured top right. Two posts of pretty Miss Gedeon who was much in demand as an artist's and photographers' model are also shown. Irwin was a former suitor of Miss Gedeon and her sister.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Queerest Adventure

By Pauline Delmay

Marion Cleveland stopped her roadster at the gate of an old house that sat on the hillside.

"Well, Cousin Phyllis," said Marion, turning lovely green eyes on her middle-aged relative, "here is the old Cleveland homestead, and it looks wickedly lonesome to me!"

Cousin Phyllis sighed dramatically. "Well, Marion—let us go and find Letty Brown and then look for them Willis to clear up the yard."

Marion started the car and they sped down the street and stopped at the lane where Letty Brown lived. Cousin Phyllis alighted and went to see about Letty herself. Presently she came back with a stout comfortable colored woman who greeted Marion with indulgent affection.

Letty climbed into the rumble seat which with her belongings, she fitted snugly. She sat there proudly as the roadster went along and stopped at a small, neat house with closed shutters.

"Sam Willis, ma'am, he's left town," informed Letty.

"I guess, ma'am, it was directly after he rented your house to the artist—about a month ago."

"What artist? What right had Sam to rent it?"

Mr. Adams, ma'am. I think his name is—is a real nice, harmless gentleman. He lives in the little seat wing and eats at the inn. He spends a lot of time out on the bay—just goes out the back gate and gets into his boat and off he goes plumb'n'."

"What did Judge Lenis think about it?" asked Marion Cleveland.

"Oh, I reckon de judge don't think nothing more about anything things, ma'am. He went to glory about two months ago."

Just then the roadster drew up at the gate.

They entered the great dusky hall and Marion threw open the doors into large rooms where a green gloom lingered, for all the window shutters were tightly closed.

"You go and raise all the window shades and open the shutters and then the windows," commanded Miss Phyllis. When Letty had departed on her window job, Miss Phyllis suddenly grasped Marion's arm and whispered in her ear. "Did you hear a sound upstairs?"

Marion replied: "A cautious sound as if someone was there who had no right to be there! Suppose we find the painter, Mr. Adams, first."

Then they went outside and knocked at the outer door of the two-roomed wing, and the door opened and revealed a young man in a painter's smock, with a pipe between his lips. He smiled pleasantly.

"Are you Mr. Adams?" inquired Cousin Phyllis, and that being settled, the lady sat down on the steps and told how Sam Willis had leased a trust. When she had told the whole story, Mr. Adams shook his head gravely.

"I am sorry, Miss Cleveland, but while I thought it queer that such a character as Willis should be in charge of this fine old place, he gave me what appeared to be a good receipt for the rent, and, not so long ago, suddenly appeared one night and collected for another month. So you see I have paid the rent up to the first of October. Of course, if you consider it an intrusion, I will pack up and go over to the inn tonight, but I hope that you will let me stay. You see, I am painting your old place from the bay, and it is getting along pretty well."

Just at that moment they heard Letty's voice lifted in shrill screeches from the front of the house, and then brushing hastily past them, hurried to the front yard.

"Yes, sah!" sobbed Letty hysterically, "I was opening this here shutter when, suddenly I turned my eye 'round and I see the front door opening, and there—like and then I see an eye and a nose, white man's nose, and then I yelled and he dodged back again."

"Be calm, Letty, no harm will come to you. Just some tramp, I suppose." Then he suddenly darted away toward the back yard and the women heard masculine voices in argument. Presently Mr. Adams returned and in his strong fingers was the shirt collar of Samuel Willis, who looked frowsier than ever and very much ashamed.

"Just caught him sneaking out of the back door, Miss Cleveland," he said to Cousin Phyllis. "Sam is awfully ashamed of himself, but Satan certainly tempted him to rent the cast wing to me and you told two months' rent. He has been hiding in the attic over your sunken kitchen, going over to Bentown nights for a good time and to buy supplies, and then coming back here to hide. He hasn't spent all the sixty dollars yet, have you Sam?"

Sam shamefacedly paid most of the sixty dollars to Miss Phyllis and meekly cleared up the whole place into immaculate order.

When the first of October came, John Adams was so much in love with Marion that he confessed it to Miss Phyllis. "I guess it's mutual John, smiled Miss Phyllis, "and we certainly need a man around the place!"

So he married Marion and they are still there.

SIT-DOWN STRIKE IS DENOUNCED

U. S. Representative Labor Committee Opposed to Sit-Downs

Washington, April 13—(AP)—The United States House of Representatives Labor Committee approved today a Senate resolution denouncing sit-down strikes, Company unions and industrial espionage.

Washington, April 13 — (AP) — Campaigns to enact wage and hour standards and to outlaw sit-down strikes appeared imminent today in the aftermath to the Supreme Court's validation of the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Conflicting predictions about the effect of the historic decisions on the Judiciary Reorganization Bill also sustained suspense at the United States Capitol.

Will Force Ford Co'y Says Homer Martin

Detroit, April 13—(AP)—Homer Martin, President of the United Automobile Workers of America, predicted today the United States Government would "force" the Ford Motor Company to deal with the Union under the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

Jubilant over the Supreme Court decision upholding the Wagner Act, he declared that "a strike to force Henry Ford to recognize the U. A. W. A. will not be necessary now."

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

When the love-mad prince tried to embrace her, Jane struck him sharply, then jumped back and leveled her spear to hold him off. For a moment they stood facing each other silently, and in his eyes she saw something that made her fear him for the first time.

She knew then how really dangerous he was; it was no longer difficult for her to believe he had murdered his wife. "Go up there with the others, as I told you," Tarmah's mate said coolly; "or I'll kill you. There is no law here but the law of the jungle."

Slocrov apparently read a firm determination in her narrowed lids and icy stare, for he did as she bid and walked ahead in silence. Toward mid-afternoon, Jane called a halt and prepared to make camp for the night. Then she and Brown went out to seek food.

When they had disappeared, Alexis suggested that Tibbs go out to gather firewood and material for a shelter. "I'll help you, Tibbs," Annette offered, and started after him, but Slocrov laid a restraining hand on her arm. "I want to talk to you—alone!"

Dance Hall Lady

— by —

Jane Clayton

"You got to," Ray nodded wisely. "You got to do more than that. You got to catch on now to make the strays, fellows that just come in for a look, come with you for the sake of someone else. Some of the baffled work you'll do is just sitting. You always got to remember to keep on promoting yourself, smiling and giving fellows the eye, making them think you're a hot number with a hot line. It ain't so much," she ended airily.

"It sounds difficult."

Her gaze glued warily on the door, Ray lingered to demand, "Where did your work before?"

"I have never worked before."

"I know you haven't worked in a palace of dance, but I mean daytimes."

"I've never had a real job before."

Plainly Ray was astounded, so astounded that momentarily she forgot to watch the door.

"Never worked!" she exclaimed. She added with skeptical frankness, "You look pretty old, as if you was at least 21."

"I'm 22," admitted Anne sadly, a bit startled at Ray's estimation of her age.

"And never worked," mused little Ray. "I'm 17 and I've worked four years. I had to get my first work permit papers," she finished proudly and yet with a certain gentleness in her face that made Anne say hastily: "What I mean was that I've never had to work for a living. I've studied, and that's certainly work."

Still Ray lingered further to investigate the mystery.

"We have some collegiates coming here," she remarked, still rather skeptical. "Are you generally finish up by the time they're 22, and even the dumb ones."

"Working music is different," Anne summarized it over the first notes of the orchestra.

Ray did not hear. Her sharp eyes had spied a silent making his way up the stairs, and she started hurriedly for her own table, dashing a powder puff on an already whitened countenance. A few minutes later she was on the floor, her vivid little face turned up to the face of one of her partners.

Anne, alert and interested, settled herself to await her fate and to watch the others. The dances were very short, allowing the fastest couple only three turns of the room, and as the end of each dance the girl received from her escort a green ticket, which she dropped to a bag at her wrist, a ticket which most ten cent DVe went to the management, five to the hostess. Anne fan wanting for a while.

At the conclusion of an eventless half hour it ceased to be fun. Anne had hardly expected to be besieged. Neither had she expected that the evening would go like this. Every man who appeared in the dance hall, after stopping at the ticket booth made his way like a homing pigeon to some particular girl, now to one, now to another, and at her. None came near. Like the others, Anne fell to watching the door expectantly; like the others, she smiled, moved her shoulders in time to the music. Still nothing happened.

Ray had danced every dance, but the overflow she had mentioned did not materialize. Relative Anne resented the generosity of the other's offer. The hostesses at Lotsaland were not an altruistic group. Every one of them considered every other as a deadly rival, at least during business hours.

There was one girl, a colorful, heavy-lidded, red-head, whom Anne remembered vaguely as Sunny, a girl who on a dull evening managed to achieve an overflow, three regulars arriving within less than ten minutes. Sunny's elaborate manoeuvres to maintain the overflow, to prevent any part of it from trickling to less favored tables, were apparent even to Anne. Two of the men must necessarily wait, but over the shoulder of her fortunate partner Sunny contrived to flirt, to smile, to look mute promises, all with the grace and ease of a practiced coquette.

Fifteen minutes later, Conrad paused briefly at Anne's table to assure the disconsolate girl that the evening was duller than any in his memory, that things were certain to pick up on the following night, that they always did. She was little comforted. Being a wallflower was a new, an unwelcome experience. If she had not accepted money so badly, she might have found her plight absurd. She did need money. She was a trifle curt with the beaming, explanatory manager. And then he did her a good turn.

He crossed the room. Gently but firmly he extracted one of the men from Sunny's trio and brought him over for an introduction. Anne carried with her to the floor a memory of Sunny's murderous glance. Sunny need not have worried. After one dance, Joe Smithson established as a cheap freeman urged upon his sister's roommate, and satisfied that, though Anne danced well, she wasn't what Con had cracked her up to be. He returned to Sunny.

Anne busily pretended that she did not care. She continued to pretend as partnerless dance followed partnerless dance. She was starving down at the tablecloth, singing an almost inaudible little tune, when someone dropped into the chair opposite. Somewhere inside her fell a wave of relief and a vicious desire that Sunny should notice, she raised her eyes to the cynical eye of Richard Greene.

"Why didn't you tell me you sang—any?" he asked casually.

Her face blazed at his tone, at his use of her first name, and then went stiff and expressionless.

"You promised me you wouldn't come here," she said woodenly.

'A promise I never meant to keep. You knew that, didn't you?"

She made no response.

"Are you sorry I came?"

Again she looked at him.

"Not sorry particularly, certainly not glad—just indifferent, I suppose."

"Still the maid of snow and ice, eh?"

To that she made no comment; there was no comment to make. Richard continued to study her, not rudely, admiringly rather, but Anne did not want his admiration. An hour before she would not have remembered her indifference. She had learned in an hour. Richard gesticulated around the room.

"You don't like it much?"

"I haven't had a chance to decide," she answered in a tone less hostile.

"You'd better change your mind and come to the Club Topaze," he suggested suddenly. "There's a sense in the little stuff for you. You'll knock 'em cold there; you've got what it takes."

"I've not exactly knocked them cold here," she pointed out mildly.

His white, suave teeth flashed. "This is rough stuff. They don't appreciate the real thing here, but in a night club these days, you'd be surprised how far one can go. Topaze, for instance"—again he smiled—"go for what you've got, personality plus class. And Chick told me you sang. You see, I knew that."

In the beginning of this speech Anne had collapsed against the back, reference to the events of Sunday had experienced a return of coldness and of caution.

"I don't want to work there," she told him. "I don't drink, I don't like being around drunkards, and I don't want to be associated with a Broadway set. Working here is anonymous, anyhow; nobody ever need learn about it if I don't want them to. This is only temporary; I have other plans for myself."

She knew that she had spoken childishly and somewhat pompously. She feared that she had let him guess some thing of the real reason for her refusal. The real reason was Richard himself. Even the girl hardly understood the strength of her determination to accept nothing from him; she hardly understood why his easy, insistent charm would be so vaguely alarming to her.

Richard leaned across the table, his brown, strong hands clasped loosely on the cloth. His eyes drew and held Anne's eyes. She tried to look away and could not. There was a certain compelling magnetism about the man. She feared and hated him, and yet she felt ill.

"Look here, Miss Lee," he began earnestly, unsmilingly, "please tell me why you dislike me so? I made a mistake yesterday, but I've said I was sorry. Don't bother lying about what you think of me," he said, when she started to interrupt. "I know you do, and me you've kicked me around like the office cat. Why?"

For a split moment he felt silent, but quite in the old, despondent fash. ion. "I've an idea for you. Why don't you try disliking me a little less each day? Take it easy, and maybe in a week or so you'll find you could stand the sight of my ugly face."

All this was said with such basic humility and with an apparently ingenuous charm that Anne softened.

"Perhaps I don't really dislike you," she conceded with a certain insecure note of friendliness.

"Splendid! How's to dance to prove it?"

As she hesitated, he added, a grin twitching at his mouth and shining in his strange, gray eyes:

"Our dance will be purely business if you prefer it."

He dropped a spoot of the covered, green tablecloth, rolled the spoot toward her.

"One at a time," she said some of her earlier stiffness returning.

I assure you that the regulars hand them out in bunches. Let's say that tonight that I'm a regular of yours."

"All right, let's say it."

GREEN-EYES

CHAPTER SEVEN

At one o'clock the lights of Lotsaland winked out, the last waiter after gaiety clattered off down the stairs, and the Happytown Boys yawned, packed up their instruments and went home.

One o'clock was the hour in the girls' dressing room, the hour when the evening was analyzed, argued, sedlinely discussed. Just as definitely began at their wraps, exchanging remarks on the success of the party, so did the hostesses at Lotsaland boast of their compliments or explain the lack of them, often girls chattered in unison, interrupting, exclaiming, borrowing powder and lipstick, undressing, pecsing now and again to light a cigarette or to stretch cramped, tired young bodies.

Anne was weary from the long, exciting day, glad to see the last of it. Although she took no part in the conversation, her former sense of isolation was gone; by now the others accepted her as one of themselves. She shrewdly and correctly suspected that Richard Greene's open attentions were at least partially responsible. Several of the girls paused by her locker to throw out cautious feelers, and it was plain that they were trying to find out where she had met him, how long she had known him, and what she had said while she danced.

Anne neatly parried all inquiries. Certainly she had no wish to discuss Richard as a possible conquest, not even with Irene; she was too unsure of what she herself thought of him. One by one the questioners retreated.

Wanting in answer questions of her own, Anne looked around for Ray. But Ray had not yet come in from the ballroom. Oh, well, questions could wait. Anne yawned and kicked off her dancing shoes. She was alone at the dressing table combing her hair, when a tall girl in gray dropped to the same bench.

"You better watch out for Sunny," the girl said in a confidential whisper. "She's on the war path. In fact you better watch your step all around."

With that she slipped away. There was no chance for Anne to ask explanations, for at that instant Sunny apparently was indeed on the war path. All conversation, all action in the dressing room ceased as the full-blown, voluptuous girl, her eyes blazing, her bosom heaving, approached Anne.

"Say, you, whatever your name is," she began in a high, shrill voice, that on a quiet night could have been heard for blocks. "What do you think you're trying to pull?"

"Nothing," said Anne.

Her high, shrill voice shook with rage. "I guess you weren't trying to steal one of my regulars?"

"Of course I wasn't."

"Listen to that, would you—listen to that. Sunny bitterly addressed the room at large. "Just listen to little Miss Innocent. If you weren't trying to walk off with Joe Smithson," she demanded of Anne, "why'd you send Con to snag him off of me?"

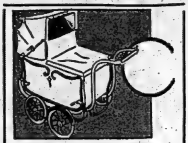
"I didn't send Con."

"He just asked Joe to dance with you out of the goodness of his heart, I suppose."

"That's right."

"Well, it aint right and it ain't fair and I won't stand for it. If Joe wanted to dance with you I wouldn't squawk, but he didn't want to, he was dragged. And you had him dragged!"

There was an audible hush.



"You got him back, didn't you?" Anne inquired casually. The angry Sunny permitted herself a triumphant smile.

FEDERAL POLICY 'VACILLATING', SAYS HEPBURN

Province Will Maintain Law, Order in Ontario Premier Declares Today

Hepburn Definitely Breaks With Federal Authorities And Says He Will Ask Withdrawal of Dominion Police

CHARGES COMMUNISTS 'ACTIVE'

Refers to Possibility of Disturbances in Ontario if Outbreak Should Occur at Oshawa Strike Area

Toronto, April 15.—(CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn today made a definite break with the Dominion authorities concerning the maintenance of law and order in Ontario, during the present strike situation.

Because of what he called the "Vacillating policy" of the Federal Government in the tense strike situation at Oshawa, he said, the Provincial Government will from now on assume full responsibility for the meantenance of law and order in the Province.

"We'll know where we stand when we handle the situation ourselves," he declared.

The Premier said in a few hours he would "advise Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe at Ottawa to withdraw all Dominion Police from this locality." The Premier restated at the same time another 200 extra Provincial Police would be mobilized to be added to the 200 obtained earlier in the week.

Possibility of Outbreak

He declared police reports indicated possibility of disturbances in various parts of the Province if any outbreak occurred in Oshawa. Mr. Hepburn explained disturbances in other parts of Ontario, according to police reports, would be staged so as to divide the number of Provincial Police available for an Oshawa disturbance.

Also on hand were "definite reports by the police on communist activities at Oshawa," said the Premier. He could not disclose these "for obvious reasons."

In describing the situation existing between his gov-

HEPBURN DID NOT ASK TROOPS SAYS MACKENZIE

Federal Government Has Not Agreed to Send Soldiers to Oshawa

MEETING PERSONAL

Ottawa Government Not to Intervene in Strike Says King

Ottawa, April 15.—(CP)— The Federal Government has not agreed to send troops to Oshawa and Premier Hepburn of Ontario never requested troops, it was announced here today by Defence Minister Mackenzie.

The Minister was commenting on Premier Hepburn's announcement in Toronto last night he had been advised by Mr. Mackenzie he could have all the assistance he needed to deal with the Oshawa strike situation.

"All we have to do is ask for assistance and it will be granted," Mr. Hepburn said, adding: "Police and all other resources are at our disposal."

No Request Made

In a statement today, Mr. Mackenzie said: "No such request (for troops) was received or granted. My conversation with Premier Hepburn at luncheon was purely personal. No matter of public policy was discussed. That is a matter for the government as a whole, and the government announced its policy here yesterday.

"I made no representations on behalf or the government or any department. The government's position did I have any communication with my colleagues, direct from the city, with respect to this or any other matter."

Hepburn's Comments.

Toronto, Apr. 15 (CP)—Commenting on a statement made at Ottawa today by Hon. Ian Mackenzie that the federal government has not agreed to send troops to Oshawa, Premier Hepburn said today:

"I have had conversations with Premier Hepburn said today:

"I have had conversations with Premier Hepburn and George McCullagh, Mr. Mackenzie said that the entire resources of his department would be placed at my disposal at my request at any time. He said this offer unsolicited. I did not ask him for any assistance. It is not necessary for him to send troops."

Dartmoor Mutiny Plan for Coronation Day Foiled

Dutch Princess Censured For Desescrating Sabbath

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, Apr. 15 (AP)—Church and secular newspapers today censured Crown Princess Juliana and Prince Bernhard, just returned from their honeymoon, for "desecrating the Sabbath."

One of the newspapers was the Rotterdammer, a strong supporter of Premier Hendrikus Colijn which commented reprovingly on reports the royal newly-weds played golf and visited places of amusement on Sundays.

"The Christian portion of our people listened with pain and sadness from reports about the princely honeymoon of repeated desecrations and failure to observe the Sabbath," the paper said.

It said the love of Juliana's future subjects "would suffer, if in our midst she and her husband "should continue to treat the Sunday commands with as little regard as newspaper stories indicate they do now."

3,000 REBELS CUT OFF IN MADRID

Several Attempts Made to Break Through Explosive Circles

Madrid, April 15—(AP)— Three thousand insurgents in the University City suburb, virtually isolated from the rest of General Franco's army, were reported today cut off for the first time from supplies of food and ammunition.

Government artillery, Asturian dynamiters, machine and machine gunners continued sweeping the outer ends of their communications with the adjoining Casa De Campo sector, at the western edge of the capital.

Several attempts to break through the explosive circles and relieve the garrison were shattered yesterday. The insurgents buried tanks several times toward the small, still open but shell-raked gap into University City fast was caught by distant "dinamiteros" and forced back.

Insurgent infantrymen made a desperate attempt to advance behind the tanks but met fires with a spray of thousands of machine bullets.

Fire was concentrated on the party destroyed wooden bridge spanning the Manzanares river between Casa de Campo and University City. Artillery bombardment prevented insurgent attempts to repair the bridge.

Tired Tots Curl up On Top of Porch

Hamilton, Ont., April 15 (CP)— After spending the night on the porch of a House in Lilly Billy and Emma Thorkildson, Hamilton tots who disappeared yesterday, came home today.

Billy, 10, and Emma, 9, left home yesterday for the city dental clinic. Their treatment at the clinic they related themselves until evening while their mother called police.

The two children said the relatives' home last night they apparently became tired and sometime the homeward march, so they curled up for a sleep on the porch.

LONGSHOREMEN AT HAMILTON STRIKE

Ask 50 cts. an Hour For Day, And 55 cts. For Sundays, Holidays

Hamilton, Ont., April 15—(CP)— On the day of the opening of navigation, 235 longshoremen went on strike today demanding an increase in hourly rates.

Last year the men struck against a similar rate of 40 cents per hour and negotiations brought a 42 cent rate for regular work and 48 for Sundays, holidays and night. The agreement covering these rates of pay came to a close at the end of the 1936 shipping season.

This year the men ask 50 cents per hour for days, and 55 for holidays, Sundays and nights. Since the contract has been signed with the companies for the 1937 season, the strike is technically a hold-out, as the men are not yet employed.

Two days' notice has been given with the Canada Steamship Lines since the beginning of the year, and the demand has been for 45 cents per hour for day and 47 for night, Sundays and holidays. At a recent meeting in Toronto, the majority of the union men voted this down.

Two days' telephonic voting today went to the C.S.L. terminal here preparatory to loading the Stormont which should clear from Hamilton April 20. The men left the job within a few minutes.

TWO-MAN RAID NIPPED BY COPS

Londoners Plead Guilty to Theft of Copper

London, Ont., April 15 (CP) — Rapid increase during the past year in the price of scrap copper was believed responsible for a raid on the Canadian National Railway yards by two London men last night.

Captured by C.N.R. officers as they left the yards east of London, the two pleaded guilty to theft when arraigned in police court in Hawkshaw today. They are Kenneth Moffat, 34, and Peter Geltaker, 19.

The scrap bags which they stole were valued at less than $25. Price of scrap copper, it is said, has increased $10 per ton during the past 12 months.

As soon as the guilty pleas were received, Crown Attorney Reginald Newton asked for, and Magistrate Hawkshaw granted a week's remand for sentence.

DEATH STOPS LONDON PARTY

Trenton Sergeant Reads of Death of His Australian Friend

Trenton, April 15.—(Special)—Sergeant-Major E. Alsey, D.C.M., M.M., has been left a "rolling bombast" with Gunner Arthur Percy Sullivan, R.C.A., of the Australian army.

It was only a few days ago that Alsey saw Sullivan's picture in The Globe and Mail, taken upon his arrival in London, as a member of the Australian contingent to attend the Coronation. He related celebrating his wartime buddy, and immediately sent him a letter.

Then last week, it was reported Sullivan died in London, England. The two men, both veterans of Gallipoli and parts of the Empire, served together in the North Russian Relief Force in 1919. Alsey recalls the deed that won the Victoria Cross for Sullivan.

"We were crossing a single-plank bridge over the Shelka River when we were attacked by a band of Russians who had escaped from Scitza," he said. "Princess carrying our wounded stampeded throw, Lieutenant Lord Huntington and three other officers into a deep swamp. Without hesitation and under intense fire Sullivan jumped into the swamp and rescued the four men, bringing them out one at a time."

UNCOVER PLOT TO STAGE MUTINY ON CORONATION DAY

Stern Measures Taken to Suppress Outbreak at Dartmoor

RIFLE PRACTISE

No Amnesties to be Granted at Coronation it is Announced

London, April 15 (AP)—The Exchange Telegraph Agency reported today officials of the British island's largest prison, located on the bleak southwestern moors, had uncovered a plot to stage a mutiny on Coronation Day.

Despite an official veil of secrecy, the Agency reported it learned secret measures had been taken to suppress any outbreak at the Dartmoor prison, where hundreds of prisoners serving long terms.

The prisoners were believed to have selected May 12, the day King George VI will be crowned, for a bold dash for freedom because they were assured by the fact no amnesties will be granted or sentences reduced in celebration of the event.

The Agency said it was believed the prisoners had been planned on reduced vigilance on the part of their guards on the national holiday.

Introduce Rifle Practise

Demonstrations similar to those preceding the famous Dartmoor mutiny five years ago were said to have occurred with prisoners flinging tins of soup bowls in the faces of officers.

Stern disciplinary action was reported taken by the governor of prison officials, and although official denials were issued, the Agency said guards now carry firearms, the Governor was said to have recently introduced rifle practice with the guards aiming at a dummy figure representing the prison governor.

Officers at Dartmoor in the past have always been armed only with truncheons.

The men were said to have been angered because they learned Italy had reduced penal sentences in celebration of the birth of an heir to the throne, but England refused to take a similar step for the Coronation.

No Amnesties

This decision not to grant amnesties at the Coronation was announced in the House of Commons by Sir John Simon, Home Secretary, in a House of Lords Bill and Emma Thorkildson, Hamilton tots who disappeared yesterday, came home today.

Nazidom Hits at Criticism Uttered in U. S. Churches

Tirades Appear in Inspired German Press

ATTACK DR. FOSDICK

Berlin, April 15.—(AP)—Nazidom, hitting out at any direct or implied criticism from abroad, struck at United States churches today for allowing religious machinations under the cloak of religious observances.

The inspired Nazi press loosed tirades against the showing in the Riverside Memorial Church in New York of an anti-Nazi film seeking to raise $400,000 for the relief of German refugees.

The outbursts, in phrasing that showed their common origin, carried such headings as "anti-German lying clique" and "Jewish emigrants stirring up hatred before the altar."

Dr. Fosdick Attacked

The official German news agency, Deutsches Nachrichtenburo, said, in discussing the film which had Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pastor of the Riverside Church, for its chief figure:

"This film reveals with terrible clearness the unchristian methods with which a new anti-German drive is to be launched by the American churches by a small unamerican clique whose aim is to misuse American religious sentiments for nefarious ends."

The Kristnedtsdag, which retains some of its traditional religious standing, proclaimed "painful indignation," and added:

"We can not believe the people of the United States do not realize whither these vicious machinations under the cloak of religious observances must tend."

At the same time the press play-

Strikers Awaiting Word From Homer Martin on Mayor Hall's Ultimatum

General Motors Strike Enters Second Week With No Change

CABINET SPLIT

Resolution Passed by Strikers Condemns Stand of Premier

Oshawa, Ont., April 15 (CP)— Striking General Motors workers in their second week of idleness today, a big question mark still hanging over a bewildering series of rapid-fire developments.

Homer Detroit was awaited the all-important word whether Homer Martin, President of the United Automobile Workers of America, would comply with the ultimatum of Oshawa mayor, Earl Hall, and recall out workers in General Motors' American plant.

Still solid behind their local of the U.A.W.V., affiliate with the C.I.O. committee for industrial organization, 2,000 strikers crowded into a mass meeting last night and passed resolutions condemning Premier Mitchell Hepburn for his stand in the strike and regretting the enforced resignations of David Croll and Arthur Roebuck from the Ontario Cabinet.

The strike of 4,700 workers, born a week ago and never without an immediate end in sight, entered two sensational moves yesterday as its greatest pitch.

Premier Hepburn demanded and received resignations of his Labor Minister, Arthur Roebuck, because they would not concur in his handling of the situation.

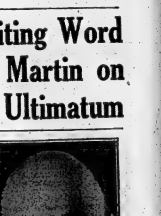
Ultimatum Squarely Put

Mayor Hall put his ultimatum squarely up to the International Union's President and said, in effect: "Either you support your Oshawa Unionists or by calling a strike in the Detroit plant by Monday of I will tell the workers of any city they have been fooled and hoodwinked."

It stated that the Union be recognized by General Motors has provoked the stormiest sequences in its stormy life, and not especially because of the ultimatum.

Premier Hepburn and General Motors have had one answer—No.

Hope among the strikers for Federal Interpretation and mediation of the strike was dispelled, that the Dominion department take the matter in hand, when Labor Minister Norman Rogers, that the Ontario government "dedicated itself to the early convenience of Federal conciliation services" and that Ottawa has not requested Federal intervention.



Last night's mass meeting took no time in condemning Premier Hepburn for his "announced policy of opposition to the legal right of labor to choose its own Union organization."

The strikers demanded the Premier withdraw from any participation in this dispute because of his avowed bias," and went on record as refusing to negotiate negotiations as long as Premier Hepburn is a party to them.

Strong Resolutions.

In their strongly worded resolution, the striking Unionists charged Premier Hepburn "has threatened to use force against workmen as an army to suppress the growth of unionism"; his "dictatorship would deprive all workers of their last resort—the right to strike"; and his "continuing of police forces is entirely unnecessary".

It added a charge that the premier took the dispute "out of the able hands of his Minister of Labor, Hon. David Croll, who was successfully conducting negotiations, and immediately substituted compulsion for arbitration".

Mayor Hall struck a note of optimism when he addressed the strikers. He said the strike may be settled "in four or five days" and declared the sole point involved is whether General Motors will recognize the U.A.W.A.

The mayor described the strikers' conduct as "the wonder of the world" and told them "there is no manifestation of communism in Oshawa, and "no reason for an increased police force."

Charles H. Millard, president of the Oshawa local, declared the strikers have been forgotten and Governments are fighting among themselves.

The strikers, led to their meeting hall by a band, booed when Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer, mentioned Premier Hepburn's name.

"I think you shouldn't feel that way just because, he disagrees with you," said Thompson, and the crowd booed again when the organizer said he thought the premier should come to Oshawa and meet them.

Other speakers were Professor Eric Harvison of the University of Toronto, who condemned the "damned impertinence of Premier Hepburn's attitude, and Dr. Salem Bland, Hamilton United Church clergyman, who said the strikers don't know anything about the C.I.O. but liked it "for the enemies it has made".

Baseball and sensibles!

Spalding advises that baseball diamonds be placed with second base and the home plate on a general north-south line, the catcher facing south or a little southeast. The problem is to place the players so as to give them the best chance to play their particular positions in relation to the sun. As most batted balls are played late in the afternoon, advice is excellent, and the young aspirant for league problems playing in the back lot can do better. Infielders generally are obliged to look higher than the others and should be favored as to their positions in relation to the sun.

Liquor Tester Gets Everything In Grog but 'Sweet Adeline'

Guzzling Gadget Not of Flesh, And Blood, But Glass, Iron

HAS NO HANGOVERS

Washington, April 15.—(AP)—The United States government has developed a liquor tester that can get everything out of a gallon of grog except, perhaps, "Sweet Adeline."

This guzzling gadget is not of flesh and blood, but of glass, steel and rubber. It is the Bureau of Internal Revenue's latest way of detecting what you do to a stiff drink—and what it does to you.

Designed to determine just what whiskey is the tester among other things can:

1. Take on a terrific load and keep it for a hard day's work next morning.

2. Fulfill a beverage 125 times, which is like going to 25 cocktail parties in a single afternoon.

3. Stop in the middle of a gallon and give a correct account of its feelings.

4. Imbibe without hangovers.

Officials predict the apparatus will be the best thing in 25 years to run down the family tree of a bottle of whiskey and report on its chemical grandparents.

NO STRIKE HERE, TRANSIENT LINGERS

Furtively dismounting from the rear end of a transport on which he had presumably stolen a ride, a ragged transient, apparently of foreign extraction, hailed a passerby on the Lower Front this city after midnight.

A hurriedly manufactured cigarette drooped from an unshaven face. "What town is this?" the transient queried. "Belleville," came the reply. "What time it is?" "There's the clock," pointing to the City Hall tower. "Where all the people are at?" the hobo asked in his quaint English. "Gone to bed, I expect," answered the passerby. "No stick here," the hobo grim earnestly. "No," was the answer. "O.K. I stay. Where is the police station at?" And the knight of the road shuffled off to search for a night's lodging.

FISH OVERSEERS FOR THIS DISTRICT

Protect Game Fish While Spawning Says Inspector McCabe

For the protection of game fish and more particularly pickerel during spawning season, five seasonal game and fish overseers have been appointed by the Game and Fish Department of the Ontario Government for the purpose of protecting the pickerel in local waters, Inspector Herb McCabe of this city announced today. Special overseers for this additional protection, have been appointed and stationed in the vicinity of Napanee Falls, Moira River, (Belleville), Trenti Rivers, Madoc and Tweed.

"Due to the scarcity of pickerel in this district the department is endeavouring to protect these game fish throughout the spawning season and the department has issued orders that this observance for the protection of pickerel must be kept and offenders will be severely dealt with, warned Inspector McCabe as he added, that no extension for the taking of these fish had been made by the department this year, owing to the scarcity of that fur-bearing animal in this district.

"There has been considerable controversy throughout the district regarding the intentions of spearing and grappling for fish at this particular time of the year. It is unlawful to spear any fish at any time, but of course fish, such as suckers, mullets and dog-fish eels and any member of the carp family, may be speared from rice to sunset. It is unlawful to grapple or gaff fish at any time, however," added Inspector McCabe, as he added, that "no angler could gaff a game fish after it had been caught on a rod and line, the gaffing being done solely, for the purpose of landing the fish.

Exhausted and leg-weary a 97-year-old veteran of the Fenian Rebellion, who gave his name as Robert Beverley who gave Mount Dirom, Ont., as his address, was assisted by the Provincial Police yesterday and detained in the local police station pending investigations last evening. 'ELEVATOR 1937' IS ROYAL NUMBER Unique Design And Format in Student Publication of B.C.I. and V.S.

The Elevator, the well known publication of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, eagerly awaited year after year by students and by citizens alike, has made its appearance for 1937. The magazine is in a new format of a very happy modern design and is printed on excellent paper which makes it possible to preserve it for many a year. The contents give a fine insight into the work of the school in its training of the students and indicates everywhere the thoughts that are animating the minds and directing the energies of the students of an original sketch of the coronation chair, the throne being that made by a student of the collegiate.

Naturally in Coronation year and at a time so close to the great imperial function there is more than ordinary interest given by the publication in the crowning of King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth on May 12th. Especially is more than fulfilled in one of the finest collections of photographs of the royal family and the royal regalia, in the photographs of high-altar in Westminster Abbey and in the cut 4001.

In Coronation Colors

The cover is done in the coronation colors with the royal cypher "GR" and the imperial crown. The border "Elevator 1937" occupied top and left side.

One of its marked features is the space it gives to the work done by students in every phase of school interest, the attention which it devotes to art and to illustration, on which latter the present magazine deserves high commendation. The larger page, gained mostly by increased width, allows for fine grouping of the photographs with which the work is abundantly illustrated.

The letter press work is well done and the photographs are very clearly defined.

The elevator which has left the press of the Ontario Intelligencer in a very large edition, will be treasured by those who are happy to possess a copy of this publication which reflects much credit on the able staff editorial, art and business staffs.

ONTARIO SAFETY LEAGUE

The Ontario Safety League held its annual meeting last night for the awarding of medals and merit certificates to drivers of commercial vehicles who had driven one or more years without an accident. Over five hundred persons crowded the Alexandra Room of the King Edward Hotel to listen to addresses of congratulation by R. B. Morley General Manager of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association, R. A. Stapells, President of the Canadian Automobile Association; H. E. Champ, Vice-President, The Steel Co., of Canada, Limited, Controller Ralph Day for the City of Toronto and Brigadier General D. C. Draper, Chief Constable for Toronto.

Mr. A. G. Partridge, President of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, was Chairman of the meeting. In his opening remarks Mr. Partridge congratulated those present upon their splendid efforts in demonstrating in a most practical way that it is possible to drive motor vehicles safely at all times and under all the many adverse conditions. Brigadier General D. C. Draper was introduced by the Chairman as the Speaker of the evening, General Draper during the course of his address stated that the accident problem had become very serious, citing statistics to show that in Ontario alone there had been one million, five hundred thousand accidents of all kinds in the last two decades, that of this number one hundred and fifty thousand persons were killed or injured by the automobile traffic alone and if we continued the present rate of increase for another twenty years, Ontario would have over three hundred thousand persons killed or injured by automobiles.

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon.—The farmers are ready for the big Spring drive, purchasing and exchanging seed grain, repairing of machinery and so forth. This is the order of the day. The snow fences have been removed and a number of the farmers are doing their stable labor. It is deemed wise by a number that this is the proper season of the year to perform this work. Mr. Simeon Fox, road superintendent of Hastings County paid us a visit on Thursday and arrangements were made to have considerable work done on the old Ridge Road. The hill west of the McCurdy Bridge is to be cut down and the entire road is to receive a heavy coating of crushed rock. The work is to commence early in May.

An outstanding change has occurred among the cheesemakers during the past week in this district. Mr. Harold Henderson who has been employed for the past seven years, as cheesemaker for the Ivanhoe Cheese Manufacturing Company, has been engaged in a large factory at Bloomfield. Mr. Frank Palmer, who has been employed for the past fourteen years for the stockholders of the Glenn Factory at Fuller, has been engaged to make cheese in the Ivanhoe Factory. Mr. Harold Christie of the Kingston Cheese Factory has been engaged by the patrons of the Glenn Factory, Fuller. Mr. Keith Bray has been hired by the patrons of the Kingston Cheese Factory. This will be Keith's first experience in operating a factory of his own and his many friends wish him every success.

A new power line is being erected from Ottawa to Trenton and is passing through our vicinity. This is good news for unemployed men as many of them are seeking employment. Three camps have been erected on the premises of Mr. Arthur Corbbery Fuller.

A very successful pancake tea was held by the congregation of the St. Andrew's Church on Thursday evening. At the close of the supper hour a short program was enjoyed consisting of harmonica selections by Cecil and Harold Thompson, guitar selections by Harold Wright and Fred Bennett and singing by Mrs. McLeod, Mrs. (Rev.) Kofford and Miss Neale. Fleming and three minute speeches by a number of the gentlemen present. This concluded a fine evening of entertainment. Proceeds of the tea $19.00.

NAVIGATION ON LAKES OPENED

Prospects For 1937 Season to be Busiest on Record

Navigation officially opened on the Great Lakes today. From many ports along the ice-rimmed shores of Lake Ontario, Erie, Huron, Michigan and Superior put out the craft that brought the inland seas from April to November. Prospects were the 1937 season would be the busiest on record.

The lakes region hummed with activity. Huge stocks of iron ore awaited shipment down the lakes to the steel mills where a shortage of raw material appeared imminent. Elevators at Port William and Port Arthur made ready to disgorge their stored grain. At lower lake points, package freight was piled in readiness for carriage to the lakehead.

One of the earliest openings on record, the new season gets under way at noon when seasonal low-rate insurance goes into effect. Ice packs at several points impeded vessel movements but were not expected to seriously delay sailing schedules. The full lake fleet were expected to be on the move within a week.

Says Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced At Home

Prove It At Small Cost

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, as good advice for home treatment as any friend can give, before resorting to operations or injections, is to get a prescription (as a Mother's Emerald Oil.

Simply ask Doyle's Drug Store or your druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing small, or and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer burdensome. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that it also helps atrophy phlebitis due to strain to disappear.

OTTAWA GOV'T. TO REMAIN NEUTRAL

For Time Being at Least Will Take no Part in Oshawa Strike

Ottawa, April 15 (CP)—The government today continued preparations for its official representation at the Coronation and Imperial conference, having decided to stay out of the Oshawa strike situation for the moment, at least, and to launch an aerial survey of drought-land on the prairies.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said last night at the end of the first cabinet meeting since parliament prorogued that Premier Hepburn of Ontario, apparently under the impression the Labor Department intended to intervene "made it perfectly clear to us" that he did not want Ottawa's intervention in the General Motors strike.

Mr. King said the Dominion government had no intention of intervening unless there was reason to hope its intervention would be valuable. It would be of no help to the situation to intervene against the Ontario administration's wishes, he added.

"It has always been the policy of the government to offer its good offices in cases of this kind," the Prime Minister explained, "but only when it is indicated our good offices may be of assistance.

"Ontario has its own labor department and conciliation machinery and has been carrying on negotiations. Mr. Rogers (Labor Minister Rogers) has offered the good offices of his department but the Ontario government has taken the stand they do not desire any interference."

NOW B.G. STAFF CHIEF

Chief of the Salvation Army in Canada Commissioner John McMillan, has been appointed chief of staff for the organization, a position second only to that of General Evangeline Booth. Commissioner McMillan succeeds Henry W. Mapp whose health has broken down. The new chief began his army career in Canada, over 50 years ago and has served in the United States the United Kingdom and Australia.

SEEKS STRIKE PEACE

Federal Minister of Labor Hon. Norman Rogers, in a statement from Ottawa and also in a letter to Mayor Hall of Oshawa, has made known his willingness to act as conciliator between General Motors and the 3,700 striking employees in the C.I.O.-led auto tie-up. The strikers signified their willingness to have Mr. Rogers intervene and similar expression was sought from the corporation. It is considered possible that the labor minister would step into the dispute without consent of the motor company.

SHOE WORKERS AT PERTH STOP

Demand 'Close Shop' With a Written Working Agreement

Perth, Ont., Apr. 14 (CP)—Representatives of the Perth Shoe Company workers were expected today to lay before the company management demands for a "closed shop" with a written working agreement and recognition of the Canadian Shoe Workers' Union and Allied Crafts.

The men stopped work yesterday, creating the first situation of its kind in the history of this town sixty miles from Ottawa. No actual strike existed, said Joseph Carrier of Toronto, Union organizer. It was a "stoppage" of work pending an agreement.

Carrier said the company was being asked merely to recognize a branch of his Union and to give workers a signed agreement instead of present verbal understandings respecting working conditions.

"Our demands will be presented and we hope for a peaceful and amicable settlement of the whole affair," said Carrier, who denied his organization was connected with the Committee for Industrial Organization, the American Federation of Labor or any other organization.

After the men walked out yesterday afternoon three hours before quitting time, more than eighty women workers continued at the machines.

A spokesman for the men said "if the worst comes to the worst we will actually strike on Friday morning. The women are solidly behind us and are only carrying on during our stoppage."

Yesterday's session saw Senator George P. Graham of Brockville, re-elected President for the 12th successive term as delegates received reports from officers and heard addresses by Pension Minister Power and Sir Francis Floud, High Commissioner here for the United Kingdom.

The Pensions Minister declared that without organizations such as the V.O.N. the Department of Pensions and National Health would not be able to carry out its work.

All health information discovered and assembled by departmental officials, he said, must be brought to the people's attention, a mission in which the V.O.N. did its work.

Sir Francis told the delegates the V.O.N. provided the personal touch of sympathy and kindness in social service nursing. "Social obligations," he said, "do not end when we pay our taxes. There should be personal and voluntary contributions to try to help along our fellow men and women who lack some of the things of-life we are fortunate enough to possess."

Hamnet Hill of Ottawa declared the population already is too big and the industrial world cannot adapt itself to it.

Mrs. Olivia D'Orme, he declared, would not be popular if others made a practice of emulating her example in becoming the mother of quintuplets.

CAPT. EDEN'S STATEMENT

The statement of Captain Anthony Eden that he believed the war in Spain would be a long one, that in the end the Spanish people would rule the country and that Britain would avoid the use of force to curb Spaniards, should indicate the common sense British attitude towards that country. That Spain would continue as she had in the past to display that proud independence and almost arrogant individualism which is a distinct characteristic of the Spanish race, is to be hoped. Capt. Eden also predicted that when the civil strife was over there would be neither communists nor fascists in Spain. Meantime there might be many events with transient air of finality about them but the result would be long delayed.

This is one of the clearest enunciations of British policy which is that of avoiding complications and of leaving Spain to work out her own destiny. The British Government has been attacked for this as Mr. Eden points out when he says "It is easy and popular to rattle the saber; it is far more difficult because we refuse to lead Europe over a precipice."

The Government realizes that at this stage of international emotionalism, a false step might have very disastrous consequences.

Other nations must see in this statement and in the decision not to hazard trouble by warning British ships not to enter Balbao, as they would do so at their own risk, proof enough that the Government is sincerely anxious to see neutrality preserved.

British diplomacy has been clear and outspoken in the effort to maintain peace in a situation which might develop into a nasty international mess through overzealous advocates of certain political systems.

Europe could ask nothing better for every single country and for the continent as a whole than that Spain emerge as still free Spain out of this welter of blood. Enthusiastic cocksure communists and fascists may feel like lending a hand, but the policy of wisdom is the British policy—hand off.

FATAL DISEASES

The entire death rate for the year 1935 for the Province of Ontario stood at 10.1 per thousand of population, the total number of deaths being 36,317. This ratio is the lowest for the ten years 1926 except for the year 1934 when the rate was 9.9 per thousand, according to the 1935 provincial report just issued.

Organic heart disease claimed the most lives, 7,053. This cause of deaths has risen almost consistently year by year. In 1926, the total was 5,132 and in 1929, it was 5,818. The greatest jump was in the years 1931 and 1932 when it rose from 5818 to 6669. In 1933 it dropped slightly as it did in 1935, from 7066 to 7053.

Cancer stood in second place in 1935 with 4,234 deaths. In 1926 the number was 3,116

Diseases of the arteries were third with 4,109.

Pneumonia of all kinds was in fourth place with 2,417. External causes caused caused 2,252. Nephritis was next with 1848. Tuberculosis claimed 1,303; apoplexy 1,025; influenza 958 and diabetes 524.

It is noted that deaths from influenza, pneumonia, apoplexy and infantile diarrhoea are lower.

In the list of communicable diseases, influenza easily leads. Whooping cough claimed 114 lives, which is lower than for any time in the previous decade. Typhoid fever which claimed 76 in 1926 caused 39 deaths in 1935. There was no record of a smallpox death in 1934 and 1935. Measles deaths were 89, the highest since 1932. Scarlet fever claimed 57. Diphtheria which claimed 237 in 1926 and 23 in 1933 took 33 lives in 1935.

These figures show prevention is doing a good work in reducing the communicable diseases, that heart disease still claims more lives, that the incidence of cancer appears to be growing, that tuberculosis is on the wane though a large number still are victims and that the war against tuberculosis still calls for the steady effort to educate and thereby eradicate or prevent. As it is the rate per 100,000 has dropped from 58.3 to 36.2 in ten years, a remarkable drop, even though many yet die of the disease. This gives hope that the outdoor life of the present generation and the campaigns in the interest of health education will gradually entirely eradicate what was once so great a scourge.

The old age diseases naturally stand to gain in an age when the life expectancy has increased and is steadily increasing. Some of these diseases formerly known as old age diseases claim earlier victims through the strain and stress of this emotional age.

A WISH

The mountain still gleams with a frosting of snow,
While black is the fringe of the trees on the glow
Of the robin-egg-blue cloudless skies . . .

If I had the voice of a chanting spring breeze,
I'd whisper a wonderful song to the trees,
To every brown bud yould shoot forth a green head,
And drop the dark shroud that proclaimed it as dead.
The fire of my ardour would set the snow weeping,
And soon would the sound of my song, like the sweeping
And potent notes plucked from the silver-tongued harp,
Make every green blade of grass wake with a start.
And then would the shy eyes of violets come peeping,
And lilacs, like pale purple twilight, come creeping
In great perfumed clouds o'er the land.
Apple trees
Would spray with pink blossoms the gay passing breeze,
And April would dance in the sun again,
And feed pregnant earth with her warm silver rain.

—Mildred R. Batty.

EVENING GROSBEAKS IN LARGE NUMBERS RECENTLY VISITED BELLEVILLE

Evening grosbeaks are much admired for their beautiful markings, graceful carriage and alertness. In view of this visit the following from the National Geographic Magazine, April, 1935, should be of special interest to readers of this column:

The most striking things about this unusual bird are its fearlessness and the irregularity of its appearance about civilization. It passes the breeding season largely in the pine forests from northern Michigan to western Alberta and (the western and Mexican varieties) in the mountains from central British Columbia southward to New Mexico, Arizona and Mexico.

Its summer habits have been relatively little observed, but, ordinarily, it apparently nests during June on the horizontal branches of spruces, more or less in scattered colonies. In the vicinity of Winnipeg, Manitoba, however, two nests were found in shade trees in the town of Selkirk and others in river-bottom willows. The nests were loosely constructed of twigs and rootlets and the eggs were pale greenish blue, rather heavily marked with grey, olive green and brown.

At irregular intervals, sometimes years apart, the birds move eastward and southward from their breeding grounds and appear sometimes in large flocks in New England and the Middle Atlantic States even as far south as Washington, D.C. At such times they are friendly birds and may tarry for weeks where they find abundant food. At certain places in New England where food is always made available for them they now seem to be annual winter visitors.

Their natural food is the seeds of various ashes and maples, the pits of chokecherries and dogwoods, weed seed, and the seeds of conifers. They will often peck through frozen apples for the seeds, apparently not caring for the pulp. At feeding stations they seem to prefer sunflower seeds and, in summer at least, have a fondness for suet.

The pleasing name is based upon the mistaken notion of the original collector that the bird dwelt in the dark woods and came out only at evening to sing.

IT IS SURPRISING HOW MANY IMPROVEMENTS SUGGEST THEMSELVES about the home when one begins to consider the Home Improvement Plan, sponsored by the Dominion Government, which makes it easy to finance any home improvements from $50 to $2,000. Modernizing kitchens, bathrooms, attics and basement provide topics for many interesting discussion in the family circle.

The annual supper in connection with St. Thomas' Parish will take place at the Parish House next Thursday evening.

Great success attended the efforts of the Parish Guild in the playlet entitled "Tid-en Pats Francais" presented last evening at the Christ Church Parish Hall, and it was an evening of real and genuine enjoyment for the large audience that filled the auditorium. The play being a farce comedy created rounds of laughter and the performers all took their parts exceptionally well. Mr. Drummond and Mr. Spriggins, made a decided hit. Mrs. Wilmot rendered three very much enjoyed vocal solos. The scene of the playlet was a fashionable watering place and the cast as follows: Major Reguleus Raitan (a fire eater), R. A. Backus; Victor Dubois (a young Frenchman), Bruce Bottum; Mr. Spriggins (Lodging to Let), Mr. Drummond; Mrs. Spriggins, (Lodging to Let), Miss M. Diamond; Angelis (their daughter), Mrs. R. C. G. A. Frost, Lindsay, Speaks to Delegates of Orange Convention at Ottawa

NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Ottawa, April 14—(CP)— Delegates to two Eastern Ontario Orange organizations will end two-day conventions here tonight after a long discussion of the Ontario Separate School issue and being told Premier Hepburn's Ontario Government would fall on the question at the next provincial election.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Eastern Ontario Orange Young Britons, last night elected R. Laurence Little of Ottawa their Grand Master for the next year and completed their slate of officers.

Earlier the Loyal Orange Grand Lodge, Province of Ontario East, heard Grand Master R. F. Reid of Peterborough predict defeat in the next election of Premier Hepburn and his Ontario Government. Mr. Reid said the defeat would come on the Separate School tax question.

Lieut.-Col. T. A. Kidd, Conservative member of the legislature for Kingston and a former Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of British America, told delegates public schools in Ontario were the first consideration of the province.

Referring the Separate Schools tax, he said that in the village of Codrington, eight miles north of Brighton, average attendance at the public school has been 15 for the last five years while "across the road a separate school had an average attendance of only three. The separate school received over $5,000 in grants from the Province during the past five years while the public school received only $5,000".

C. A. Frost, former Mayor of Lindsay, made a plea to delegates of all three organizations for tolerance and goodwill between Protestants and Roman Catholics. He said the school issue was "not one of "Roman Catholics versus Protestants."

He said: "Orangemen, believing in religious liberty, while not agreeing with Roman Catholic doctrines, should be prepared to fight that Roman Catholics might exercise their religious freedom by worshipping God in accordance with the dictates of their consciences."

Principle Violated

He declared, however, the principle under which separate schools were established in Ontario in 1863, on a voluntary and optional basis was violated in the 1926 Assessment Act of the Ontario legislature as an important part of the corporate wealth of the Province was compelled to divert a considerable share of its municipal taxes to support of separate schools, regardless of the religious beliefs of shareholders.

"This Act which violated a fundamental principle has now been repealed," he said, "with the definite assurance of the Prime Minister that separate school supporters will receive equity and justice. Public school supporters will await with interest a more definite definition of the term 'equity and justice.'"

E. Hastings Election a Deciding Factor

Mr. Reid, speaking of repeal of the separate school tax measure by the Ontario legislature, declared, "There is no denying the fact that the deciding of the voters in East Hastings (by-election) provided the result that means defeat at the next provincial election for Mr. Hepburn's party."

He said a promise by the Premier that "the Roman Catholic separate schools will be looked after by his government" and announcement by an official of the Separate Schools Branch of the Ontario Educational Association "that a new law is being drawn up that will guarantee to separate schools a greater share of corporation taxes" would be discussed at a session later in the day.

Mr. Reid saw little comfort in "changes in the coronation oath of His Majesty King George VI whereby the words 'by the grace of God' and 'defender of the faith' have been deleted."

This, he said, "only serves to prove that certain people have been busy and secured another small concession, not much to be sure, but enough, nevertheless, to lend encouragement to ask for more at the next coronation."

He drew attention to "the reported statement, which was later denied by Major Gladstone Murray, General Manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, whereby he was said to have stated 'there are two parent languages in Canada' and that 'the Corporation is pledged to make both languages'.

"I would like," he said, "again to call your attention to the fact, that the French language is only official in the parliament of Canada and the legislature and courts of the Province of Quebec, according to the British North America Act.

"But why have bilingual currency not only in Quebec but across the Dominion and I am told, that all correspondence going from the Dominion parliament or any of its branches to Quebec Province cannot so much as have a word of English printed on the letter head or it will be returned.

"I ask you how can a bonne entente exist under these conditions? It is all very well when no protest is made by the English-speaking people. But, just as soon as word of protest is uttered, then we are accused of raising the race or religious cry."

REV. P. T. RYAN BISHOP, DIES

One of The Most Beloved Prelates in Eastern Part of Canada

Pembroke, Ont., April 16.—(CP) —Rt. Rev. Patrick Thomas Ryan, Bishop of Pembroke and one of the most beloved prelates of the Roman Catholic church in this part of Canada, died today.

Bishop Ryan officiated at Mass Sunday. During the past few months he had been taking rest-cures in the hospital but his condition was not thought serious.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan, he was born in Ireland in 1864. His father was an Indian-mutiny veteran who came to Canada in 1870, establishing his home at Pembroke.

Educated at Pembroke Separate and High Schools, Bishop Ryan later attended University of Ottawa, graduating in 1884. He studied at the Grand Seminary, Montreal, and in 1887 was ordained in Pembroke by the late Bishop N. A. Lorrain, whom he was destined to follow in pastoral charge of the diocese.

For about a year after his ordination he was attached to St. Columba's Cathedral, Pembroke, as curate. Later he held the same post at Eganville. In 1891 he also served at Brudenell as curate.

Two years later he was named parish priest of Renfrew and while serving there in 1912 he was made Auxiliary Bishop of Pembroke. Two years later, in 1914, he came to Pembroke, still as Auxiliary Bishop. On the death in 1916 of Bishop Lorrain he assumed full charge of the diocese.

Postpone Appeal Against Judgment

Toronto, Apr 15 (CP)—Chief Justice Newton Rowell today granted a postponement until Monday of an appeal against the judgment of the Ontario Court of Appeals declaring the "baby clause" in Charles Vance Millar's will valid. The appeal was brought by Arabella West and Alexander Butcher, Port Burwell, relatives of the eccentric Toronto lawyer who left $500,000 to the Toronto mother bearing the most children in the ten years following his death.

George T. Walsh, K.C., Counsel for several entrants in the "stork derby" asked for the adjournment. Mr. Walsh said he had information concerning the case that should be thoroughly examined.

OSHAWA VETERANS PROTEST EX-COMRADES AS STRIKE POLICE

Quitting temporarily their places in the past picket line thrown around the General Motors factories at Oshawa, Ont., great war veterans, members of the striking automobile union and—representing the several hundred ex-soldiers among the strikers, joined a long parade to the cenotaph in the Motor City and there passed a resolution to be forwarded to Ontario Premier M. F. Hepburn protesting mobilization of former war comrades as special police deputies for use should violence break out in the strike. Mr. Hepburn had announced previously that such deputies would be sworn in. Every strike picket in the parade carried a Union Jack and the big flag shown (Centre) headed the procession. Several officials of the Union, who are former soldiers, addressed the cenotaph audience.

TRACEY NAMES MILLER SLAYER

Pembroke, Ont., Apr. 14 (CP) — Trial of John Miller on a charge of murdering his brother-in-law continued today after a statement admitted to the dead youth and naming Miller as his slayer had been admitted as evidence.

The 23-year-old Sganiville youth heard Mr. Justice Alcaide Greene admit a statement allegedly dictated by Gregory Tracey as he lay dying in a hospital here, saying: "John Miller, my brother-in-law, shot me. My sister is married to him. They were not getting along very well."

According to evidence Tracey, suffering from fatal injuries wounds in the abdomen, told Dr. J. B. Halligan, Pembroke surgeon, before he went to the operating room for an emergency operation, that Miller had shot him.

Dr. James Reeves of Sganiville, told the court he had been attending Mrs. Miller for an illness during the weeks prior to the shooting, which occurred in a store at Sganiville last January 22. He had recommended she stay in bed and have a complete rest. He said he had told her husband the same, what he had prescribed and Miller had not raised objection.

Complained of Treatment.

Dr. Reeves admitted Mrs. Miller had complained to him about the way her husband was treating her while she was under the doctor's care.

Mary Tracey, sister of Gregory, said about three days before the shooting Miller came to the Tracey home and asked her to come to his home and help Mrs. Miller.

By mutual consent, she said, she was to sleep with her sister. The night of the shooting when it was time to retire, Miller proposed sleeping with his wife and Miss Tracey said she objected. After a brief argument, she left for her own home, where she told her family what had happened.

Her father and two brothers, John and Gregory, then went to the Miller home to bring Mrs. Miller home. Miss Tracey said Miller finally agreed.

Miller, John and Gregory Tracey then went to the store where Miller worked, to get an automobile.

Story of Shooting.

Subsequently Miller was alleged to have fired on the Tracey family.

Michael Tracey said "a few minutes later I heard Miller call me from the back door. I went out to the rear and saw him standing out in the yard, saying a gun at us. My two daughters and my son, John, who followed me to the door, went to go out.

"I shouted 'look out' and stepped back as the shot was fired."

Michael Tracey, one of the seven crown witnesses heard yesterday, also testified his son had told him at the hospital: "Jack Miller, that dirty ... got me."

Hitch Hikes at 97

Robert Beverley, 97, no particular home, was a night lodger at the Trenton Police Station on Monday night. He came from Port Hope and headed east on Tuesday morning. A picture of health, the spilling old knight of the road has never suffered any serious illness, and he is perfectly 21 today. He travels with a 75-pound bag over his shoulder, and very seldom asks for a ride. Before leaving the police office Mr. Beverley whistled a peppy tune, telling us his own accomplet by himself. Then with his hands and feet. He was born in Maitland on the Kingston Road, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Beverley. Although his father was a teacher at Protestant Hill School, Port Hope, Robert Beverley never received any education. I had to stay home and do the chores for my mother, he said, and didn't get a chance to attend school.

PLAINFIELD

Plainfield—A unique special service was held in the United Church on Sunday evening which was largely attended. The choir of eleven members with Mrs. Arthur Hall presiding at the piano rendered two appropriate numbers. The period usually given over to the sermon was instead taken up in the reading of specially selected poems most of which were the work of Edgr A. Guest. The minister opened the series by reading a poem entitled, "My Life." Other numbers given were: "Where Do You Live?" Mrs. Horace Palmer; "The Toy Stores, Home" Mrs. Eddie Emmerson; "Don't Be Sorry," Oscar Moore; "Learn to Smile," Mary Dneeman; "Sons of Kindness," Margery Creeper; "Answering Him," Mrs. Wilbur Elliott; "If I Were Sending My Boy Afar." The Young People held their meeting in the Church on Tuesday evening. The attendance was not quite as large as usual on account of rain. Bill Doran presided and also conducted the worship. The topic on leadership was taken in discussion form and some interesting things were offered as different members expressed their views on what constitutes a good leader in the office of Sunday School superintendent, or teacher, or convener of a young people's society. It was generally felt that an important feature was being that of starting promptly. Emphasis was placed on example and the living of a devoted Christian life.

Winnipeg Monarchs Have Edge In Memorial Cup Series by Defeating Copper Cliff 2-1

PLAYERS INJURED

Monarchs Show More Finish And Have Great Edge in Speed

By WILLIAM H. LUMSDAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 15 (CP)—Another great club from Manitoba's hockey-famed capital is marching steadfastly along the road to Memorial Cup. Monarchs have high hopes of becoming the fourth Winnipeg club to take the Dominion junior title and hoist the royal purple in victory for the second time in three years.

The young Westerners took an edge on Copper Cliff in the series when Bedmen, losing the first of a two-game total-goals series, 3-2 at Sudbury last night were then belted the winner 3-1. Monarchs were never behind and their performance was much improved on their first two appearances, when they split goals with Bedmen, losing the first 2-1 and winning the second game 6-5.

Play Saturday Night Again

Fourth game of the best-of-five series will be played here Saturday afternoon and Saturday night and it will give the West an edge in rounds hockey with each game having won the Memorial Cup blue ribbon. If the teams believe that even the round, a fifth game will be necessary.

But Monarchs were not discouraged by last night's result and hope to take the cup to the Prairies for the first time since Sudbury Cub Wolves won it in 1931. Coach Eddie Silverman said at the finish of wolves then and he figures his Bedmen are the class opponents.

Score Two Second Before Time

Lorder Martel put Monarchs in front with but two seconds' play remaining in the first period on a play with Pete Langelle at Redmen's goal mouth. Al. Webster kept Copper Cliff in the fight with the nearest goal of the night on an individual effort in the second but Monarchs tallied the winner before the session closed.

The deciding goal exemplified Monarchs' chance-taking style of attack. They constantly bored deep into Copper Cliff territory, relying on their darting speed to get them at Al Pike started the individual play and also finished it by scoring. Dick Rowsell passed to Martel on Pike's pass, obtained the puck behind Redmen's net and relayed it to his centreman's waiting stick.

10,000 Attend

A crowd of 13,703, largest of the series, roared its approval as Monarchs shaved off a 1-0 lead set by Redmen in the dying minutes. Both clubs played unusually hard-hitting in the first two contests and although the game was less exciting it produced good hockey.

Main worry in the camp of the victors was whether or not their star defenceman, Remi Vandaele, will be available for the game Saturday. After playing a big part in Monarchs' victory by his stellar body-checking, he was hurt in Copper Cliff rearguard late in the game and suffered a severely twisted back and chest injuries.

Shewchuk In Hospital

Only casualty in Redmen's ranks was Big Jack Shewchuk who was taken to hospital after the game. He suffered a forehead wound when Pike accidentally struck him with his stick in the second period and four stitches were necessary to close the gash. Pike was batting at the loose puck as Shewchuk sprawled on the ice.

Shewchuck returned to the game in the third period, appearing like an Arab chieftain, his head swathed in a wide bandage. The hurt did not seem to affect his play and he did some of his best checking and puck carrying in the closing chapter. Taken off once for a forward, Shewchuk was soon back in the fray when Silverman noticed his team lacked spirit.

Babe Siebert Marty Barry Cup Winners

Babe Siebert, veteran defenseman of the Montreal Canadiens was awarded the Dr. David A. Hart trophy emblematic of the most valuable player to his club in the 1936-37 season, the National League announced today.

The Lady Byng trophy for the player showing the highest type of sportsmanship, along with playing ability, went to Marty Barry, star pivot player of the Detroit Cougars.

Siebert's margin of victory was quite decisive. Conn Smythe, coach of the second-place Lionel Conacher of the Maroons, but Barry was pressed hard by Syl Apps of the Toronto rookie, Sil Cowley, brother of Dan Cowley of the Bruins, Flyers' defence third in the voting for the Lady Byng trophy.

Only six minutes in the penalty box during the entire 48 games is some record.

Defencemen were quite prominent in the race for the Hart trophy although Siebert was easily the first choice. Goaltender playing by a prime factor in the splendid showing of the Canadiens this season.

TIMBER FALL IS CAUSE OF DEATH

Sidney Allport, Madoc, Accidentally Killed, Jury Finds

Madoc, April 15.—(Special)—A verdict of death from a fractured skull caused by falling timber in the shaft of the Canada Talc Mines" was returned by a Coroner's jury presided over by Dr. R. Dempsey, probing the death of Sidney Allport here on Wednesday night. Ormonde Bottler of Belleville, appeared for the Crown in the absence of County Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan.

Allport was an employee of the Canada Talc Mines, a few miles from here, and was riding down the new shaft of the mine in the bucket alone when the accident occurred, evidence given by the employees of the mine disclosed. Loose timber, falling down the shaft, was blamed for his death. The men had not been forbidden to ride down the shaft, the employees told the jury. As Allport was alone in the bucket, no one actually saw the accident. It occurred last March 26.

DECREE NISI ON MAY 3 OR TENTH

Mrs. Simpson Free to Marry Windsor After These Dates

London, April 15.—Mrs. Wallis Simpson probably will be free to marry the Duke of Windsor either May 3 or May 10, it was learned legal authority told the Associated Press, providing no last minute intervention occurs.

Application that the American woman's divorce decree nisi from Ernest A. Simpson be made absolute will be filed in court in about two days, this authority declared.

"Previous assumptions, that the divorce would become absolute April 27, exactly six months after granting of the decree nisi, ignored the provision of British divorce procedure that such application be made in writing at least 10 days beforehand," said the legal source.

Since divorces are rarely granted on Mondays—and April 27 falls on Tuesday—the application could not be heard until either May 30 or May 10.

CHIEF CONVINCED FIRE-BUG LOOSE

Entire Strength of Dept. Concentrated on Arrest of Incendiarist

Smith's Falls, Ont., April 15. — (CP)—Police Chief John Less said yesterday he was convinced a fire-bug is loose in the town" as he received reports on the latest of four fires that have accompanied three attempts to wreck trains here in a little more than three weeks.

Less declared "the entire strength of my department will be concentrated" on the arrest of the supposed incendiarist.

Citizens living in the north end of the town in which all the cases of suspected arson have occurred, have talked of hiring special guards to protect their property.

Robert Woods on whose suburban farm fire caused $5,000 damage, said:

"I am not yet in a position to comment, but the fire which visited Sunday have cost me my car, garage and the building on the farm, but of this I am convinced, there is, to my mind, no natural cause for either of the outbreaks."

Joseph Beseau, in charge of the farm, where the fire broke out in a barn and spread to four other buildings declared:

"I had been in the building where the first signs of fire were discovered only a short time before it was enveloped in flames, and at that time there was no sign of fire.

"The flames seemed to break out in several places at one time, and I cannot see any way in which the fire could have started."

EVERY WOMAN FACES THIS QUESTION

How do I look to other people? So many women think their beauty is marred by signs of constipation. It often causes loss of pep, sallow skins, dull eyes, pimples and blotches.

Yet common constipation can be ended so easily. Just eat a table spoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN with milk or fruits every day. Five doctor tests prove it. Three tasty delicious ready-to-eat cereal supplies the "bulk" needed to tone up the system—and vitamin B to help tone up the intestinal muscles.

Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs more than twice its weight in water, gently sponging out the intestines. It never causes the artificial action of pills and drugs, that often prove ineffective.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, you see, is a food—not a medicine. It relieves common constipation the way Nature intended—in a delightful way. Buy it at your grocer's. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

RED CROSS NURSE BRAVES DANGERS TO HELP INJURED

The brevity and casualness with which the nurses at the Red Cross Outpost Hospital record events which for color and romance would be excellent material for any novel of the north country might cause some wonder in an outsider, but to the Outpost Nurse it's all in the day's work, officials of the Red Cross stated today.

By way of illustration, the following report from the nurse at Thessalon Outpost Hospital was cited:

"Man on hunting trip in rough bush land 25 miles from Outpost surprised and attacked by bear while crossing fallen log. Leg badly wounded by claws of bear before it was killed by one of the party. Patient brought on dog-sleigh to Outpost, by rail and road to Outpost. Treatment: Splint on leg."

"Man living on island 35 miles from Outpost, hiring or needing assistance on island. Patient very ill with chest condition requiring immediate attention. Brought to Outpost by airplane. Recovery complete after several weeks' treatment."

"Little boy 9 six one of very poor family of ten children, playing around mowing machine while father was cutting hay put leg badly injured. Rushed 25 miles to Outpost. Leg amputated immediately and a life saved.

"Indian woman suffering acute condition requiring immediate treatment was brought to Outpost by dog team over many miles of bush country. Operation performed and patient made good recovery."

"Little girl, fifteen miles from Outpost was playing with baby on the floor. Mother tripped over baby and dropped boiling tea which spilt over child's leg burning it badly. Family very poor. No skilled care given leg at the time. Finally the child was brought to the Outpost where leg was gradually straightened and the burn completely healed. Without this treatment child would have been lame for life."

MILLER COLLAPSES IN COURT ROOM

Dr. F. R. Frankish States Stains on Clothing Human Blood

Pembroke, Ont., April 15.—(CP) —Taking of evidence in the trial of Nobel Miller, 24, of Petawawa, charged with the murder of his brother-in-law, Gregory Tracey, was completed late last night, Defence Counsel T. M. Costigan announced he would call no witnesses.

Dr. F. R. Frankish, Ontario Medico-Legal expert, last Crown witness, told claim on clothing said to have been worn by Tracey were human blood. Also he testified shells submitted to him had been fired from a 30-gauge shotgun, similar to one which had been obtained at the home of John Miller, father of the accused.

Angus Lacey, manager of Lacey's Hardware, Petawawa, also a dealer, sworn a similar shotgun was missing from the store following the shooting. He did not positively identify it as the one which had been sold prior to leg."

Court adjourned for five hours yesterday after Miller collapsed in the prisoner's dock and had to be given medical attention. Miller complained that he had his father was mounting the stand. Dr. Frankish and Dr. F. Bruce Keating, another physician, worked over him and then advised the adjournment.

AT THE BELLE

"Quality Street"

Those who see Katharine Hepburn and Franchot Tone in the screen version of Sir James M. Barrie's romantic comedy, "Quality Street," at the Belle today and Friday, will mark it as a most brilliant triumph for the co-stars.

In a role peculiarly suited to her gifts, Miss Hepburn portrays a vivacious English girl of the early nineteenth century who engages in a burning romantic spark for years while the man she loves is away in warring against Napoleon. When he returns and she believes he has lost interest in her, it presents a dramatic situation that calls forth all of her talents.

Sharing honors with Miss Hepburn, Franchot has the role of a brilliant young doctor and soldier. He plays both comedy and drama with subdued art in the convincing eligible bachelor that most girls dream about.

In a departure from his customary boiler role, Eric Blore supplies a spicy bit of comedy as a flippant army sergeant. Fay Bainter is appealing and convincing as her screen debut in the role of Miss Hepburn's aunt who sheds her to her coquetries. Cora Witherspoon, Estelle Winwood, Bonita Granville, William Bakewell, Joan Fontaine and Florence Lake turn in excellent performances in character roles, all beautiful atmosphere in the way of settings and costumes pervades the picture.

The photoplay is further tribute to the high standard of production set in the past by R.K.O. Radio. George Stevens directed with feeling and artistry.

"Wife, Husband and the Jury"

Laughter-lovers and mystery lovers alike will appreciate "Wife on the Jury", the second feature attraction on the same program.

Two of the most lovable hunters of the screen, Helen Broderick and Victor Moore, take care of the comedy in superlative fashion in the leading roles and are backed by a grand supporting cast. An ingenious story provides an addition to the fun, thrills, gunplay and mystery.

A small army of film favorites support the two leads. Phillip Burton, Lucien Littlefield, Robert Middleton, Colleen Clare, Earle Foxe and Maxine Jennings have the principal roles and all turn in an excellent work in making the picture thoroughly enjoyable. The story is completely wrapped up in the serious aspects of life, the pictures may come as a revelation. In fact George Vi is a very human man, and, shooting the "slides" or touring the amusement centre, or reviewing the huge Boy Scout jamboree that chose Wembley as its stamping ground during his presidency, he entered into the spirit of the thing as much as the lowliest of his subjects.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Her Husband's Secretary" and "Off to the Races"

Any "triangle" story involving husband, wife and secretary is intriguing cinema fare—interesting chiefly because of the question: Just how they going to work out their difficulties?

In the melodrama "Her Husband's Secretary," which opened yesterday at the Capitol theatre, Frances Grace Wilbur falls in his aid a forest fire—and a thriller it is, too. Mary Astor and Glen Gunnerville is seen in "Off to the Races."

When the husband, Warren Hull, is unconscious and in peril of his life with flames drawing nearer by the moment, which woman will be the supreme test—Jean Muir, the wife? Or curly-locked Beverly Roberts, the secretary? You'll have to make your own guesses—the answer is not to be told here But at all events the conflagration settles matters among the fashion. He is big, manly, well-endowed and likable.

In part of his picture he is a structural ironworker riding beams ten stories in the air—and he looks it.

The settings vary from ultra-modern offices constructed entirely without angles, to a forest fire in the Mohave desert. Incidentally, it's in a cabin in these same woods that the real showdown between Miss Muir and Miss Roberts take place. It's no "can't we talk it over?" showdown, either, the trade rounds with hands on husband's secretary one of the nestest socks we've seen in many a day.

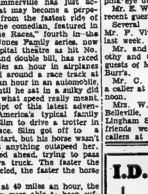
"Off to the Races"

Slim Summerville has just acquired what may become a perpetual gags from the fastest ride of his life. The comedian, featured in "Off to the Races," fourth in-the Jones Family series, now at the Capital theatre as hit No. 2 on a grand double bill, has raced at 300 miles an hour in airplanes and zipped around a race track at 150 miles an hour in an automobile, but not until he sat in a sulky did he realize what speed really meant.

The script of this latest adventure of Jones's typical family required Slim to drive a trotter in a sulky race. Slim got off to a beautiful start, but his horse wasn't one to let anything outspeed her. She sported ahead of the pack and the camera truck. The faster the latter went the faster the horse raced.

Finally, at 40 miles an hour, the cameraman were able to keep sufficiently ahead. But before Slim could get his horse stopped, the truck had to pull off the track and let her "win" the race, to Slim's great relief.

In 1926 the then Duke of York took over one of the least successful jobs of his career from his brother, the Prince of Wales—that is the presidency of the Wembley exhibition.



From this distance perhaps, it does not strike the reader as a particularly burdensome task, despite the undoubted need for executive ability which it demanded, but in 1923 and the succeeding year, when teh present king headed the gigantic enterprise, Wembley was the showcase of the empire. Its success or failure, would be reflected throughout the business and industrial life of the country, while its attractions were expected to draw many thousands of visitors to London.

Perhaps the king's close contact with the huge industrial and amusement centre is not well known, for though he took a delightfully active part in its success, as one person, not even the royal president, could overshadow the business efficiency of Sir Lloyd Iliell. His ability and success in the executive task is just one more indication of his thorough training in the every-day life of the nation.

Wembley was big business and in accepting the presidential appointment, Albert was lifting again some of the burden that was piling on the shoulders of his father, the king, and his brother the Prince of Wales. It brought him more before the public than ever, but while the serious side of his job was never shirked to-day's Wembley pictures indicate that the lighter side of the great exhibition also received attention.

To anyone thoroughly convinced that their king is completely wrapped up in the serious aspects of life, the pictures may come as a revelation. In fact George Vi is a very human man, and, shooting the "slides" or touring the amusement centre, or reviewing the huge Boy Scout jamboree that chose Wembley as its stamping ground during his presidency, he entered into the spirit of the thing as much as the lowliest of his subjects.

Queen's Park witnessed one of its most dramatic moments of all time yesterday when Premier Hepburn demanded the resignations from his Cabinet of Hon. David A. Croll, Labor-Welfare Minister, and Attorney-General Arthur W. Roebuck because of their refusal to support the Government's action in Oshawa strike situation policy. School Loop Can Secure Sticks Through Parent Body

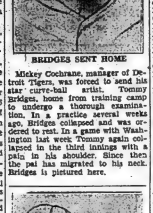
Communications were received from the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association today to the effect that if the Belleville Lacrosse Association is desirous of sponsoring lacrosse in the local juniors schools and teams, sticks are requested through the parent body, the local school league must first apply for affiliation with the O.A.L.A.



The mentors of lacrosse locally, who are endeavouring to introduce Canada's national summer pastime into the lower schools, deemed it advisable to affiliate the proposed local school group into the parent body and have applied for a grouping in the midget class, 16 years and under on January 1st of the playing year. At the conclusion of the schedule played between the various schools and the winner is declared, the O.A.L.A. will award either crests or medals to the winning club and a silver cup to be retained one year. The provincial body will also supply lacrosse sticks for the boys, through the Association, at a greatly reduced price and these sticks will be available to those students of Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra, Queen Victoria, St. Michael's Academy, King George schools and a team from the B.C.I. under the ruling, when they apply for entry at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night.

Following the organizing of a school lacrosse league on Friday night, however, efforts to advance and negotiate the sponsoring of an intermediate O.A.L.A. team for Belleville will also be the order of business, while included on the agenda of the night will be the election of officers of the Belleville Lacrosse Association. All adults and school boys interested are urged to attend.

BRIDGES SENT HOME

Mickey Cochrane, manager of Detroit Tigers, was forced to send his star catcher-ball artist, Tommy Bridges, home from training camp to undergo a thorough examination. In a practice several weeks ago, Bridges collapsed and was ordered to rest. In a game with Washington last week Tommy again collapsed in the third innings with a pain in his shoulder. Since then the pal has migrated to his neck. Bridges is pictured here.

CRITICALLY INJURED

One of baseball's all-time greats, Tris Speaker, is in a critical condition after falling from the second storey of his home. Speaker sustained a fractured skull but the Cleveland Indians' physician, Dr. Edward Castle, says he has "better than an even chance to live." Speaker is considered, by many, as the greatest centrefielder in the history of baseball.

DRESSMAKERS OUT

Montreal, April 15— (CP)—Dressmakers opened a strike for union recognition and higher pay today in the expectation it would paralyze practically the whole industry in Montreal and spread repercussions into three other cities.

Hundreds of women workers streamed out of scores of shops and prepared to open picket lines during this afternoon. They came out at the call of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, a C.W.C. affiliate though strike leaders insisted the Lewis Committee had not influenced this walkout.

TRAVIS JACKSON HAS CLUB AT JERSEY CITY THAT MAY GO PLACES

By FRANK DUNHAM
(Jersey Journal)

Guttport, Miss., April 15—(AP)— The rapidly approaching International League pennant race finds its new entry, the Jersey Giants, an enigma. On its roster are players who might be an asset to any major league club. But, at the same time, it includes some, who do not belong in "AA" company.

On what steps, if any, are taken to strengthen its pitching staff, depends the success or failure of the Jerseys.

Travis (Stonewall) Jackson, into whose hands has fallen the task of welding the most important link in the New York Giants' "chain system," is a man of few words.

"I am not predicting, where we will finish in the pennant race," he says. "All I can tell you is we'll have a hustling ball team out there—fighting all the time."

There are 10 hurlers with the club, or these Ben Cantwell, purchased from "Boston Bees; Tomas de la Cruz, last year with Albany, and Johnny Meketi, a rookie of great promise, appear to be the only ones qualified to hold International League batsmen.

A Great Infield

The rest are pitchers with minor or major league experience whose records last year showed them to be on the decline.

Turning to the other departments of Jackson's aggregation an entirely different picture is presented. With the former Giant third-baseman playing in his natural position at short; Joe Gomez, fastest second baseman in the league; Roy Anion at first and Charley Wilson covering third base, the Jerseys will have one of the league's best infields.

Hal Lee, bought from the Bees; Ernie Sulik, last season with the Phillies; Smead Jolley, International League batting king and Jimmy Asbell in utility capacity, form an outfield combination of power and class.

Jackson has a standout catching staff in Eddie Madjeski, former major leaguer and Jack Redmond, who was with Albany last season.

TRAINER SUSPENDED

Bert S. Micholl (above) leading trainer of the Florida racing season and winner of the 1928 Kentucky Derby with Reigh Count, was ruled off the turf at Miami yesterday when the Florida racing commission said a saliva test showed a narcotic had been administered to one of his horses. The horse was "All Round" 3-year-old maiden from the sensationally victorious stable of Mrs. Emil Denemark of Chicago, for whom Micholl saddled 82 winners last year to earn $100,000. The order automatically bars Micholl from so much as entering a race track in any state in the United States where the sport is legalized. The trainer firmly denies the charge and says that the Florida state racing commission has made a mistake. He will have an opportunity to apply for a hearing.

Delegation For Boston Marathon Best in Years

Boston, April 15—(CP)—One of the fastest delegations ever to represent Canada in the long distance classic will carry the Maple Leaf's challenge in the Boston marathon next Monday, led by Dave Komonen of Sudbury, hero of the 1934 run.

Tom Keighley, race manager, announced Komonen's entry today along with the names of a dozen other Canadian hopefuls. Of them all, however, Komonen has the greatest marathon record. He finished in two hours, 32 minutes, 53 4-5 seconds to win in 1934 after being second in 1933 and seventh in 1931.

Komonen will run under the colors of the Frood Mine Athletic Club of Sudbury. Representing the same club will be Bill Nevs and Auiti Jaakola.

Other Canadians entered include Ernest Webster of Hamilton, Ont., Jimmy Patterson of the Maroon Athletic Club of Hamilton, Robert Tilson from the same club, Walter Hornby of the Olympic Club of Hamilton who came in seventh in 1933, and William Whorwood, Hamilton.

Newlyweds Are Recipients of Lovely Gifts

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Rowe Are Honored at Many Gatherings

A very interesting event occurred at the home of Mrs. John Kane on Wednesday, March 31st when she tendered a reception dinner in honor of her sister and her husband Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Rowe on the return from their wedding trip. Thirty guests sat down at tables lighted with yellow candles. The bride's table was especially attractive under a large white bell with yellow and white streamers reaching to the corners of the table. Spring flowers added to the attractiveness of the home. Later on in the evening the bride and groom were serenaded by the boys and girls of the Valley to a noisy charivari.

On Thursday afternoon a number of girls gathered at the home of Mrs. W. H. Hamm to attend a shower given in honor of Mrs. Doug. Rowe by Alta Hanna and Flossie Hannah. The afternoon was spent in singing, games and contests. Later on an address was read by Mrs. Don Donohoe and gifts were opened which consisted of cups and saucers and other small gifts. A delicious lunch was served by Alta and Flossie. The girls then departed after spending an enjoyable afternoon.

We have always appreciated your presence with us and much and we know that we shall miss you indeed. Our gifts are very small, but they carry with them a multitude of sincere good wishes from your girl friends here.

We, one and all, unite in wishing you everything you could desire and for a long and happy wedded life in your new home by yours.

You who are one of the faithful members of this great Women's Institution. Every member has her duty to fulfil and I have watched with much satisfaction the brightness of your particular corner the mirthful radiance of which has often penetrated through the gloom in many doubtful situations.

Now the wishes of the entire Institute go with you on your matrimonial flight unfortunately no long trips are allowed in this venture, but we feel assured that this well equipped hanger on the Oak Hills and your early tuition have fully prepared you for the journey as you soar through the clouds neath the pleasant skies of Spring time enhanced by those friendly April showers. of much happiness and may you, quickly pile, continue to sow a straight and sure cruise throughout life remaining ever unlikely smearing a sea's and happy landing.

Let us hope that this ideal couple will make an ideal home, the kind we all admire and which is so richly expressed. We would do well to take this as a pattern of the home required our motto, "For Home and Country."

On Friday evening, April 2nd, 85 friends and neighbors met at the home of Mr. Edward Hesaman, Oak Hills, and tendered his sister and her husband Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Rowe with a miscellaneous shower. Mr. Alex Park of Stirling acted as chairman for the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Rowe were asked to be seated and everyone joined in singing "The More We Get Together" and "Home on the Range," and "In the Gloaming" the lights were turned low, while singing this number, three girls entered, one representing the community, Mrs. Roy Bush, Mrs. Clarence Chard as part of Stirling Valley W. I. and Jack Sager for the Charivari boys.

The Institute presented Emma with a wool blanket and the Charivari boys with an occasional chair and stool. They also received a beautiful display of silver and linen and chinaware and other articles. Mr. and Mrs. Rowe made suitable replies thanking them for their beautiful presents and asked them to visit them in their home at the Hoards. After which several were called upon for speeches. Lunch was served in the dining room by the girls.

Yours sincerely,

To Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Rowe:

Dear Emma and Douglas:—

Well Emma, it is your turn to be the honored and interest tonight, you and your husband. You are the newly-wedded pair. We all join in the happiness and good luck that is fitting for the occasion. We also wish you all you'd feel, Emma, you have your home community behind you to lend you a helping hand if need be, and to enjoy with you all your accomplishments in the future. Somehow, it always brings gladness when a new home is started. There are many homes, but only a few are real loved ones. A good home has many sides and many props. Some homes are held together by love, faith, hope money and work. There is no room for either but the three in the well merged personality? It is the ever-lasting team work that works best through pleasures or sorrows and leads on to the goal ahead—namely a happy home and all it years to come.

Now we have offered our good wishes and our advice but it is up to you both and you alone to carry these out. You have come, Emma, from a home where the Bible, prayer and the love for Higher things have been much in the foreground. We hope you do not forget those in your new home. We ask each say "you will, my will, welded by God's will."

We are glad you are not going so far away but that you will often be able to take part once among us. Your willingness to always help in our community activities in your district and your way with it will always be, but we hope you will carry on in your new community.

Many of us here have the pleasure of knowing you, Douglas, for which you is to respect you. We are satisfied to give Emma to you. So we trust that you care on. Douglas, in your manly, industrious way and Emma with Emma as you are with her bright and cheerful disposition we trust that thus by working together you will be successful. Again the spirit of the community says good wishes for the future.

Signed on behalf

Rev. Mr. Mellroy called the gathering to order and a program of readings and solos was given. Mr. and Mrs. Copeland were then asked to come forward and the following address was read by Mrs. Chas. Mills:

Dear Helen and Clarence:

It is very much to the regret of all in this community that you are leaving us. It is hard to express appreciation of services such as the years pass we all know how very effective they have been. Your presence has been for good, so may every soul that touches thine.

Be it the slightest contact, go there from some good.

Some little grace, one kindly thought.

One aspiration yet unfelt, one bit of courage.

Words are inadequate to say how much you will be missed in the various organizations in which you have taken such an active part. Many have voiced their regret that you have found it necessary to make this change. However, we trust that it is God's will and will be all for your happiness and blessings.

The new duties you are about to take over, will bring you plenty of work. But that too is a blessing. Since you have always learned to do this work, we know you will take it with pleasure in it.

Heaven is below as well as above, but the blessings of earth is toil.

Since you have left Cannifton you will find that you will carry these upright principles you have practised in this community with you. All-ow our blessings to go with you and these expressed words.

What blessings can we wish you, O my friends,

Save that the joyful calm of Christ

Should wrap your hearts so close that never lar.

Of the world's care of grief can enter in.

But only love to keep you dutiful.

And faith and hope to keep you strong and true.

We pray that God's exceeding love.

Enfold you close, until His tender hand

Shall lead you safely home to love's own land!

Mrs. Harry Parnham, Mr. Frank Pound, Mr. Fred Putman and Mr. Clare Mills presented them with an Aladdin lamp, centre table and runner, occasional chair and kettle. Mr. and Mrs. Copeland then thanked their friends for the beautiful presents. Lunch was then served and all joined in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Copeland every success in their new home.

Province Will Maintain Law, Order in Ontario

ernment and the Ottawa authorities, Mr. Hepburn said he asked Ottawa for additional help yesterday in a telephon.. conversation with Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice.

The Premier said he then received the following wire from Mr. Lapointe: "Have consulted with colleagues. They advise discussing the matter at council meeting tomorrow before taking further steps. In case of trouble breaking out all possible help will be sent."

"Therefore, I was surprised and disappointed when I received a second telegram from Mr. Lapointe today saying it was impossible to place further police at our disposal," the Premier continued.

Toronto, April 15—(CP)—A two-hour conference between Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Harry J. Carmichael, General Manager of General Motors of Canada, today failed to produce any advance towards a settlement of the Oshawa strike of 3,700 automobile workers.

"We stand ready to resume negotiations at any time between the plant and its employees," the Premier said in a press conference.

Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, and Hon. Paul Ledue, acting Attorney General and Mines Minister, were present.

In reply to a direct question as to General Motors' attitude, the Premier said "General Motors will not negotiate with the C.I.O. They took position long before I entered the picture, and they have not changed their mind."

Police Head Visits Premier

During the morning, while Mr. Carmichael was still in the Premier's office, Major General V. A. S. Williams, Provincial Police Commissioner, and James S. Allen, Crown Attorney of Ontario County, arrived at the office. While the Premier later said Mr. Allen's visit dealt only with routine matters, it was reported, that the Premier had desired to know the state of law and order in Windsor, where General Motors also have a plant idle.

After noon Lieutenant Governor Herbert Bruce administered the oath of office to Premier Hepburn, who is taking over the duties of David A. Croll, resigned Labor and Welfare Minister, and to Hon. Paul Leduc, assuming the Attorney General's work following the resignation of Arthur W. Roebuck.

Mr. Croll and Roebuck were called on to resign yesterday by the Premier because of what the government leader said was their opposition to the government's strike policy.

Efforts From Detroit.

Detroit, Apr. 15 (AP)—Officers of the United Automobile Workers Union and General Motors officials expected to confer here today in an attempt to settle the strikes in the plants at Oshawa, Ont.

Wyndham Mortimer and Ed Hall, vice-presidents of the U.A.W.A., planned to meet C. E. Wilson, vice-president in charge of operations, and other General Motors officials.

Hall said a strike Monday in General Motors plants in the United States "is likely" if the corporation's domestic plants attempts to handle any of the export business normally done by the Oshawa factories.

Brantford Delegates.

Brantford, Ont., Apr. 15 (CP) — Brantford Trades and Labor Council last night chose three delegates for the Friday night meeting in Toronto regarding the Oshawa General Motors strike. Labor organizations from various parts of the province will also meet strike leaders at the Toronto conference.

Last night's meeting also passed a resolution criticizing Premier Mitchell Hepburn for his stand in the strike situation.

CONTROL PLAN IN EFFECT IN MONDAY

London, Apr. 15 (CP-Havas)—The Spanish control plan will go into effect on Monday at midnight, the non-intervention sub-committee decided today.

The sub-committee also agreed to hand over to a special committee of experts consideration of the question of withdrawal of volunteers from Spain.

The non-intervention scheme calls for naval patrols of the Spanish coasts and establishment of agents over on Spain's frontiers to prevent foreign arms and volunteers from reaching either side in the civil conflict.

34 FLEE FIRE IN APARTMENT

Toronto, April 15 (CP)—Fire forced 34 persons to the street in twilight sixties early today when flames swept through a wall partition in an apartment house. The tenants found shelter on the first floor of the building, unaffected by the fire.

Only casualty was district chief Fred Burnett, who was shook the best while fighting the fire on the third floor. He was struck by a hose nozzle accidentally dropped by a fireman. Loss was estimated at slightly more than $100 to the four storey building.

Four ships with thirteen operators were affected immediately and other ships will be tied up upon entering port.

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED

Rome, Apr. 15 (CP-Havas)—Premier Mussolini, it was reported here today, will visit Germany on April 25 to confer with Chancellor Hitler. The report could not be officially confirmed.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Fleming Service.

The local market has lost a good deal of its recent vim, a number of factors recently combining to bring about somewhat liquidation in several sections of the list. The mining section, particularly the golds, have suffered as a result of the persistent rumors of an impending reduction in the price of the yellow metal.

Although denials have been forthcoming from the President of the United States as well as the U.S. Secretary of the Treasury that no change in the country's gold policy was contemplated, many investors have liquidated their gold stocks more as a cautionary measure. When confidence is given, to the fairly large volume of persistent selling, it was stated that our gold stocks have acted well under the circumstances.

The revival of interest in the shares of the Industrial Alcohol, subcompanied by a moderate rise, has been considerable in this issue. Numerous reports are prevalent that a new company, but the one given most credence, although it is entirely unofficial, is that Canada Industrial Alcohol should be taken over by another large Canadian distillery (Distillers-Seagrams is named) possibly on an exchange basis.

Despite the fact that Imperial Oil last year paid out $8,000,000 in dividends more than total income, the company was able to maintain its usual strong position, with working capital standing at $71 millions compared with $72.8 millions the previous year. Imperial Oil should participate in the general economic recovery that is in prospect for 1937.

South African Opinion

H. C. Havenga, Minister of Finance, told the South African House of Assembly that he did not think there was any probability of a decline in the price of gold.

"I think the scare of a few days ago was altogether unjustified," he said in replying to questions regarding the recent decline in the shares on the Johannesburg Exchange.

Trade and Market Reports Appear Excellent Despite Temporary Loss of Confidence

The performance of the stock market and the reaction in many basic commodity prices recently have tended to unsettle confidence in the outlook for business to some extent. There are very good reasons why this should be so, for fundamentally conditions are such and factors are at work which, it would appear are virtually certain to carry the recovery movement much further.

Stocks invariably move too rapidly in a bull movement. And the present experience is no exception to the rule. And as in the case occasionally in every such movement, a correction was necessary to satisfy technical demands. But the memory of people who trade in the stock market is rather short, particularly those who hang out in Bay Street, Bay Streets and to make a business of dealing in securities.

Thursday Market

The buying public failed to react to any great extent this morning when the Farmers' Market doors braved a falling rain to purchase display of winter vegetables and apples.

Maple syrup, "positively the last of the season" to quote one lady vendor, was evident in small quantities and sold at the prevailing price of $2 per gallon and 50 cents the quart.

Eggs were scarce and sold at 30 cents the dozen for selects, although one vendor offered a few dozen fresh stock in one sale, for 18 cents the dozen.

Potatoes, while not available in bag lots, were offered at 35 cents the peck. Winter apples sold at the usual prices. Celery was quoted at 2 cents the stalk. Bunches of fresh radishes moving slowly at 5 cents for the same quantity.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, April 15 (CP)—Hull and Peterborough were the only hog markets today to report price changes today. Gains of 10 and 25 cents per cwt. paid at Peterborough while the Quebec City reported declines up to 20 cents.

Liverpool: Receipts Hull $8,561 London $8.25; Hull $8.56; Peterborough $8.35; Quebec $8.25; Stratford $8.35.

Prices Liverpool: Bacts: $11.15; Kitchener $11.35; Guelph $11.35; London $11; Hull $11.05; Peterborough $11.30; Stratford $11.35; Chatham $11.25.

MRS. A. E. EATON DIES

Toronto, April 15.—(CP)—Widely known by Canadian soldiers and sailors for her hospitality in London in war years, Mrs. Annie E. Eaton, widow of Christopher Bakerton, died here yesterday. Mrs. Eaton was the daughter of the late Senator Robert Jaffray and until a few years ago lived in Owen Sound.

After her only son, Major Jaffray Eaton of the Grey Regiment, was killed in action, Mrs. Eaton established in London the Grey Rooms, a soldier recreational centre for which Canadians on leave were welcomed. Her husband died just before the outbreak of the war.

FORMER H. S. PRINCIPAL DIES

Toronto, Apr. 15 (CP)—William Ward, former Toronto High School principal who for 45 years served in Toronto schools, died here yesterday. Known provincially as an exponent of commercial education in Ontario schools, he was also president of the commercial section of the Ontario Educational Association.

FOUR BAD CHEQUES ADMITTED

Kingston, Ont., April 15 (CP)—Fred Skeggs pleaded guilty to police court here today to four charges of issuing cheques without having funds to cover same. He was remanded a week for sentence. Skeggs was recently arrested in Toronto on a similar charge and brought to Kingston.

Croll's Letter of Resignation

Toronto, April 15.—Hon. David A. Croll, in his letter of resignation of the post of Welfare Minister, as sent to Premier Hepburn yesterday spoke of his efforts to establish industrial peace. He said:

"I think I may say without boasting that those policies have earned the respect of both employers and employees in this province. Certainly when I leave—as I do—in the face of your pronouncement and my conviction, I shall have had the certain knowledge that no word of valid criticism ever has been uttered against the administration of the difficult departments entrusted to my care. I gave you my unswerving loyalty in return for yours.

"So much for my general principles. You will see that they were offended in your policy toward the strike at the General Motors plant in Oshawa. You marralled with me the right of these workers to join the union of their choice. That it was a union sponsored by the committee for industrial organization was incidental to the fact that ple in Oshawa are decent, law-abiding and hard-working citizens of Canada. They are entitled that they have so great a grievance against their employers that they are justified in using their final effective weapon—the strike. Are they right or wrong in this? I submit to you that it is not for you or for me to sit in judgment upon that point. They are acting within their rights as citizens of Canada and the Empire. Should, as you suggested, the whole force of the Provincial Government be thrown behind General Motors? In my opinion they can well look after themselves.

"And I would impress upon you further, that they employed no methods of picketing, that they attempted no violence, nor have done so at any time since they left the factory.

"As you know, not one arrest has been made for any offence on the part of the strikers. Should the government then have treated them as criminals, calling in the police of city, province and dominion, to combat a violence that never has eventuated?

Understand me: so long as you announced your antagonism to the sit-down strike and your determination to preserve law and order, and combat all aggressive forces, I was fully and completely in accord with your views. I think I demonstrated that clearly in my attitude toward revolt and Communism in such instances as the Crowland relief strike, the relief disorders in York and East York Townships, and the recent strike at the Empire Cotton Mills in Welland, where complete order was preserved. Had you confined yourself to these considerations, there never would there have been the necessity of this letter. But to my way of thinking you have gone beyond this, have passed the borders of Liberalism and have entered the perilous realm of Fascism. And what if the issue were only Communism you know I would have stayed with you to the end.

Only Two Concessions

From the first I have asked for only two, concessions in the matter of the General Motors strike—recognition of the local union, which then could make whatever affiliations it considered best, so long as it was joining a lawful group; and second, that there be no withdrawing of myself from the strikers in the event that need arose.

When the original difficulties started and when General Motors refused to meet its employees of Local 222, I summoned both sides to my office and obtained the voluntary withdrawal of Mr. Hugh Thompson, the C.I.O. organizer, with whom the company was refusing to treat. I further requested and seemingly received the agreement of General Motors to deal with their employees, who were members of Local Union 222. Negotiations were proceeding favorably, indeed peace seemed certain, when suddenly General Motors announced a definite refusal to recognize the local union. In withdrawing finally from this scene, I would urge this upon you: That you advise the company to recognize the local. Thereafter it is the local's privilege to affiliate who and with any

o

"I regret that I have been led to the necessity of passing an opinion upon your policy; or taking upon myself the responsibility of saying whether it is right or wrong. I appreciate that that responsibility is on my part; I had intended merely to say that I had disagreed with it. You know my origins; I have always been with, and one of, the workers, and if I have misjudged the desire nor the ability to swing at this late date to the labor side. In my official capacity I have travelled the road with labor, but rather than riding with General Motors. At this late date I cannot espouse unionism and the workers and labor as a whole.

Continue Support

"Therefore, and regretfully, I tender to you my resignation as Minister of Public Welfare, Labour and Municipal Affairs. You have received my full support in the past, and will continue to do so on those fiscal and Hydro policies which you have handled so ably—no one better than myself knows the conscientious labor you have expended on them to make them a boon to this province. It is only on matters of social policy that I feel I must follow my own course. I remain the Reform Liberal I always have been.

"Even in this hour of our differences, at this time when I am disagreeing wholeheartedly with you, I cannot but admire the courage and honesty with which you are following the path which you believe right. It is that same fearlessness and determination which have given the province so many wise and generally helpful decisions since you first became Prime Minister. Finally, I would like to reciprocate your hope that this severance of governmental relations will in no way mar the personal friendship which began between us long before the present Government took office, which has continued uninterrupted through the years of our administration, and which I trust may still endure for all time to come. You will, I trust, realize my position when I refer to the "higher loyalty.

Yours sincerely,

"David Croll."

DAILY SHORT STORY

Janet Reached A Decision

By Corona Remington

As last Janet Conrad came to a decision. With a sigh of relief she jumped up and started dressing. Only fifteen minutes in which to take her bath put on her war paint and don her new dress she had hurriedly bought on her way home from the office.

She did not whistle as she usually did while she splashed around in the tub—instead there was a little frown between her finely pencilled brows and her ordinarily sunny face was clouded with thought.

"No, sir," she told herself, "no love in a cot for me. Jack Benton's a darling but nothing can take the place of my freedom and my hundred and twenty per. "As soon as he rings I'll go down and tell him 'no', then he'll go away and it will all be over and I'll have escaped the noose and the kitchen sink once more. These bullionaires that come around offering their heart and their bank account to little stenographers simply—ain't—except in 'stories' and 'novels'."

She thought back over the telegram she had received that morning. "Reach town via Chevrolet late this afternoon. Will pick you up seven o'clock stop. Something important to tell you. Jack."

She knew what the something important meant and at last she had reached her decision. She was glad, too, for Jack's frequent visits had caused her anxiety. She had always looked forward to them and at the same time she had dreaded them. He was so irresistibly boyish in his manner and so flatteringly infatuated that she had always felt the danger. If he had proposed to her without giving her the one chance to reflect and think it over she would have probably fallen for him on the spot, but this way—a thank goodness he had warned her. Now she had herself well in hand and it would be easy to resist his pleading. She wondered how he would take it. Of course, he would probably feel pretty well cut up at first but that was natural. Nobody liked getting turned down. It must be a horrid feeling. She was glad that she wasn't a man; no one would ever get the chance to turn her down. Poor old Jack. She would be as gentle and considerate as possible.

Her thoughts ran along as she got into the little pink dress. It was alluring and feminine and accentuated her dark hair and eyes.

When Jack saw her a few minutes later he gasped involuntarily, but much to her chagrin he did not propose. And now simply can't say "no" to a man who has not said "will you?" He merely remarked after greetings were over.

"Say, I know a way by the river. I've always wanted to explore it. Shall we take a little spin in the car?"

Janet was slightly irritated. How, ever, there was nothing she could do but consent to the ride, so they got into the little waiting car and were soon hurrying along the highway. The river road was several miles out of town and by the time they reached it dusk had crept off into the woods and had given the world over to the moon. Jack slowed down his pace and they moved quietly along the sandy road. Janet had no idea how long they had been driving when Jack stopped the car.

"Now it's coming" she thought with a little shiver. "He's going to propose right here and now. What shall I say? Goodness, I wish it were over."

But he did nothing of the sort. He said nothing, not a word. He simply took her in his arms and she felt his gentle kisses on her hair. She was hypnotized. She could not resist or utter a word. There was something electrical, magnetic about his touch and her mind whirled around in a chaos of thought. "I only he hadn't brought me here. Thank goodness, he brought me here."

After awhile he spoke. "I'll be tough sledding at first, honey, but we'll get along."

"Who cares about tough sledding as long as we're together!"

She heard herself saying the words, but still she could not believe her own ears. Then the new Janet said something else with a little lilting laugh: "Jack, I was feeling so low a while ago you wouldn't propose. You took so long to get to it."

As a matter of fact he never did actually get to it and Janet only realized it and just at that second the old dead Janet raised up her head for a last laugh as she died ecstatically: "Little trick nature plays on all of us."

But her words were entirely drowned by the voice of Cupid singing. "There is no joy that can touch the joy I give. Sorrow and self-sacrifice may come with it, too, but he has not really lived who has not loved."

TARZAN'S QUEST (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Dance Hall Lady

by

Jane Clayton

"I'll say I did"

"Then why quarrel about it?"

"Because she didn't like it, and I didn't like it, and I got a notion to sock you in the eye. I got a notion to sock you in the eye right now, Sunny, struck with the latter possibility.

"You don't dare," replied Anne wearily. "I didn't want your permission. I wouldn't have him for a gift." Seeing Ray enter from the ballroom, she appealed to him. "Don't you think it was all right for me to dance with that old devil man?"

Ray made no answer. Her small face strained and pale, she marched straight to Anne, hailed abruptly, jerked the coffee-colored dress over her head, and flung it to the floor of the dressing room. Standing over her bent, glancing neither to the right nor left, she went into the bathroom and closed the door.

Sunny forgot her injury. From the other girls there came a hushed, concerted gasp. Momentarily Anne was dumb-founded, but she saw everything was crystal clear. Ray was jealous. Richard Graeme's attitude had deeply hurt her; his words had shocked, had alienated the only girl at Lolualand. She must be prepared to make a friend and ally. For Sunny's wrath the cared not one jot. She rose very slowly. As Ray she had conceived a genuine fondness.

A few minutes later Anne managed to slip into the bathroom. Ray was there alone, her black head bent on her hands, crying as if her heart would break. The sound of the opening door failed to penetrate her misery. When Anne spoke she only trembled, "Leave me alone."

She did not raise her head. Anne felt mounting in her breast a fury against Graeme. If he were not responsible for Ray's frantic, despairing tears, he certainly had been more between them than a casual flirtation. He must be old at 30. Ray looked like a child. Anne touch the shaking shoulders.

"Ray, dear, I hate you."

There were so many things Anne wished to say. There was nothing she could say. She left the room. Most of the girls had gone home. Ray returned to the dressing room. Some one brought her dress. Ray ignored her. Red-eyed, her face swollen and wretched, she silently changed her clothes, and left the house that Anne could hear her quick, unsteady footsteps die by immeasurably distant. At her own locker, Anne dipped to retrieve her scorned coffee-colored frock, but Ray affected not to notice. Still she pursued.

"I'm sorry if I've offended you."

Ray whirled on her.

"Don't talk to me, she said sincerely. "Don't you ever talk to me again. I hate you. I could have socked you in the eye. I wish she had."

And that was that. Anne gave up and slept that night in the dressing room. Was she right about Richard? Did his easy charm, his quick, flashing smile hold hidden traits of a professional philanderer? Her instinct said no unequivocal answer. Alicia Carroll, the gray-clad girl who shot little darts in the note of warning, was waiting at the stairway head. Obviously she wanted to say something. She paused.

"Ray was sure hopped up, wasn't she?" Alicia began in the enjoyable tone of one commencing a long conversation. Anne made no response. Alicia added: "She was sore about Richard Graeme. They used to be this way"—here she put two thumbs together—"but Richard, meanwhile, I guess, they been this and that way. Ray takes it hard. Well, she'll learn that she ought to have had more sense, especially with a guy like Richard. They're poison. Jezebels dirtie like postage stamps."

Firmly Anne refused to be drawn further than revelations. Her first instinctive feeling about Richard Graeme had been confirmed. She was startled. Still, as she walked on down the road, there was a consciousness of an odd flat sense of disappointment.

When she reached the street a cab pulled up, and David Blair tumbled out. For a moment Anne, who was almost forgotten his promise to meet her, was sorry that she had let him come. If he resumed the afternoon's discussion, she thought, if he added one more item of grief his own, to the difficulties of the day, she would go completely and incomprehensibly mad.

She could have counted on David. He was in an amusing and charming humor. Humor, she would never have guessed that he had been crossed in love.

Soon, as they drove homeward through the night, Anne thought, Anne began to feel the peace, the blessed peace, that his company always gave her. She pulled off her hat and wearily leaned her head against his shoulder. David loved her, would do anything for her; she could not weigh words with him. That arrangement might not be entirely fair, but tonight she was too tired to worry.

"How'd it go, youngster?"

"Awful at first, but it was lovelier like the plague. It looked as if I was just wasting my time until. . . ."

"Until what?"

"Oh, people danced with me later on," the girl answered. She continued "more animatedly: "One of the hostesses, Bunny Dane was, got furious because Con . . ."

Her story rippled on. For some reason a reason inexplicable to herself, she told David nothing about Richard.

Every day of the long, hot ensuing week Ann followed a set routine. She rose very morning at eight o'clock in order to get breakfast before Jane left for work. Each breakfast she yawned and gossiped with her roommate, who sometimes lingered to talked of Lolualand and of Anne's progress or of Irene's latest beau; there was always a beau with Irene.

After the older girl had rushed off Anne tidied the apartment and then curled up on the couch for another hour's sleep or study. At noon she went to the piano and practised two hours; at four she bathed, dressed carefully, and, a manicure kit in her hand, sat down to the brutting afternoon to have her nails done.

Miss Alberto, the white-haired, bent old teacher, whose golden voice had once thrilled Europe, had moved lived in Brooklyn. He would meet her at the door, let him, take her hat, would smile, he would lead her into the stuffy, heated room filled with souvenirs and photographs and programs of the past. He would sit at the piano, strike a few experimental notes. She would begin to sing while he listened, nodding approvingly sometimes, frowning other times. Or he might even break up the lesson to cry in frenzy: "No, no! No! It is the tradition, little one. . . ." Despite practice that makes perfect. You must not, must never skimp the exercises."

Irene's evenings to save a trip back to the apartment she dined downtown, either alone or with Richard, when he could leave his office. Sometimes after dinner she went to the public library or to a movie, but always at 11 she was prepared at Lolualand. And she stayed there until 1 one in the morning. Within a week she had worn out one pair of slippers.

Friday night she received her credit, twenty-one dollars and sixty cents. She was dancing the answer. Alicia Carroll, the gray-clad girl who shot little darts in the note of warning, was waiting at the stairway head. Obviously she wanted to say something. She paused.

"Ten dollars of it," Anne pointed out, "came from Richard. I've been with Richard Graeme."

The two girls were preparing to retire when Anne, after having a tight collation of prepared bran, inquired casually: "Who is Lady Lee?"

Lindsay swayed, and Anne looked sharply at him, looked apprehensively at Con. Both men's faces had been drinking. For once Con failed to blush.

"Mr. Lindsay refuses to dance with anyone but you," he remarked with tactful apology, neatly avoiding her glance.

"Lady Lee, Lee," said Conrad in the smooth, unctuous tone he used to introduce dances.

EATON GROCETERIA

DANCE HALL LADY

BY

Anne danced only twice in three hours. She did not mind her lifelessness. Rather, she was relieved that, with the rain drumming against the windows, with the orchestra obligingly playing tunes requested by the bored, idle hostesses, even the hostesses themselves relieved temporarily of the spur of competition, were more friendly. Certainly their faces were less tense and eager.

At the table next to Anne's, Ray, clad in the brief red gown, the only gown, she possessed, smoked endless cigarettes, cropping the stubs upon the floor. She and Anne exchanged desultory remarks. They were friends again. Ray had found her self-imposed enmity too much of a strain and Richard Graeme had not reappeared to light again the flame of her jealousy.

Once, she had not even troubled to change into dress clothes, presently lounged over to Anne. With-out ceremony she dropped in a chair, offered the girl a cigarette, lighted one for himself when she refused.

"They can't all be big nights," she observed, glancing at the almost empty floor.

"I'm glad this isn't a big night," Anne confessed frankly, "I found Saturday night just a little too big."

"Shucks," Con, as he always did, glanced shoulders. "You ought to be glad Lindsay turned up and gave you the chance with Ryo."

Anne's heart began to thump, She said nothing.

"Don't you know who Stanley Rye is?" Con inquired, surprised.

"Yes, I know Winter Stanley," she preceded rapidly, hating herself, "do me a favor, Con, and don't concern but I'd like to know how he happened to come here. Do you know?"

A temporary expression of discomfort flashed across Con's large, candid face.

"He just dropped in, that's all," he replied at last, elaborately uncomfortable. "How else would he happen to come? I don't know what you're driving at."

"Never mind," said the girl.

She knew that Con had lied. Stanley Rye had not happened to drop into Lotusland; he had come to speak to Con, come for some specific purpose. She wondered if there had been some other hostess at Lotusland who had interested him, some girl gone now, but some. One whom he had wanted to see again, someone whom. Con could tell him about. She was sure he had told her that never before had he been in a public dance hall but men had been pointed out to him and she imagined his interest, had her own been real, had not a belief that he thought her amusing and witty, different from other girls?

"You certainly honored him all in a heap", she heard Con saying.

"Him?"

"Didn't promise to come back, eh?"

"No".

"I'll bet he does."

It doesn't matter whether he does or doesn't, I'm sure I don't care, his nothing to me."

Con did not argue the matter. He was drinking speculatively, his eyes scanning the girl across the table, a small, composed girl in pale green, a girl with drifting, honey-colored hair and clear lightly powdered skin, a dance hall lady. Anne wished furiously that he would take himself off.

"Have you seen Dick lately, Anne?"

She started.

"No. What made you ask?"

"I was just wondering."

Very deliberately Con pulled from his pocket a crumpled telegram, a blue telegram. She shrank, all one by one he read them through. He found the sheet he wanted and pushed the yellow paper toward her. Her eyes, like his, saw the sentence marked by his pudgy finger.

"Give all my love to Anne Lee and tell her I am sorry I forgotten."

The signature was "Dick".

As Anne glanced at him, Con said smoothly, "Dick's been out of town. Probably hadn't had a chance you've been on his mind. I thought—no matter what I thought."

He got hastily to his feet, picked up his telegram and left.

The next evening Richard Graeme visited Lotusland. Anne encountered him at almost the same spot where the episode with Richard had occurred and where she had met Stanley Rye. She was late, the music for the first dance had commenced, and so great was her hurry that she careened head on into him.

"I beg your pardon," she had begun, when she recognized him.

Richard's charming ugly face broke into its usual grin. His white teeth flashed.

"Don't bother apologizing; I enjoyed it."

Presumptuous words, but spoken in a laughing way that made them a joke, the sort that Richard specialized in. He found herself softening at his very impertinence but she sternly repressed a smile. Exit not to emil when she remembered Stanley Rye; easy to see the difference between Stanley, the gentleman, and Richard, the would-be-gentleman. Stanley might be a cad that David and even Irene thought him to be; still there was a certain distinction about him, she was a real person.

Anne's decision made the not to smile when she remembered heart grew feather light. It knew that absence makes the heart go wander. Richard remarked re-proachfully.

Anne did smile then, unwillingly. She was anxious to escape, to get to her job, to terminate the conversation. Her existence was complicated enough without adding Richard to its complications. Out-side the orchestra played on, and she could hear the shuffle of dancing feet. Have you seen Dick lately, Anne?"

She started.

"No. What made you ask?"

"I was just wondering."

Very deliberately Con pulled from his pocket a crumpled telegram, a blue telegram. She shrank, all one by one he read them through. He found the sheet he wanted and pushed the yellow paper toward her. Her eyes, like his, saw the sentence marked by his pudgy finger.

"Give all my love to Anne Lee and tell her I am sorry I forgotten."

The signature was "Dick".

As Anne glanced at him, Con said smoothly, "Dick's been out of town. Probably hadn't had a chance you've been on his mind. I thought—no matter what I thought."

He got hastily to his feet, picked up his telegram and left.

The next evening Richard Graeme visited Lotusland. Anne encountered him at almost the same spot where the episode with Richard occurred and where she had met Stanley Rye. She was late, the music for

"She doesn't need to say anything. You can see in her face that the child's heart is breaking."

"Don't you believe it," he advised her in a curious, chilling tone. "These girls haven't hearts—they can't suffer as you or I might. They're not the imagination, the brains. Ray's a silly, empty, little fool. Her emotions aren't any more important, they don't go any deeper than the feelings of a squirrel in Central Park."

Anne recoiled.

"You've not heard any side of the story," he pointed out, unruffled, his good nature slowly returning.

"And I don't want to."

Sulky and aggrieved, he stared down on her, the dark flush fading from his face, but his mouth still set in stubborn lines. A magnetic man for all his ugliness, perhaps because of his ugliness, but his charm was conscious, practiced, and in a moment of pet he had disclosed his philanderer's soul.

"Very well," he conceded, "I'll dance with Ray." He lingered to add.. "Don't forget, though, you've promised to like me. I'll expect you to keep your promise."

Anne watched him stride away, she saw Ray's face light up like the morning, saw the man and the girl glide out into the crowded floor. A shiver passed through her when she remembered that once she had vaguely thought Richard was "nice". No might cold poison be nice when contained in a jewelled cup.

The remainder of the evening she resolutely turned her mind from Richard Graeme. He had danced with Ray and disappeared with no parting speech or smile for Anne, a skilful move, the girl suspected, but a move that failed to trouble her.

She could handle Richard Orsome.

AN INVITATION TO TEA

CHAPTER TEN

A long week dragged by and nothing happened. By nothing Anne meant that Stanley Rye had not returned to Lotusland. She had told Irene that she did not expect him, and she had told Con that he had said nothing of returning. But he had said that he would come again; he had been interested; he had liked her. Still he did not come. She grew expert at parrying Irene's delicate inquiries.

"Any news of the Rye last night?" Irene would ask lightly.

"No". Anne would reply, yawning. "I imagine he's out of town, family affairs, darling, than I am myself."

Things happened on the surface of her life that week, but they neither stirred nor interested her. David, admitting sheepishly that it was becoming something of a habit, proposed once more, Richard sought with phone calls and flowers to mend the bad impression he had made. He failed. With Ray before her eyes, Anne declined to yield to his easy, insistent charm.

Nightly Ray grew more pale and drawn and quiet. Above the flaming scarlet of her frock her face became more pinched and sad. It was impossible for Anne to comfort her. She had tried.

"Don't worry about Richard Orsome; he's not worth it," she said hardily. And then, when Ray had only looked at her, "Anyhow, every time he's about I go home with you."

Ray had sent her a strange, penetrating look.

"That's because you've made him. And I— I love him so much that I don't care.

She had leaned against her locker. Tears had started running down her cheeks. Anne could only do or say could stem them. Poor Ray, poor Anne, poor David ... The whole thing was so silly, nonsensical, so stupid, so unfair—a world full of men who wanted the wrong girl, a world full of girls who wanted the wrong men. Only pride saved Anne different from Ray, only pride prevented her from mingling her tears of disappointment and chagrin with those of the other girl.

She would tell herself that she was behaving ridiculously, that she had let Stanley Rye only once, that in ten years, in one year, it would make no difference. All her sophistry failed to ease her hurt, and sense of waiting for something to happen, that was never to happen.

"Well, did Stanley Rye turn up?" Irene would invariably inquire at breakfast, yawning and pretty in pajamas.

"No; I told you he wouldn't."

"If I were you I think I would say, leaning her slick black head on one jointed elbows and appearing extremely wise and old, "I think I were you, I'd simply ring him up, make a sort of date with him. I'd say, 'Why I thought you were going to give me a rush, and here a week's gone by'—"

"Oh, Irene, I can't! He probably wouldn't remember me at all. His most meet thousands of girls."

There eventually rise from a vision of those other girls, smart women in sleeveless cottons and linens bare, who lounged on tennis courts, threw themselves on the sand in beckless bathing suits, gilt in deserted verandas on the porches of country clubs, and collecting in sequins at somebody's cocktail party. Anne's modesty could telephone Stanley and say tearfully, "What, you! mean, old son, treating me like a leper?" Girls were in their thousands around, in their position, in their wealth.

On Wednesday, the miracle occurred. A telegram boy, whistling handwriting, came to Lotusland and asked for Miss Anne Lee with the sealed flap. Instinct, hope, something told her that the note was from Stanley. It was.

"Will you," he wrote, "have tea with me at the Ritz on Friday? At five o'clock."

Would she? Delight and relief made her almost sick. She danced that evening, as she smiled mechanically, as she heard and returned light banter, she was in a thousand miles removed from Lotusland and the men whose arms encircled her.

A new frock was imperative, no matter how ill she could afford one. She knew just what she wanted: black, black dull crepe with tiny black buttons and somewhere a touch of plaid, a smart costume dress that would tell Stanley she knew as well as anyone what was correct to eat at the Ritz. Irene and Irene talked endlessly at breakfast until Irene was late for work, and went off in a mad rush still calling back advice and suggestions.

Afterward Anne hurried through the cleaning, dusting, bedmaking, skimped her practice, dressed and went downtown to search for the frock that must be perfect and must cost no more than seventeen dollars.

The city was hot that day and full of smells—smells of steaming asphalt, of gasoline, of buildings and people. It was a city languid under a brassy sky, breathless, all its motion slowed.

Anne entered the arctic cool of one smart shop after another; patiently, tirelessly she examined dull black frocks and said yes, she knew, but that was a little more than she wanted to pay. Oh, they have anything around twenty dollars? They have, but not in black. She gave up the plaid, the tiny black buttons, and still her seventeen dollars remained unspent. Not only was there nothing perfect to be had for seventeen dollars, there was nothing even passable.

Discouraged and cross, she stopped in a drug store for lemonade. As she sat at the white-tiled counter, sipping the grateful coolness, she remembered Heller's, the cafeteria dress shop, downtown, where they sold manufacturers' leftovers and models of smart—smells of steaming asphalt, of gasoline, of buildings and people. It was a city languid under a brassy sky, breathless, all its motion slowed.

Heller's was, anyhow, she thought, worth chancing. The store was at Sixteenth Street, off Union Square. In a neighborhood given over to garment factories, second-hand stores, and dingy office buildings that were skyscrapers in 1900. No show windows here. This shop catered to the shabby. Heller's Will Be Demolished by No One" was painted in enormous white letters across the front of the building.

Even in the heat, at Union Square there was ceaseless, monotonous, noisy activity. Badly dressed women crowded the sidewalks and spilled into the street, where wrinkled old crones pushed pretzel wagons, and shouted their wares in competition with men who sold strings of "genuine" pearls for twenty-five cents, giant balloons for five cents, and six necktties for a dollar, or, if you preferred, a live, guaranteed-to-sing canary in a small wooden cage.

The motion of the crowd swept Anne across the street and into the shop. The terrific impact of heat, of packed humanity, of noise, staggered her. The smell inside was appalling. The smell of cheap perfume, of women who did not bathe enough, of perspiration, of cloth and fur and hair.

Hundreds of women crowded the single floor, shouting, fighting their feet shuffling on bare, uncarpeted boards. Women snatched dresses from long, loaded racks that ran the length of the store, their flying elbows jabbing others pressed against them. Women staggered under armloads of clothes toward dressing rooms.

G. M. STRIKERS MAY RETURN TO WORK MONDAY

Union Action Awaits Agreement with 'G.M.,' Oshawa Report States

Four Questions to go to Company Include One Asking For Recognition of Local Union of U.A.W.A. By General Motors

SENIORITY RIGHTS ARE ASKED

Agreement to be With All Plants Involving General Motors in Canada, Grievance Committee Advocated

Oshawa, Ont., April 16—(CP)—Union officials, conferring here on the General Motors strike situation, will advise the 3,700 strikers to return to work Monday pending arrival at an agreement with the company, it was learned on good authority.

Officials of Oshawa Local Union met with Homer Martin, international president of the United Automobile Workers of America, and Hugh Thompson, union organizer, who arrived here today.

Proposals, understood to have been made by Martin, will be placed before a mass meeting of strikers immediately for their approval, it was learned. If approval comes from the workers they'll be back on their jobs Monday and efforts to reach an agreement with the firm head will continue.

Requests to Company

Union officials, it was learned on good authority, will place the following requests before the company after the men return:

1—Any agreement to be with all plants involving General Motors in Canada, Oshawa, Windsor (where 500 men were forced out by the Oshawa shutdown) and McKinnon Industries Ltd., General Motors subsidiary at St. Catharines.

2—Recognition of the Local Union, No. 222, U.A.W.A. by the company here.

3—Seniority rights to be granted the workers.

4—The company to accept establishment of a grievance committee.

No Reference to Wage

As far as could be learned there was no reference to wage demands.

In an effort to obtain a conference with Harry Carmichael, Vice-President and General Manager of the Canadian firm, Martin telephoned C. E. Wilson, Vice-President of General Motors Corporation, at Detroit. He asked Mr. Wilson to arrange the conference with Mr. Carmichael as soon as possible.

Mass meeting of strikers will be held at eight o'clock tonight when Martin will speak to the men.

WALLBRIDGE MAN PLEADS GUILTY TO TWO CHARGES

Allen Sine Will be Sentenced When He Appears in Week

OSTERHOUT ON REMAND

Wished To Secure Service of Lawyer Before Plea Entered

Appearing on charges of attempting to run Charles Mannahan, 22-year-old Thurlow recluse and also conspiring to commit a felony, Allen Sine, 23-year-old Foxboro youth, elected summary trial and pleaded guilty to both charges before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., in the local police court. John Osterhout, 23 of Stockdale, an alleged accomplice of Sine's, was asked to plead. Osterhout requesting the services of counsel, both men were remanded in custody for one week. Sine was committed to the Belleville jail. Trial will was denied.

Sine appeared charged with attempting to run down Mannahan, contrary to section 446 of the Criminal Code, on the night of April 12th. Before he was asked to plead guilty, Magistrate Butler cautioned the youth as to the seriousness of the crime. "Have you a lawyer in court?" he asked the Crown Attorney, "No sir," replied Sine and the magistrate further intimated they did not deem the service of a solicitor in defiance. Sine pleaded guilty to the above charge and subsequently Charge of "unlawfully conspiring with John Osterhout and others to commit an indictable offence." Twice Sine openly stated he did not wish to have counsel despite the fact Mr. Donovan warned him of the seriousness of the crime.

John Osterhout appeared, but before the charges were read against him, he addressed the court by stating his solicitor was unable to attend court today, requesting Magistrate Butler to enlarge both cases for one week.

Sine and Osterhout were arrested by a posse of Provincial and R.C.M.P. on the property of Charles Mannahan on the night of April 12th. Further information had been received, that two men were planning to kill the 72-year-old recluse, who was reported to be in possession of a large sum of money. A police cordon was thrown around the Mannahan home on the night in question when it was found that Sine and Osterhout were ultimately arrested as they allegedly approached the Mannahan house.

King Leads Movement To Scrap War Trophies

Orders Removal of Two German Field Pieces From Sunken Garden at Windsor Castle — Money to be Used to Finance Rearmament Program

London, April 16—(AP)—Led by the King, a movement was sweeping England today to scrap the proud trophies won by British armies on the field of battle to help finance Britain's $7,500,000,000 program for new armaments.

His Majesty started the campaign with an order to remove two German field pieces from the east terrace of Windsor Castle. It was he considered such war relics not in keeping with the beauty of the terrace and its famous sunken gardens.

Other hard won trophies will be offered for sale as so much scrap iron to help finance the rearmament program.

The town clerk of Hythe in Kent offered the town's one rusty old tank and German field gun to the highest bidder with the disparaging comment: "They are just junk anyway."

The watering place of Folkestone has decided the 12 battered guns which stand in its public park must go.

Folkestone caught at the opportunity to get rid of a large tank which the city father had long considered dangerous to the children who play around it.

WHEAT PRICES CRASH TODAY

Worst Tumble in Recent Years—Drops Five Cents at Opening

Chicago, April 16.—(AP)—World prices of wheat took the worst tumble in many years today.

Wheat at Chicago at times broke five cents, the maximum limit allowed in one day, while Liverpool and Rotterdam values were off as much as 7 1-8 and 8 1-4 cents respectively. Buenos Aires wheat quotations plunged almost 10 cents on top of yesterday's break of equal proportions. At Winnipeg, May wheat tumbled the 5-cent limit, a drop of ten cents in two days.

Veteran traders here said it has been several years since wheat has fallen quite so quickly on such widespread proportions.

They attributed the heavy selling here as well as in other world markets partly to the general decline in commodity markets and to some revision in Traders' ideas as to wheat demand following a slowing up of export clearances and the general liquidation of speculative holdings throughout the world.

When wheat for May delivery in Chicago jumped to $1.30 at today's opening it showed a loss of almost eight cents in two days and was 25 cents below the high point to which was established at $1.45 1-8 scarcely more than a week ago.

WINDSOR RESIDENT HELD BY INSURGENTS

Windsor, Ont., April 16 (CP)—The wife and daughter of Bert Lee, Windsor man only recently released in the Spanish Civil War, had fears allayed today when they saw a newspaper picture of prisoners in an Insurgent military camp which included Levy, for word then received from Levy since he was captured eight weeks ago.

His last letter to his wife here arrived the same day as a news picture showing Levy in captivity along with approximately 25 Englishmen by Insurgent forces, which left Windsor late last year for London. He joined the International Brigade fighting in the Civil War with Loyalist forces.

NEW BOAT SERVICE TO FELIXTOWE

Leamington, Ont., April 16—(CP)—Commencing today, Pelee Island and the mainland for 22 seasons, the steamship Pelee will run daily from here to Pelee Island route this season. Federal government subsidies were called off by the steamship or mastership service between the Island, Leamington and Kingsville, Essex county towns.

Dominion government subsidy for the route has been restored from $8,250 to $7,000. Frank Harris, President of the Windsor and Pelee Island Steamship Company, said the Pelee would not operate for any amount less than that received last year.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Watkins Glen, N.Y., April 16—(CP)—There's a robin in the cage which does everything but talk. "Pretty, pretty you little cheat."

Mr. and Mrs. Emma Dodsal reported that each day it lays an egg on the color tone of their home and if he read it beforehand, it files around and taps on the kitchen window.

That gets results.

Denver, April 16 (CP)—C. J. Scheuerman, Denver musician, is "shaking" with an old fiddle again—a valuable violin which disappeared from a music store theatre in which his orchestra was playing.

Yesterday renovating the theatre found the violin in its case, undamaged, under the flooring.

Cairo, April 16 (CP-Reuther)—The world's oldest living couple, a mother and her daughter, have been discovered in a village of lower Egypt during the Egyptian census being carried out. The mother, Hafsya El-Sayed, is 127 years old and her daughter, Moscharafa Hachem, is 107. Even though they are wizened and like dates in color and parchment, the census official reported they believe the ages claimed by the women until the mother began to boast about Napoleon's campaign in Egypt.

TWO ATTEMPTS TO REPAIR BRIDGE

Insurgents Hammered With Intense Artillery Fire

Madrid, April 16.—(AP)—Two desperate attempts by Insurgents today to repair the Manzanares River Bridge between Casa de Campo and 3,000 men beleaguered in University City were hammered back today with intense artillery fire.

Government troops reported the movements toward the partially destroyed wooden span, and field pieces and mortars which were kept trained on the bridge, immediately began to pour shells into it.

Far-flung Government bombing forays were reported by the Air Ministry, one phase of this action dis-rupping efforts of General Francisco Franco to assemble troops for a drive on Madrid from the northeast.

The attempt struck at a railway station and cavalry barracks at Valladolid, 100 miles northwest of Madrid, and at a train and fifteen cars and surrounding buildings at Medina del Campo, 70 miles from Palencia, and 60 miles southwest of Madrid.

VESSEL REPORTED TRYING TO RUN BISCAY BLOCKADE

COURSE ACROSS ZONE

British Labor Will Return to Attack Upon British Policy

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, Apr. 16 (AP) —A British merchant vessel was reported today to have been stopped by a British destroyer from attempting to run the blockade of Bilbao, Spain.

London, Apr. 16 (CP-Havas)—Another Labor assault on the government's Spanish policy in the House of Commons appeared likely today as reports from the Franco-Spanish coastal zone indicated the British freighter Mary Llewellyn, carrying food supplies to the Basques, was attempting to run the "blockade" of allegedly mine-infested Biscayan waters.

Labor's decision to return to the attack was reached at a party meeting last night. It was inspired by fresh official assurances from the Basque government, seven to Bilbao harbor was still free, despite reports of mines and the presence of insurgent warships in the vicinity.

With 1,000 tons of potatoes aboard the Mary Llewellyn, Captain J. A. Jones, was reported heading for Santander, west of Bilbao. His course would lie directly across the blockade zone.

Three Ships Free.

Labor secretly addressed ammunition for its attack on official Basque dispatches announcing one Danish and two British vessels had sailed out of Bilbao harbor yesterday without damage or incident.

The sailing of the two other British merchantmen—the Seven Seas Spray and the Hazel Dollar—was cited by Jean De Lux to take food to the Basques also believed the extent of the "blockade" exaggerated, it was reported to the Labor caucus.

Labor laid down a policy since was commissioned by his party to report the question of the government's policy on protection for British merchantmen. It was also decided already has asked the premier to step out of negotiations.

The possible the union leaders will be given the first official intimation of the concessions the company is willing to make to the workers. Premier Hepburn announced early this week General Motors is willing to raise wages and improve working conditions.

The union representatives would attend the conference with the expectation of being able to present international president, agreed with General Motors executives, to control yesterday that the Canadian strike must be settled in Canada. They were prepared to say what they would be called as long as General Motors was willing to send cars into Canada.

Strike "Sell Out"

The Oshawa workers do not consider Martin's action a "sell-out". Mr. Millard said that the men may appear to the public that his union has deserted them in favor of the international but that was not true. He declared it must be remembered General Motors refused to deal at all States have an agreement and refused to do so.

The conference was scheduled for 2:30 p.m. in a short chamber in the parliament buildings basement where Col. Fraser Hunter, Toronto M.L.A. was presiding over a more men in a special police force at Premier Hepburn's order.

Hepburn Prepares for Conference that may End G. M. Strike at Oshawa

Recognition of Union is Principle Involved in Parleys

WILL SUBMIT OFFER

No Strike in U. S. as Long as Cars Not Sent Into Canada

Toronto, April 16 (CP)—Early settlement of the nine-day Oshawa General Motors strike seemed possible today as Premier Mitchell Hepburn prepared to preside at a peace conference in his office.

It expected representatives of General Motors of Canada and the Oshawa local of the United Automobile Workers of America to gather around the conference table for a discussion he hoped would put 3,700 workers back in the plants.

The Premier issued invitations to the peace parley last night after a three-hour conference with H. J. Carmichael, General Manager of the motor car company. He invited Mr. Carmichael, J. B. Highfield, plant manager in Oshawa, C. H. Millard, president of the Oshawa Union, and J. L. Cohen, Union counsel.

Recognition Point of Issue

Recognition of the Union is the principal issue involved. Whether Mr. Hepburn will have new powers ask to put before the workers' representatives in the report he did not say. General Motors has indicated its willingness to drop up an agreement with a "company" local Union members bid not with the Union, Hepburn has supported this stand and refused to deal with Hugh Thompson, organizer for John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization. He does not consider Millard a representative of the C.I.O.

Mr. Thompson was reported last night to have started for Windsor Ont., and Mr. Millard added he would have to obtain the permission of union stewards in Oshawa before he could attend. The Oshawa local already has asked the premier to

Sweeping Decrees in Italy To Increase Birth Rate

Authorize Loans up to $150 To Induce Couples to Wed

TAX LAWS PASSED

Rome, Apr. 16 (AP)—The Italian cabinet today decreed sweeping measures to promote an increase in the Italian birthrate, including the authorization of marriage loans of $50 to $150 to induce couples to wed.

To be eligible for the loan, each member of an engaged pair must be under 26 years of age. Repayment must begin within a year after marriage if no children have been born. Heads of families with small sums to be repaid for each child born to the state-sponsored families through reduction by 10 per cent. also will be negotiated for each birth.

An annual state contribution of $25,000 was ordered for the maintenance of a Fascist Union of big families which will be similar to the union of ex-servicemen and will assist its members to find employment and solve their personal problems.

A variety of tax laws were passed, without mention of the amounts involved, to induce marriage and provide relief of large families. In each case exemptions were allowed to heads of families in direct ratio to the number of their children.

Premier Adds Giant Cracker to Verbal Fire-works

ANSWERS TO HALL

Toronto, Apr. 16 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn today added a couple of succinct sentences to the wealth of verbal fire-crackers popping off around the fringes of the Oshawa strike.

Of Oshawa Mayor Alex Hall's statement he would like to give the Premier a threshing for saying Hall owns the province money, Mr. Hepburn said:

The premier weighs 197, Mayor Hall about 125.

Mr. Hepburn also had a word for conflicting statements on arrangements between the Ontario and Dominion governments for police protection:

"There are too d— many lies going around."

Hollywood, April 16 (AP)—Charlie Chaplin, the silent man who favors dumb characters, has one that speaks of a year today—his 48th birthday.

Since his return from a long trip to the Orient he has been dancing Paulette Goddard, and her mother, Mrs. Edith Goddard, has been a recluse.

Based on the story, "Regency" by Novelist Ida M. Murray, it will star the lanky-haired Miss Goddard. Mr. Millard will not appear on it. He is writing the screen story and will direct and produce it.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Everyone knows what a cold wave is! This phenomenon is always in process when water or ice is present. It occurs at all moist surfaces on the earth and from cloud and fog particles in the air. Its rate increases with the temperature, the wind speed, exposed water surface, temperature of the water, and with the greater difference between the wet and dry bulb thermometers. It decreases as the air pressure increases and, with greater humidity. Evaporation continues even after the water is frozen; it is then called sublimation. In general the total evaporation equals the precipitation.

1,000 POUND SAFE AND $300 TAKEN

Hamilton, Ont., April 16 (CP)—Safe robbers struck here last night entering the premises of General Motors Products of Canada, Limited, on John Street North, and escaping with a steel safe weighing almost 1,000 pounds and containing $300.

Entrance was gained through a rear door and once inside the thieves broke the safe about five feet by three, on to a truck.

They paused long enough to take a mechanic tool box and a heavy sledge-hammer, probably with a view to working on the safe later, and then drove calmly through the large front doors of the establishment.

The safe contained company records, cheques and about $275 in cash. A glass bowl containing $50 in nickels was also added to the loot.

The truck was recovered later on Victoria Avenue South, and it is thought those responsible for the theft carried the safe to an isolated spot to work on it.

There was no indication of how the safe was removed.

REV. ROBT. HALL ACCEPTS CALL TO NIAGARA FALLS

Minister of Former John Street Congregation Will Assume New Duties on May 1st at Kitchener Street United Church

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 16 (CP) —Rev. Robert Hall, Belleville, today accepted a unanimous call to the pastorate of Kitchener Street United Church, this city. He was chosen on a largely attended meeting of the congregation last evening and today Rev. Mr. Hall signified to accept and will assume his new duties on May 1. Mr. Hall presently is minister of the church, the Belleville building having been destroyed by fire. He succeeds Rev. Thomas McMurray, who recently accepted a call to Danforth United Church, Toronto.

"Of course this is subject to the endorsation of the church courts," commented Rev. Mr. Hall, at his home, 260 Albert Street, Belleville, this afternoon. The appointment will come before both Presbyteries of Belleville and Niagara Falls and be brought before the Transfer Committee meeting in Toronto next week.

"This is a very interesting and promising charge," he said.

A native of Cornwall, Ont., the Rev. Robert Hall spent four years overseas, part of which time he was in Germany as a prisoner of war. On his return, immediately after the war he entered McGill University where he took courses in arts and theology. On his graduation in 1924 he went to Oxford for two years to take the New Testament.

Returning from Oxford he became associated with Rev. Dr. Richard Roberts who was pastor of the American Presbyterian Church, Montreal. On Dr. Roberts' leaving for Toronto to become minister of the Sherbourne Street United Church, Mr. Hall became pastor of the American Church at Montreal. In 1929 when the Rev. Dr. Hough was called to the American Church, Rev. Mr. Hall was free to accept the call to John Street United Church, Belleville. It was during this pastorate that the John Street Church was destroyed by fire late last autumn. Some weeks ago the congregation after a thorough canvass of the situation decided to "disband, the disposal of the assets of the congregation being left to a committee appointed for that task.

Rev. Hall is well known throughout the district as the Bay of Quinte Conference and other Conferences and his numerous friends here are pleased to learn of unanimous decision of the Niagara Falls congregation to have Rev. Mr. Hall as minister.

COUNTRY TOWN WIFE AMAZED BY NEW YORK

Winner of a nation-wide prize-ticket contest for the best pro-Roosevelt essay, Mrs. Mary Virginia Morgan, 45, of Montrose, W. Va., squinted down at the crowds from the 44th floor window of her hotel and said admirably:

But neither the height, nor the crowds, nor the reporters nor photographers abashed her.

"Crowds bother me? No, sir. We've got 200 folks in Montrose—a right purt place."

QUICK ENDING TO STRIKE EXPECTED

Settlement Before Monday Told a Windsor Gathering

Windsor, Ont., April 16 (CP)—A quick ending to the strike of 2,700 General Motors workers in Oshawa is expected by Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America.

Stopping off here last night en route to Oshawa, the Union head in an address to 1,500 workers said he believed the strike situation "would be cleared up shortly." Martin indicated he expected a settlement would be reached before Monday.

He made it clear he considered the recent agreement signed in the United States with General Motors, ending a prolonged strike in the motor firm's plant there, applied also to his units in Canada.

Earlier, a company spokesman said after a meeting between Martin, other Union heads and company officials in Detroit, General Motors considered the United States strike-settlement agreement did not apply to General Motors' Canadian plants.

From that conference came the official statement the conferees had agreed the Oshawa strike should "be settled between the General Motors of Canada officials and the committee representing the five various local Unions involved."

Statement Made

In his address last night, Martin said:

"When we made an agreement with General Motors to recognize the United Automobile Workers of America as the collective bargaining agency for those who were members—and we had members in Canada—that applied to the General Motors plants in Canada. We expect General Motors to live up to this agreement."

He denied the committee for industrial organization, with which the U.A.W.A. is affiliated, was Communistic, as charged by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, when Martin termed "the little Hitler of Canada." Referring to Mr. Hepburn's efforts to settle the nine-day strike, he said the Premier was "a fidgety and nervous man who seeks to protect the imaginary interests of certain companies in Canada."

To his listeners, Martin said "we expect that the difficulties in Canada will soon be ironed out."

PROPOSE QUINTS LIVE IN TORONTO

Ald. Quinn Would Place Them in Casa Loma

Toronto, April 16—(CP)—Like real life Princesses, Canada's famed Dionne Quintuplets would live in the famous "white elephant" castle, Casa Loma, under an elaborate plan outlined before the Civic Property Committee here yesterday.

Heralded by its proponents as "Canada greatest tourist attraction," the scheme would place the five lovely Dionne children in the $2,000,000 relic that Sir Henry Pellatt built and could not keep up, to its present owners, the city, stand for back taxes.

The Quints would only have to live there eight months of the year, being free to return to Callander for the other four months. It would be grand and glorious publicity for Toronto—and there Casa Loma is almost as well known as the Quints themselves—said Ald. Quinn, the one optimistic backer, would yield enough money as a tourist attraction with the Quints to "pay off the entire National Debt in 20 years."

Alderman Percy Quinn is credited with the idea. Here are some of the principal results promised if the scheme were carried out:

Space in the rest of the now-empty castle could be easily rented as restaurants, shops, Hollywood film companies would fall over each other to pay "enormous sums" to picture the Quints in such romantic surroundings. More than 1,000,000 persons have visited Callander and a golden stream could be diverted to Toronto. Nominal charge of 50 cents could be made for entrance to the ground.

Ald. Dunn's motion was appointed a committee of one to place his idea before the Property Commissioners.

MAYOR HALL SAYS C. I. O. BACKS UP

Issue Squarely up to People of Canada is Clair:

Oshawa, Ont., April —16(CP)— Striking General Motors workers today—ninth day since 3,700 quit the big automobile plant—made no reference in their expectation that a settlement of the tieup would come before next week.

They talked over the situation on the streets and in the picket line with these new developments before them:

1. Resumption of negotiations in Toronto, at the invitation of Premier Hepburn, between the local union's represen'atives and executives of the company.

2. Homer Martin, President of the United Automobile Workers of America, was expected here early this afternoon to confer with union officials.

3. Martin's statement last night at Windsor that he was hopeful of a settlement before Monday.

4. Statement by Martin that the U.A.W.A. was affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, which Premier Hepburn has termed "Communistic."

5. Statement by Martin that the Oshawa strike would be settled between the General Motors of Canada officials and the committee representing the five various local Unions involved.

Statement Made

In his address last night, Martin said:

"Faithful Friend to Women"

MANY women suffer from periodic pains — side or back, cardiac drain — "heat flashes," they should try that vegetable tonic favorably known for almost 70 years as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. And this Mrs. Wm. Arthur of 194 Dufferin St., Stratford, Ont., said: "I surely have derived great benefit from Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I was in a very nervous state, and the doctor of every children and it brought me through each period of expectancy in the best of health. It helped to drive away that upset, nervous condition and the ache in my back. Also it strengthened my entire system." Druggists everywhere.

POLICE BLOTTER

Stolen from its parking position on Church St. a new Chrysler sedan, the property of Father E. M. Leacy, Deseronto, disappearing last night and has not been located as yet, local police announced today. Father Leacy parked his automobile in the vicinity of St. Michael's Academy, where he was attending a meeting of the Holy Name Society in Belleville last night. When Father Leacy returned for his car about midnight, the vehicle was missing.

Local police were informed, that the automobile had been securely locked by Father Leacy before he attended the meeting in St. Michael's Academy. Whether the car thieves broke a window in the car during later made conclude starting the vehicle by changing the wiring system or not still remains a mystery.

Immediately upon being notified of the car theft by Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. P. Nicholson local police broadcasted the alarm to police throughout the province within a 100 mile radius of Belleville, and no reports of the vehicle having been recovered were made today. Father Leacy's Chrysler sedan is painted black, bore Ontario licence plates number L-7-89 with the serials number 9756590.

While making their rounds last night local police found the rear door of a local business house insecure. Upon being notified and arriving at the scene of the incident, the manager assured the police nothing was missing, and the door was made secure. Three local inebriates, who had imbibed too freely but not well, were apprehended in Belleville last night and detained at the police station all-ved peacefully within the cell night. Sixteen transients slumb- block also.

RURAL IMPROVEMENT IN INDIA

Dr. D. Spencer Hatch, American Y. M. C. A. rural expert, has become the new president of the World's Rural Committee Y.M.C.A. according to word from Geneva. This honor comes as a result of his outstanding success in improving rural conditions in Southern India to which he was loaned sixteen years ago by the Y.M.C.A.'s of North America. He chose Martandam, one of the poorest of 750,000 villages in India, as his demonstration centre. He has helped to show the way for improving native cattle, providing more pasturage, installing sanitation and augmenting the production of food and clothing in the vast rural areas where ninety per cent of India's people live.

Today Martandam is the shrine of rural progress with officials of Governments, representatives of churches and schools and thousands of poor villagers making pilgrimages to it annually for training and direction.

Since 1926 there have been 900 rural reconstruction leaders trained at Martandam. The Governments of Baroda, Pudukkottai, Ceylon, Trichinopoly, Mysore and Hyderabad have had officers trained there. Sixteen years ago there was only one Y.M.C.A. in India teaching the message of self-help, now there are 116 in Travancore State alone. The seed of rural reconstruction has been sown and its flowering all over India is inevitable.

White leghorn fowl, the Antigonon flower and energy are signs of the Y. M. C. A.'s rural program in India. These represent the thriving poultry market, the rich pastures for a profitable honey business and cleanliness in previously dirty and drab huts. Energy returns the villager, instead of existing in the old hopeless apathy has been shown by the Y.M.C.A., a way to help himself out of his poverty.

Dr. Hatch recognized that if his adopted people were to rise out of their depressed and apathetic state, they must help themselves economically. Their problems were poor cattle, insufficient pasturage, arid land, dirt, disease and little food, clothing and training. He improved the native stock by importation of new blood to cattle and goats. He encouraged weaving and provided instruction for those who wanted to continue this ancient Indian trade. He studied the growth of native products, and made suggestions for their improvement and marketing. He studied grains and grasses which could be successfully sown in a land beset with many water problems. Sudan grass, cowpeas and other foller possibilities are now increasing India's ability to care for more and better cattle.

By-products of this great self-help experiment have been various classes in adult education, sanitation, health, reading, Bible classes, hygiene, sanitation, and training in all kinds of cottage industries. The man behind this is Dr. D. Spencer Hatch.

MARRIAGE STATISTICS

Divorce statistics for Ontario in the year 1935 indicated the sixth year of marriage as a critical year for in that period 42 divorces were granted. The seventh year was critical too with 38 divorces, the eleventh with 37 and the fifth and eighth with 33.

Figures for that year show the danger period of disagreements and incompatibilities leading to divorce as from five to eight years especially, with the eleventh year standing out also.

But newlyweds do not escape the separating of the divorce court, as six persons were granted divorce after one year of marriage and the first break in the series of years of marriage comes only after 34 years of marriage. To that time every year is represented in the divorces. Even in the later years divorces were granted one person after 37 and another after 38 years of married life.

In the previous year ten years of marriage drove 34 persons to secure final decrees.

Cities with large populations naturally sent more persons to the altar 15,647 as against 9,454 marriages from the rural areas and 1,724 from the towns in 1935.

One hopeful sign is that the ratio of marriages to 1000 population was the highest in 1935 since 1930, namely 7.5. In 1930 it stood at 7.6. In the boom year it was 8.3, the highest of the decade.

SERVICE

Service is what we hope for in hotels
And possibly obtain by ringing bells
And tipping freely; anyhow, it will,
Though never mentioned there, be on your bill.

Service might well be symbolized by swarms
Of menials in upholstered uniforms
Of flocks of open-palms that intimate
"They also serve who only stand and wait."

Service, the courtesy of simpler days,
Is now a boast, an advertising phrase;
For Service is like Silence, rarely met;
The more it's talked about, the less you get.

CONSIDER THE TELEPHONE—developed within the lifetime of the average citizen of middle age. A toy in 1877, a world-wide necessity in 1937, something it would be rather difficult to do without in business and social circles—so dependent is the life of the community on the telephone for social calls as well as contact with local business houses and emergency calls. In business the telephone offers a service which is world-wide, instanced a few days ago when a Belleville citizen conversed with his wife in Berlin, Germany. With the telephone as with most modern services folks are apt to take as a matter of course and cease to wonder at the wonderful magic of it all. Those of us who have good memories can recall with a smile the first telephone exchange with one girl ran the switchboard and it was considered the thing to call her up and pass jokes, there seeming to be ample time for fun and frolic on this new gadget which in time necessarily be limited in scope and more or less of a trial to manipulate. Memory also recalls the flickerings of the first incandescent lamps in the homes and the sputtering of the carbon street lights. Gosh! all hemlock! but we have come a long distance in a comparatively short time when we consider all the comforts of home and business.

OLD TIME SHOWMAN well known throughout Ontario died recently in Windsor in the person of William Bowman, who had been in declining health for more than a year suffering from high blood pressure. Peterborough Examiner has this to say:—

Born on July 12, about sixty-five years ago, son of William and Mary Bowman, he possessed a talent for showmanship which seemed to follow him to the grave, for he was buried on the 17th of March. As a young lad he became an expert stilt-walker, and was engaged in that featured role with circuses and side shows. Many people in Peterborough can remember him as the one and only stilt-walker they ever saw in this city when he was in his heyday of "big money" years ago. At one time he was associated with Harry Lindley's old stock company, and in later years he was advance man for Bert Johnston's touring show. Mr. Bowman was also a "pitch man" engaging in the business of selling novelties of all kinds at fairs and on market places up and down the country.

The Bowman family is well remembered in Peterborough. William Bowman, senior, was proprietor of the old Oxford Hotel in the building on the east side of George Street, immediately north of the C.P.R., and afterwards in the property now known as King's Hotel on Simcoe street. Mrs. Bowman was a concert singer in her younger days, and was known to audiences throughout Central Ontario.

During the war "Billie" Bowman enlisted and went overseas, and his funeral in Windsor was marked by military honors. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Carrie Sheppard of Windsor.

Stray Bits

OAKUM AND PITCH—

A tarry odor rises in the air of the harbor front, and on the spring breeze is borne the hollow thump of hammer and rasp of saw. For the ice has gone and the thoughts of waterfront men turn to white sails and rippling waves. It's the first sign of water weather when scores of men, chisel and oakum in hand, prowl through the beached forms of the stranded craft, still on their winter mud, but awaiting release for a summer's cruise. Gone are the more the water dogs, in hibernation all winter, have returned to their summer haunts, and the tobacco-stained benches, worn to mahogany smoothness by the shifting seats of those who come of an evening to gossip of ships and ports and dirty-ing wax . . . but mostly of ships, full-rigged and lean, the ones the days gone by. . . . have taken their place in the sun again, inviting the weary or those who simply sit, the painting up and tuning up time, and scrapers and blow torches are brought into play, peeling off the rusted paint from the rugged sides, pearred and scraped with their rusty encrustices with rocky shoals of the bay. And along craft, too, are overhauled; their sails and gear worn and salted away during the sea's play on the water, renewed and strengthened for another season. Along the waterfront Spring has returned again and as busy as the proverbial bee, as the workers on the harbor are they who follow the call of the sea, the sun and waves.

MIX-UP IN NAMES—

In a Los Angeles lawsuit, Judge Cosgrave asked the first defendant to go on the stand by "Marvin Coates." replied the man indicated, and what is your name?" the judge asked of the next. "Coates, Your Honor," was the reply.

"Well, well," chuckled the judge, "Coates and Fears. And now I suppose you're Hare or Shoes," pointing to a third defendant. "No, your honor, it's Harold Shurts," replied the last of the trio, hopefully biding for fear the judge would think they were playing a game on him.

But Judge Cosgrave took a drink of water before answering with a chuckle. Then in a clearer tone he asked Lockhart Goodwin, the lawyer sent to represent them. The three looked at each other in consternation. Charles Yost was their attorney but he was not present at the time.

After the uproar in court had died down, Judge Cosgrave announced postponement of the case for one week, when Coates, Fear, Shurts and their attorney, Yost, could all be in court together.

TESTING THE DRIVER—

Here is what an applicant for a first-time driving license has to do in Salisbury (Rhodesia):

Drive at fast rate and then pull up suddenly when sack of flour, representing a child, is thrown on the roadway.

Drive past again and be suddenly confronted with a "mumsmah" pushing a baby carriage. Repeat test with two jay-walking pedestrians.

Manage gear, avoid car coming from side turning and stop as quickly as possible with front wheels back of white line.

Then, whether you are driving a sports car, a heavy truck, driving around point duty policeman in crowded city, pass.

Reverse into a narrow parking space.

Give all the statutory signals.

Answer a number of questions taken at random from the Roads and Traffic Act.

One wonders what the traffic accident statistics are in Rhodesia. If one means anything the high-way toll should be considerably light. The Ontario examinations are child's play compared to these. —Stratford Beacon Herald.

RULES OF BRIDGE—

Any one who may suffer from bridge may be interested in a new development evolved by Oswald Jacoby, with tongue in cheek, for a recent social tournament at the Waldorf-Astoria. Lord's Day Act

"Editor, The Ontario Intelligencer,

"Sir:—In the present effort of the Toronto police to enforce the Lord's Day Act against petty trading on Sunday the question has been asked, "what about sale of gasoline?" For the information of the public it should be stated that in 1925 a judgment was given by the Supreme Court of Alberta, on appeal by the Crown by way of a stated case which brought the sale of gasoline on Sunday within the provisions of section and mercy permitted by the Lord's Day Act of Canada. This judgment has been accepted generally throughout Canada.

"Considerable publicity has been given to the proposal made first by Mr. Hepburn, M.P., that the antiquated Lord's Day Act of 1845 be revised. The only thing to do with that Act is to repeal it entirely and rely in Ontario as in other Provinces of Canada upon the Federal Act of 1906, which is free from the weaknesses of the old Act. The Alberta decision given after the Act of 1925 has been upon the Ontario authorities entirely unwilling to part with this law.

"Yours faithfully,

Chas. H. Ginnetti, Gen. Sec'

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was sewing to herself on her sewing machine and I said, Hay ma.

Dont call me hay ma, and anyway I need all my attention to get this sewing done, she said.

Meening not to start asking her questions, and then bothering her with something I want to ask you about sir, ma. I mean what if sir isn't moving it's still air, isn't it, ma?

Of course, naturally, air cant be anything but air, ma said, and I said, And how about when it's moving?

Then it's wind, I hope you know that much about natural history, ma said, and I said, But even when it's wind it's still air, isn't it ma?

What? Yes of course, I told you that once, or different words to the same effect, ma said, and I said, but still if it's moving it cant be still, can it, ma?

What? How can it be moving and still be still? ma said and I said, That's what I mean, ma, if air isn't moving it's still air, isn't it, ma?

I didn't say it could, dity, ma said, and I said, Well then G, ma, if it's not still air what is it, mut or something?

Now look here do you want information or do you want a headache, O dear now I've gone and broken a good needle in the mist of a good seam and it's all your fault and now I'll have to get out of the house this instant or you'll stay in till I give you permission to go out, make your self useful for once. Which I did, being to go out, and I tried it on some of the other fellows and they tried it on each other but it was no use, there is little on account of nobody having any needles to brake.

JOHN MILLER TO FACE LIFE TERM

Guilty of Manslaughter in Slaying of Brother-in-Law

Pembroke, Ont., April 15 (CP) — Life imprisonment last night faced John Miller, 29-year-old Kyanville man, after he heard a jury find him guilty of manslaughter in the shotgun slaying last January of his brother-in-law, Gregory Tracey.

The jury accepted the defence contention Miller slew his friend and relative in a fit of uncontrollable rage following a drinking spree, that arose from differences of opinion over treatment of Miller's sick wife, Tracey's sister.

Tracey died in Renfrew hospital Jan. 23, a few hours after Miller fired a load of shot into his stomach in the kitchen of the Tracey home, Lacey's general store, where Miller worked. They had gone to get an automobile to take Mrs. Miller to her father's home.

The shot blasted hopes of two young women, one a mother, who married the men in a double ceremony little more than a year ago.

Dispute which led to the shooting arose during convalescence of Mrs. Miller after she had born a son. Miller, trial evidence indicated, had quarrelled with her, demanding a display of affection she was unable to give during her illness.

Removed to Father's Home

The woman's family wished her removed to the home of her father, Michael Tracey. Miller refused at first, but later acquiesced and went with Gregory to get keys to an automobile from Lacey's store.

Miller was alleged to have taken a shotgun from the wall, opened a box of shells lying on a desk, and fired on Gregory. Later he went to Michael Tracey's home, called the family to the front door and fired a shot at Michael, his son John, and his daughter, Mary. The shot missed them all. A couple of later Miller was arrested at his father's home, found in a bed fully dressed.

It took the jury two hours and 15 minutes to reach its verdict. Miller heard it without visible emotion.

Mr. Justice Ainslie W. Greene told him he was a "very fortunate man" as he sentenced him to life imprisonment. "Perhaps," he added, "they gave consideration to your previous good record and the fact you have a wife and child."

CASH DEMANDED NOT VOUCHERS

30 Relief Workers at Guelph Fail to Return to Jobs

Guelph, Ont., April 15 (CP)—Thirty men employed on the first relief work carried on in Guelph in many months went on strike today after one day's operation, demanding wages cash instead of vouchers. City officials told the strikers no cash would be paid, and that all men who refused to work would automatically go off relief.

Their wives and families will still receive vouchers sufficient for themselves alone. Thirty men received cards to go to work yesterday in accordance with a plan adopted at a recent city council meeting.

When they discovered that they would be paid in vouchers and not in cash they refused today to return to the job.

LARGER DEFENCE FORCE FORECAST

Hon. Ian MacKenzie Speaks of "Back Personnel"

Toronto, April 15 (CP)—The Globe and Mail in a dispatch from Brampton today quotes Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defence, as saying: "Canada will fight its own battles in future in traditional British manner instead of depending on the Empire's marine for its protection."

"Canada proposes to place her faith in her own strength and that of the Empire," he told the Lorne Scots Regiment at a reception in Brampton Armouries last night.

Mr. Mackenzie, the dispatch said, predicted that in the future Canada would have a larger and more efficient land force, but there would be completely mechanized within the next three years. He said Canada has "the best personnel of any land force in the entire world."

NO CLUE TO DROWNING

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 15 (CP) —No clue has been found to the identification of the apparently middle-aged man who on Tuesday afternoon, leaped to his death from the middle of the lower steel arch bridge into the Niagara River. William "Bill" Hill, veteran river man, is keeping watch for the body, though he does not believe, because of the coldness of the water that it will rise for several days. There is a chance it may not be recovered until it is carried into Lake Ontario.

UNION OFFICERS HELD IN CUSTODY

Sit-Down Strikers Numbering 126 Let Out on Bond

Detroit, April 15 (AP)—One hundred and twenty sit-down strikers elected from a lock factory were released under bond early today, but 76 union officers and sympathizers were held in jail for investigation.

Those kept in jail did not engage in the clash between strikers and police and deputies yesterday afternoon at the Yale & Towne manufacturing company's plant but were seized after the strikers were placed in patrol wagons and escort cars.

A score were hurt in the 30-minute encounter, in which the officers used tear gas and strikers loosed lead weights from windows of the building roof.

Police Commissioner Heinrich A. Pickert said three shots were fired within the factory. The injuries of a policeman and two other men required hospital treatment.

Most of the strikers were women. They had been in the plant since the United Automobile Workers of America called the strike March 8 and disregarded an injunction ordering them to leave Monday.

AYRSHIRE OWNED IN QUE. GREAT PRODUCER

Ottawa, April 15 (CP)—Macdonald Dorothy, a cow in the herd at MacDonald College, Ste. Anne De Bellevue, Que., has established herself as the highest Ayrshire butter fat producer in the world, the Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association announced today.

In the past 13 years the cow produced 154,061 pounds of milk containing 5,838 pounds of butter fat, 4.18 per cent in nine lactations or 3,246 milking days.

This record ties that of Springburn Lovely Pet, which also produced 5,838 pounds of butter fat with 136,315 pounds of milk in 3,644 milking days. Springburn Lovely Pet is dead, however, so Macdonald Dorothy, No. 89808, is now the greatest living Ayrshire producer.

Barr Dunky Maid, an Ayrshire cow in the herd of Dr. H. A. Bruce and Son, Todmorden, Ont., has produced a total of 103,171 pounds of milk, 4,397 pounds fat, average test 4.18 per cent in 3,416 milking days. This production entitled her owners, the senior partner of which is Hon. A. W. Roebuck, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, to a Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association meritorious production gold seal certificate and also a membership in the American Ayrshire Breeders' Association Hundred Thousand Pound Club.

PREMIER PLANS FUTURE STRATEGY

Continues Fight to Keep Forces of C.I.O. Gaining Strong Position

Toronto, April 15 (CP)—Premier Hepburn planned future strategy today in his fight to keep the forces of John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization from gaining a strong position in Ontario. He went ahead with the assurance that the Federal government will not intervene in the Oshawa General Motors strike and would grant him any desired assistance.

After demanding and receiving the resignation of two of his Ministers, Premier Hepburn dictated to the Dominion government that Federal intervention would be unwelcome. He had the immediate assurance of Prime Minister Mackenzie King that the Dominion Department of Labor had no wish to interfere.

Last night Mr. Hepburn conferred with Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Dominion Minister of Defence, in Toronto for three hours. Afterwards he said "police and all other resources are at our disposal."

Determined to Fight

Mr. Hepburn's determination to fight what he called the "invasion" of the Lewis organization and Communism in general" and not to negotiate settlement of the Oshawa dispute with C.I.O. representatives led to his demand for the resignation of Labor Minister David Croll and Attorney General Arthur Roebuck. He said both were out of sympathy with his policies.

Mr. Roebuck wrote that he had maintained that "the Unions of this country have an undoubted legal right to organize in such form as in their wisdom they see fit and should have an equal freedom with employers in choosing their affiliations and representatives."

Mr. Hepburn has given no indication whether he will bring new members into the cabinet to take the places of the two who resigned. The Premier said yesterday he had "no immediate intention" of calling a general election to obtain a mandate from the people. But he warned that circumstances might arise at any time which would make such a course necessary.

Stated Politicians Outside of Spain Behind The Move

London, Apr. 15 (CP-Havas)—A military dictatorship headed by General Jose Miaja, commander of government forces in the Madrid zone, with the collaboration of several of General Francisco Franco's rebels, has been proposed as one way of bringing the civil war in Spain to an end, the diplomatic correspondent of the Daily Herald reported today.

"Discreet soundings are already being taken among military leaders on both sides," the Herald said.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 15.—(CP) —Increasing demand, by Canadian manufacturers of the Antipodean automobile market was forecast by Carman Millward Croft, Canadian Trade Commissioner to New Zealand on his arrival here today.

During his 14 years at Auckland, the trade expert has seen Canadian car manufacturers annex large slices of the automobile business year by year, he said.

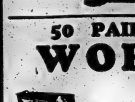
SLING SHOTS AT WINDSOR TAKEN

Bore Stamp of Foreign Country And Will be Shipped Back

Windsor, April 15 (CP)—Constable Henry Bird was "pinged" on the back of his neck with a piece of steel fired from a catapult the other day and his ire was aroused. He submitted a two-page report today to police headquarters and a cardboard box containing 37 catapults and about 300 sharp steeles to that which struck him.



After being "shot" with the pellet, Constable Bird searched several lads, aged between five and fourteen years and confiscated eight sling shots and dozens of slugs. Next he visited public schools and after teachers commanded male students to surrender their arms, several score catapults and missiles were impounded.

The weapons were affairs of spring wire and rubber. They bore the stamp of a foreign country and were obtainable in three stores here. The wholesaler promised to collect all weapons not sold and ship them back to the Toronto distributing company.

The slugs were traced to a factory where they had been carted out as scrap metal. Those things can be classed as offensive weapons under the Criminal Code," Inspector W. A. Neale said. "Anyone found with them in their possession, or selling them, may be prosecuted."

The Royal Road to the Coronation

The christening of Princess Elizabeth in Buckingham Palace on August 4, 1926 was witnessed by this group. Seated: Lady Elphinstone; Queen Mary; ... then Duke of York, holding her niece; Princess Mary, the Countess of Strathmore and the Princess Royal. Standing: the Duke of Cornwall; the late King George V, the then Duke of York, and the Earl of Strathmore.

"BRITAIN'S SWEETHEART" was born April 21st, 1926, and if anyone was needed to endear the Duke and Duchess of York to the people of the empire, it was the birth of their first daughter. We shall see how the charming little princess, now her preumptive to the throne, later on, but it is fitting that before passing on to the more varied activities of her royal father and mother, the birth and babyhood that has meant so much to them and to the empire should be mentioned.

To-day we record the scene as the little princess' christening. In an ivory lace robe in which three kings, a queen and an empress had been christened, she was named Elisabeth Alexandra Mary, after her mother, grandmother and her great grandmother. Water brought from the River Jordan in the Holy Land was used to trace the sign of the cross upon her forehead, fittingly enough by the Archbishop of York, episcopal head of the diocese which gave to the king fast daughter; the Countess of Strathmore and the Princess Royal, standing near the Duke of Cornwall; lady grew.

England and Scotland particularly greeted her with unbounded enthusiasm and her every movement was recorded and avidly read by her adoring populace.

Older to-day, and already beginning to appreciate the position she must one day fill, Princess Elizabeth is still the "Sweetheart of the Empire," and on May 12 she too will have a prominent part in the procession that hails the crowning of her royal parents.

MOSQUITOES

Mosquitoes in this country are so universally distributed that we have come to assume that, like the poor, they will always be with us. We have become so accustomed to their presence in July and August that we fail to realize that they are of importance not only to our comfort but to our economic development also. Only during periods of great abundance are we aware of their true importance and think perhaps that something should be done about it.

Not all mosquitoes are bloodsucking and of those species which are, only the females require blood The fact that mosquitoes will feed upon various animals and poultry apparently has some protective effect for man. It has been observed frequently that where domestic animals are in close proximity to human beings, the mosquitoes will feed upon the former and neglect the latter. The reduction of wild animals by the advance of civilization and the scarcity of domestic animals around centres of population has a tendency to concentrate the attack of the mosquitoes on man.

Different Reactions

The inconvenience caused to man is not from the loss of blood resulting from mosquito attack but to certain toxic substances which are injected by the insect. Different individuals react to the poison in different ways. Some suffer considerable swelling and irritation while in others the inconvenience is much less severe. Some individuals in fact work up a sort of immunity to reaction as the season progresses. The degree of annoyance caused by mosquitoes in any community depends almost entirely on their abundance. They are considered scarce when they are only annoying in such places as during dusk. Paltry large numbers can be present and still not cause much annoyance on unscreened porches. When the mosquito population is such that it is impossible to sit outdoors in comfort and when, in spite of good screening, they invade houses, considerable discomforts and loss of sleep is bound to occur.

Communities which have developed in mosquito-ridden areas accept mosquitoes as inevitable but people from areas where the mosquito population is less dense will avoid such communities or having avoided it, will lose no time in going elsewhere. Many places having similar possibilities as vacation centres have remained undeveloped because they are mosquito-ridden. Some time ago a survey was made in the State of New Jersey to determine in dollars and cents the effect of mosquitoes on land prices in general and it was found that over a period of ten years the increase in the value of taxable property in the areas where the population of mosquitoes was reduced, was twice as great as that in which mosquitoes were plentiful. It would seem, therefore, that in each community which is troubled with large numbers of mosquitoes is suffering a serious economic loss and certainly if it is anxious to develop its possibilities as a vacation centre.

GERMAN GOV'T. SUPPRESS STORY

Name of Hitler And Pola Negri Linked Romantically

Warsaw, Apr. 16 (AP) — Polish newspapers defying an unofficial "request" not to print stories relatively linking the names of Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Pola Negri, Polish star of silent motion pictures, were suppressed by the government today.

Although no official order was issued, newspapers were made to understand such rumors were not wanted, and when the Kurjer Codzienny and Kurjer Poranny persisted in reprinting such stories from British newspapers, the government acted.

Toronto, April 16 (CP)— The Armadale (Avenue) Flash may be added to the list of Toronto newspapers. Edited by Dave Sanderson, 14, it boasts a circulation of 100.

Recently he announced an unusual contest. He offered a great number of errors in an edition. The reader winning found 32.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

Gene Autry in "Ride, Ranger, Ride"

Full-blooded Indians in war paint —hundreds of them. Troops of Texas Rangers out to get their quota of redskins. Blue-coated U.S. cavalrymen "pacifying" savage chiefs and braves with Krag-Jorgensen muskets. High-wheeled prairie schooners as far as the eye can see!

Civilization at death grips with savagery!

The whole softened with sentimental songs and music, love, romance and humor.

These ingredients of exciting outdoor drama form the back-ground of "Ride, Ranger, Ride," latest Gene Autry musical which comes to the Capitol Sunday only—matinee and evening.

Assisting Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette and Kay Hughes in the musical division are the Tennessee Ramblers, a group of hill billy music makers, who are noted throughout the nation for their radio appearances.

Never before has Autry had a role with such good comedy and entertaining personality.

In supporting cast are such noted character actors as Monte Blue, former silent film star, Max Terhune, ventriloquist and eccentric comedian, George Lewis, star of short dramas, and Robert J. Bonner.

Added Featurettes.

As added short attractions a Harry Langdon comedy, "Counsel For the Defense," a mystery comedy featurette, "Love in September," a sport short, "Spills and Splashes", a Terry-toon cartoon, "Mella Shack", and the latest "Capitol News Reel" complete this splendid two-hour show.

Today Only.

Shown for the last times today two swell entertaining features, "Off to the Races" with Slim Summerville in a starring role, and "Love is a Headache," with Frank McHugh and Patricia Ellis. Rounding out the bill No. 3, a melodrama of a love triangle—wife, husband, wife's secretary—in "His Wife's Secretary", starring Warren Hull and Jean Muir.

Action Nite.

Tonight only in addition to our splendid feature attraction Helen Vinson is again presented from our stage with Tommy Mason as auctioneer at 8:30 sharp.

CLYDE BEATTY WANTS NEW ANIMAL FREAK

Chicago, Apr. 16 (CP) — Clyde Beatty whispered today that he's looking for a new animal act.

The noted animal trainer explained he wants a new kind of animal; specifically a half-lion-half-tiger.

Since a Berlin zoo owns the only such animal existence, Beatty planned his hopes on Prinsha, a lion, and Sinha, a tigress. Trained by Beatty since they were cubs, Prinsha and Sinha have overcome their natural antipathy to the extent they ride together on the back of an elephant and occupy the same cage after working hours.

"So far the phenomenon has ended there," the trainer admitted. "But I have hope. There is no biological reason why we can't have a hybrid liger-lion."

Newark Bears Stronger Club Than Last Year

(By Ry Goldberg)
(Newark Evening News)
Spring Fla., April 16.—(AP)—Newark, No. One Farm Club of the Yankees, is stronger than the Yankees, will open the International baseball League season April 22 with a stronger team than that which tied Rochester for second spot last year.

Manager Oscar Vitt has few leftovers from last season, which perhaps is just as well, for then he had only one .300 hitter, Ralph (Buzz) Boyle. And even Boyle has departed.

At first base, Johnny McCarthy, who was sold to the Giants for $40,000 has been replaced by George McQuinn, Elton Mcquinn baited .329 for Toronto, while McCarthy was hitting .276 for the Bears, that should be less of power there. Joe Gordon, a fielder who hit .300 for Oakland, has supplanted Roy Schalk, who was an equally spectacular performer on the field but hit 40 points less. Nolen Richardson at short and Merrill May, the third baseman, are holdovers.

The Newark outfield presents a complete set of new faces. There are five men in camp seeking four jobs — Buddy Scott, Jack Glynn, Jimmy Gleason, Charlie Keller and Ed Longacre. Scott, a veteran campaigner who finished last season with the Yankees, is pretty well set offensively.

Bill Baker, last year's first string catcher, has been sent to Oakland, back in his stead the Bears have a staff consisting of Willard Hershberger, a smart receiver who has been shuttling between Newark and the Pacific Coast since 1934; Buddy Rosar, hard hitting backstop from Binghamton; and Bill Holm, the equally promising Fourth from Norfolk.

Vitt has Al Piechota and Vito Tamulis from last year's pitching staff plus a flock of inexperienced hurlers. Among them are Johnny Sturgeon Chandler, Steve Sundra, Kemp Wicker and Frank Makosky all winning members of the 1936 hurling corps.

Detroit, Hockey-Mad City, As Red Wings Defeat Rangers To Win Stanley Cup 2nd Time

First U. S. Team to Win Trophy Two Years in Succession

SCORE 15 3-0

Goalie Robertson And Syd Howe Brilliant With Barry as Chief Scorer

By ALLAN NICKLESON

Detroit, Apr. 16 (CP)—Cow bells clattered and champagne glasses were lifted until dawn, at least, in this hockey-mad city today in honor of Detroit Red Wings—hockey history makers. The bells, it seemed, were the horse noise makers, and champagne the drink of all.

With four stars watching from the sidelines, the great Jack Adams-piloted machine found the end of an uphill fight in annexing the amazing New York Rangers 3-0 and planting the Stanley Cup back in its Detroit show window until the end of next season, at least.

The final gong, to the accompaniment of cheers and screeching from a joy-maddened, arena-jamming crowd of 14,162—largest gathering of the four games of the series here—marked the first time that a National League team from the United States has won the N.H.L championship and the Stanley Cup two years in succession.

Second Time In History.

It is also but the second time in history that any team has captured both titles two years in a row. Ottawa Senators accomplished it in the seasons of 1919-20, 1920-21. By a strange coincidence, Coach Lester Patrick of the vanquished Gothamites called the Wings to take the latter's old mug at the start of this season.

As in the game Tuesday—fourth of the series—clean-cut Marty Barry, all-star centre; Syd Howe, Ottawa's versatile gamecock, and Goalie Earl Robertson were the brightest stars in a shining firmament of inspired battlers.

Barry, announced winner Wednesday of the Lady Byng Trophy, awarded annually to the N.H.L. player judged to be most gentlemanly and most helpful to his team, tallied two of the goals and got an assist on the third. Long John Sorrell counted the other—his first since the playoff began.

Robertson Brilliant.

Robertson, spurned by Toronto Maple Leafs when they had a chance to buy him last year and shipped to the Hoods instead, gave a display of goaltending never surpassed in this city. He kicked out goal-labelled shots time and time again.

Brought up from the Pittsburgh Hornets, Detroit farm team, to replace the great Normie Smith, Vezina Trophy winner this season, who injured his arm in a league championship play-off game with Canadiens in Montreal, Robertson played sensationally all through the series. It is unlikely that he'll go back to the minors and Jack Adams announced some slick-haired "stiff" is due.

Robertson went into the nets when Smith suffered a recurrence of his arm injury in the first game of this low-scoring series in New York a fortnight ago Tuesday. Rangers scored that game 5-1 with three of the goals being scored on Smith. Remainder of the games were played here because Madison Square Gardens was under contract to stage a circus.

Detroit took the second game 4-3 and Rangers again forged into a game lead in winning the third 1-0. Detroit evened the count by reversing that score in the fourth meeting and Robertson gained his second successive shutout of the full-length series last night.

Howe, All Round Star

Howe, a little, rugged demon, matched his previous games performance with a great display of defensive hockey, mostly on the defence but sometimes as the forward line.

Coach Adams, apparently recovered from a fainting spell in the dressing room after the tilt, told a banquet audience that "Howe, in my opinion, the greatest all-round hockey player in the world today."

Roscoe Johnny Gallagher played probably the greatest game of his career in working like a trojan on the Detroit rearguard. He played 40 minutes and bore the brunt of defence duties after Ebbie Goodfellow suffering from exhaustion, retired in the fourth ninth, was unable to return for the second and third periods.

What appeared to be a Ranger goal was called back early in the second period and was thought by many to be the turning point of the battle. A penalty shot was called on the play but Robertson had little trouble in saving on Alex Shibicky's drive.

MANAGERS TALK AS GOOD SERIES AS TEAMS PLAYED

Adams Always Confident His Squad Could Repeat

PATRICK HOPEFUL

Ranger Mentor Even Changed His Suit to Break Jinx

By ALAN RANDALL

Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, April 15—(CP)—Lester Patrick and his New York Rangers lost the Stanley Cup series to Jack Adams' Detroit Red Wings but in the matter of words these top-ranking National Hockey League managers divided honors about evenly today. They talked as fine as they have their teams played.

They are the greatest hockey players in the world, said Adams of his Red Wings as he tapered off his word series with Patrick while the latter replied with congratulations and kept the talking laurels even.

Only once did lean-limbed Lester and rotund Jack falter. That was before last night's saw-off engagement in the best three-of-five game series. Then they became noncommittal. Words even became scarce.

Said Adams: "There's going to be a hockey game."

To which Patrick replied: "Anything can happen now."

There was none to argue with them but before that the managers engaged in optimistic orgies.

At times Adams' confident pronouncements, coming when his injuries crippled his key men, appeared to be nothing more than whistling his way past the graveyard, but after last night's 3-0 splurge that retained hockey's top honors for Detroit bore out his early remarks.

Patrick, back in New York for the first cup-round game Adams said: "we ought to take the Rangers in ten straight." But he lost the first 5-1. Before that game Patrick figured his men 6 to 5 favorites and prophesied victory. Afterwards, as Rangers headed for Detroit, Lester said he refused to worry "unless Detroit can win the next two games. There's a goal on every Ranger stick."

Always In

Burly Jack came right back at him with, "don't count us out... our boys were always in there with their best stride....we're good enough to win through. Rangers' victorious campaigns against Toronto and Montreal Maroons, and said: "It's a beautiful club, Lester has. I know we're a better team than ever now but the best team doesn't always win."

Adams was jubilant, the best team with two rookies... we're back in our stride of defence duties after Ebbie Goodfellow suffering from exhaustion retired in the fourth ninth, was unable to return for the second and third periods.

What appeared to be a Ranger goal was called back early in the second period and was thought by many to be the turning point of the battle. A penalty shot was called on the play but Robertson had little trouble in saving on Alex Shibicky's drive.

Farr Flicked Smart Left Into Baer's Face All Night

By GALE TALBOT

London, April 16—(AP) — The Tommy Farr legend was born here last night.

The 23-year-old Welsh walloper who knocked all thoughts of a comeback out of Max Baer's head.

He had "struck a blow for British boxing" before a swanky crowd of 14,000 at Harringay Arena last night and thereby playing Maxie — who was perfectly fit, but, as always, couldn't box a lick.

Late last night, as cabled offers from American promoters began arriving, every Welshman with good lungs was still singing "Land of My Fathers," and Englishmen were accosting perfect strangers to ask if they had heard the news.

By stepping in and slapping Baer out of shape to win a lopsided 12-round decision, over-rated Tommy, a ring career, that began when he gave up the idea of remaining a kitchen hand in his native Tonypandi, Wales. At the same time, if you take Baer's word for it, the curly-haired Californian is convinced he's all washed up in the punching business.

But aside from Britain's justifiable pride in its Empire Champion, it appears, that young Farr is actually a lot of fighter.

Never before had he been known as anything but a plodder. England's own experts called him a "good second rater," even after he won the British Heavyweight title from South African Ben Foord a couple of months ago.

Before last night's battle, they predicted the ferocious Baer-man would knock his block off. They made Maxie a 3 to 1 shot. They had much to answer for today.

Not only was Farr able to stay out of the way of Maxie's murderous right—the same right that knocked off such high-taters as Max Schmeling and Primo Carnera, but also he proved at the same time that he's a pretty fair country boxer.

The more Maxie snorted and tried to bait him out of the ring, the harder Tommy fought back.

DICK HOWCINAK LEADING JUNIOR SCORER IN SERIES

Pro. Scouts Watch Closely This Bundle of Hockey Dynamite

WEIGHT AGAINST THEM

Max Silverman Still Thinks His Redmen Good Enough to Win

(By William H. Dunaday)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 16.— (CP)—Professional scouts today kept a close watch on a boy, who may prove to be another mighty-mite of big League hockey—Little Dick Howcinak. The 135-pound bundle of dynamite has played a big part in giving Winnipeg Monarchs an edge over Copper Cliff Redmen in the struggle for Dominion Junior Supremacy.

Dick has fired two goals and figured in six others to lead both teams in scoring. His teammate, 20-year-old Johnny McCreedy is next in line with four goals and two assists. Johnny, who has become a trouble-headed blonde, has been a standout also. But it is the only thing that may hamper his hockey future.

More than one hockey expert has refreshed to the 19-year-old Winnipeg boy's weight. Howcinak earned the title Mighty-Mite by his stellar pinch-hitting with Toronto Maple Leafs in the National League. Like Dick, now with Pilot Mound, Manitoba, in the International American League, Kowcinak is poison around the Opposition nets.

Heading Redmen's Parade of scoring specialists are Alf Wenman, string centre and Roy Heximer, winger of the first line. Zach has proved more than a little clever assist in the three games and Coach Max Silverman figures these boys will play leading parts in Saturday afternoon contest when he hopes his team will even the best-of-five series at two wins each.

Silverman Confident

"Absolutely—we'll win," said Wily Max, when asked of his team's chances. "If our boys start clicking there's no reason we can't lick Monarchs two straight. But if they don't we'll be licked. We've said just too bad for us."

Both teams welcomed the breather from last Wednesday's game which Monarchs won 5-3. Both services banks went into overtime. Redmen taking the first 4-3 and the Westerners the next 6-5. Monday night with a 6-5 victory. A capacity crowd is expected to jam Copper Cliff Lear Gardens for the fourth contest.

Silverman objected to his team being referred to as hand-picked boys. "Some of our boys are local boys still O.K. for Junior next season and some of them were stars when they came to the Nickel Belt this season. The homebrews are showing up fine as well as the others."

Depends on Two

Redmen's mentor said a lot depended on how well Red Hastill and Pat McCreavy went in the next game. These boys, who work with Heximer have had lived up to advance notices in the series with Monarchs. Silverman thinks they snap out of it" Saturday.

All was rejoicing in the Winnipeg camp. Their only worry—whether Remi Vanadette would be fit for Saturday —has been removed. The club doctor has announced the hard buffeting defenceman is wrestled back in good enough shape to permit his playing.

BINGO KAMPMAN BACK IN LINEUP

Sudbury Tigers Believe They Can Win Rubber Game

Calgary, April 16—(CP)—Promoters Bingo Kampman will return to the Sudbury lineup for the fifth game tonight of the Allan Cup Hockey Final with North Battleford Beavers buoyed Tiger's hopes of winning the Canadian Senior Championship.

With the best-of-five series tied 2-all in games, Tigers awaited decision on their protest of the fourth game won 2-1 by Beavers Wednesday night.

Sudbury conceded a ruling of referee Earl Oversand of Okotoks, Alta., refusing to permit Tigers to replace goalie Charles Trno with a forward with 30 seconds to go.

Dr. W. G. Hardy, First Vice-President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said decision of the C.A.H.A. rules committee on the protest would be given today in Toronto.

Overand and his fellow official, Herb Hedges of Toronto, will be replaced in tonight's game by Lorne Lydon, Winnipeg and Oliver Reinke, Lake of Rossland, B.C.

Kampman, who missed the last three games because of a gashed foot suffered in the first game, was expected to take his place on the Sudbury defense tonight to team with chunky little Frank Lavigne. Steve Conner will be dropped to make way for the big fellow.

Manager Jack Abbott of Beavers said he would start Bert Leach as saw service in the first four games.

Dance Hall Lady

Jane Clayton

Anne would have departed at once, but the crowd behind pushed her forward. She was flung against one of the racks, a rack a quarter of a block long, of red dresses, size 16, price $3.79. A fairy quiet corner; gratefully Anne halved into it.

Deadly she stared at the shifting, moving scene. At intervals of 30 feet, blazing in the sea of movement, sat girl watchers on high stools; their sole job was to see that none of Heller's merchandise left the store without the formality of payment. Two policemen guarded each of the three doors. At cashiers' cages, also scattered at intervals of 30 feet, serpentine lines of exhausted women stood clutching garments and waiting for a chance to pay and to get their packages wrapped. Twenty girls wrapped packages furiously toward the centre of the store.

Anne looked a few well-dressed, smart women, who convinced her that now she was here she might as well look. She searched for a salesgirl to ask for information about black dresses, size 14, but there were no salesgirls at Heller's. The store was strictly self-service. Across the room she saw a row of "-" -"-" -"-" she pushed toward it, reached the haven. When she looked at the price tag, only size 18, her disappointment and exhaustion almost made her weep.

A girl brushed past, a nice-looking girl in a belted silk wrap, worn with a lustrous silver fox. She observed Anne's distress, paused.

"And shoplifters too! Last time I was here I saw a girl arrested right at the door."

"How would anyone dare?" marvelled Anne.

"They dare, all right. I guess they use all kind of dodges. Wear an old dress in and a new dress out, or pop on two dresses under their coat and walk past the cops at the door as old as brass, or carry them in brief cases or boxes from other stores. I'd be scared to death. Old man Heller prosecutes to the limit of the law!"

The slim girl shivered theatrically.

With considerable difficulty Anne managed to hold her pocketbook and to clasp her dress. The result was worth the trouble. She had only a corner of the mirror, but a corner was sufficient to show that her instinct had been correct. The dress was perfect. She started downstairs to find the cashier, the new dress over one arm.

Half way down the stairs she noticed a disturbance at the door. The crowd was denser there, and from the height she could see a policeman in the centre, his blue cap bobbing where the crush was thickest.

"They've caught a girl," someone on the stair below announced excitedly. "Maybe took me shed got to the street, wearing the dress underneath her coat. Can you beat it!"

The policeman forced a way forward; women, reluctantly thrust back, stood on tiptoe to catch a glimpse of the disconsolate victim deliberately pushed into the melee by Anne. Anne had seen the beginning of the drama; she had no desire to see its end. The affair made her a little ill; the clamoring, questioning shoppers, with their avid, delighted curiosity, were hideous. Anne was destined to see the ending of the drama. As she reached the bottom stair she did the policeman, dragging by the arm a white-faced, trembling girl. Anne was brought almost face to face with her. The girl was Ray.

ANNE MAKES A FRIEND

CHAPTER ELEVEN

In a small, breathlessly hot office, on either side of a scarred oak desk cluttered with telephones and papers, sat Anne and Ray, facing a short, lean man whose eyes were keen and cold. He was Joseph Heller, owner of the store. It was often said that he was "one of the smartest men in the business", more often that he was "one of the meanest". Both statements were true. From Heller's he had amassed a fortune of seven million dollars, but the shabby, untidy clothes he wore could have been purchased at their heyday for nineteen-fifty. His only home was a single tiny room located near the slum area filled his life. In the quiet office the muted uproar of that store came pleasantly now to his ears.

Ray, pale and crushed, had given way completely. She cried steadily, silently into a soiled, crumpled handkerchief. Opposite sat Anne, very straight, her gloved hands clasped about her knees, two spots of color burning on her face.

"I assure you, Mr. Heller," she said persistently, "you are mistaken about the truth. My friend gave me her money to keep, and she thought I'd gone to the street. We were separated in the crowd."

You told Clancy you was taking care of her pocketbook and she had her pocketbook in her hand," accused Heller, with a glance toward the door, where a policeman lounged, surveying the familiar scene with a jaundiced eye.

"You sure told me that lady."

"What if I did! In the confusion I was so upset, so appalled at what had happened that I hardly knew what I was saying."

"I did, I did give her my money!" Ray cried out, and burst again into sobs. "I thought I saw her going out the door—"

"Funny you'd hang on to your pocketbook when somebody else had your money. Got any record? Ever been fingerprinted?"

"Oh, no! Oh, no!"

Anne stood up.

"I refused to be bullied," she told the thin-lipped, implacable man at the desk. "I have friends; so has Miss Ravel. David Blair, on the Globe, is a friend of mine. If you won't see the truth, if she's to be browbeaten and frightened, she's entitled to a lawyer, and I mean to see that she has one."

In the end she carried it off. Stifling a pang of regret, she opened her pocketbook and placed in Ray's hand the seventeen dollars that was to have bought her the dress which she had returned to the rack. Ray's choice was $16.95. Under Joseph Heller's suspicious eyes, the gown was packaged and delivered and the two girls walked out into the hot, sunshiny street. Anne hailed a cab just as Ray reached the limit of her endurance.

Once in the cab, she was promptly sick. Then, and hysterics followed. Anne did no talking. It was not talk that Ray needed. She took the limp, shaking figure into her arms, dried the dripping eyes as well as she could, and by the time Ray comforted Ray as one comforts a child, Always Ray clutched at her with wild, desperate fingers, and laughed and cried together and sobbed her gratitude and relief and fear. It was blocks before she approached calm. Then Anne did her sums.

"But, Ray, you had wanted an evening dress; you could have borrowed one of mine; you could have had me as a gift. I've tried to give you the coffee-colored dress—"

"I know. I wanted a dress of my own, and if you hadn't been there they'd have put me in an institution." Ray shuddered and began to cry again.

That night when Anne appeared in the stuffy dressing room at Lotusland, Ray, clad in a brief chemise, was displaying to an admiring circle her purchase. It was an ankle-length dress of black satin, cut high in the back and only modestly low in the front, and it was not almost perfect copy of the model Anne had seen often in the dance hall. Anne had not the slightest doubt. She was surprised and touched at the change in Ray's mood, but a little chilled as well at the youngster's exuberant delight in her finery.

Ray flushed and then called to her to join the crowd. Rather shyly Anne did so.

"Anne lent me the money to pay for it", Ray proudly informed the others. Later in the ballroom when she had a chance to speak privately to Anne she said, "I'm going to pay you back."

"Don't worry about that. Any time will do."

Anne looked stodgily at the tablecloth. How glad that she had been able to help the other, but she could not help mourning a little the dull crepe, the dress that was almost identical with hers, but to-night he has telephoned his story, and here he was. For the first time he looked around Lotusland, and plainly he did not like what he saw—the artificial lotus blooms on the gilt columns that separated Anne's table from the next, blooms so soiled that even the dim light could not hide the dirt; the dancers, check to cheek, their bodies pressed as closely as the supervisor would allow; the saxophone player bawling through a megaphone the words of a cheap song:

"I'm on fire, I'm on fire,
I'm burning up for you.
I hope you're burning, too.
"Come and come come clever; coms all the way.
"I may be loose, but you're a swell excuse.
"Hey, Hey, I'm on fire!"

Buster Boyd dropped the megaphone, leaped to the saxophone and blew a series of heighting, triumphant notes.

"Well," David commented disgustedly, "I hope somebody puts him out."

"Cheer up, David; you'll hear worse."

There was something flippant in Anne's tone that nettled him.

"Do you mean to say that's the dump?" he demanded unsaptifly.

"Like it!" Anne echoed in sudden fury. "Like it! I've been two hundred pounds come down on your foot like a feather! Like having your stockings torn to ribbons and your dresses ruined! I hate it! But it's the music dinging, dinging, dinging that nearly drives me crazy. I hear it after I go home at night. I hear it in my sleep. Sometimes I think that if I hear Soft Lights and Sweet Music just once more I will go crazy."

"They won't you let me take you away, Anne?" When the girl remained silent he continued in an odd, compelling manner, "I'm going to drag you out by the hair of your head, and I'll never let you come back."

"Praid not, David."

"Then you do like it," he declared. "You don't mean to say—" she stopped. "Please don't, I'm too tired."

"You didn't say anything about the men who come here," he observed darkly, after a moment.

"The men!" Anne gave a short, bitter laugh. "I suppose you mean the men who dance with me, who make a practice of dropping in here with their dimes. They are all alike, they all have single-track brains and the same old way of saying and thinking the same old thing. Usually it's—Why don't you let me take you home? We could have a little drink and stop by my place afternoon, or . . ." Anne shrugged. "The men aren't worth talking about," she added. "They simply don't matter."

"I should think they mattered," replied David, his manner stiff.

"A girl doesn't have to go." Anne pointed out."

"If Stanley Rye asked you to go anywhere, you would go." David announced waspishly and from the depths of his own jealous heart.

"Stanley Rye!" Anne echoed. An unwilling smile curved her lips. "Stanley isn't like the others," she said slowly.

"How do you know he isn't?"

"Don't be silly, David," replied the girl sharply. "You yourself know that he isn't. Stanley Rye is a fine, decent person."

"Blah!" was David's rude retort.

His face was dark and full of pain. He leaned forward abruptly, his fists clenched upon the table.

"Do you love with Stanley Rye?" he asked.

New York, April 16 (AP)—Buying orders appeared at a few specialties in today's stock market but showed little appetite for most leaders. It was one of the slowest periods in the past several weeks. The ticker tape doings frequently and quotations were mildly mixed near the fourth hour.

Bonds emulated the share list with minor losses and gains being about evenly divided.

Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines, Dominion Textile, Gorgians, Hiram Walker and Dominion Stores were steady to fractions higher in quiet trading. Hollinger, Nickel and McIntyre were somewhat easier. Dominion Tar moved to new in-active while Canadian Funds were unchanged at 10 1-4 cents. On the Curb, Lake Shore Mines was little.

General Motors moved up as this company's Canadian labor controversy neared a settlement. Chrysler and Yellow Truck improved.

American Chain hit a new 1937 high with a jump of more than 6 points at the first upward move of the session. Other steels were steady. Bethlehem, Standard Oil of California and Westinghouse.

The mayor added: "It is as a plorable fact as obvious that this report follows immediately on word from the Premier that no action will be taken by myself may contribute to a settlement in the Oshawa area, where the prime minister has so ridiculously failed.

"Pending it he would restrain himself from commenting further until after the election, but would point out "after that he (the premier) will find out what it is to fight. OFFICER ORDERED TO COLLECT SUM

Mayor Hall of Oshawa Claims Money Never Owing

Toronto, April 16 (CP)—Premier Hepburn and Colonel Cedric Vernon Col. W. W. Denison, Inspector of Legal Offices, to press a claim by Mayor Hall of Oshawa for Alex G. Hall, of Oshawa, former Crown Attorney, for $210.

The Premier said that when Mayor Hall was dismissed as Crown Attorney of Ontario County in 1934, $250.25 in legal fees was due the Province, and that under an arrangement to pay $10 a month, Hall had paid $40.

Toronto, Apr. 16 (CP)—Claiming Mayor Alex Hall owed the provincial treasury $250.25 when he was dismissed as Oshawa Crown Attorney in 1934, Premier Hepburn has instructed Col. W. W. Denison, Inspector of Legal Offices, to recover this amount from the estate of his bonding company.

The Premier last night alleged that Mayor Hall's "hostile attitude toward the government in the present difficult Central Motors strike situation was due to his dismissal and to his activities on behalf of the Liberal party."

Mr. Hepburn said earnings of the crown attorney's office fell during the Hall incumbency, that complaints were received regarding inefficiency of administration and that Hall himself admitted the shortage. He replied "it was decided to forget the debt rather than make claims upon the bonding company." Now however he was instructing the Attorney General's Department to collect with accrued interest.

Law Governs Action.

Oshawa, Ont., Apr. 16 (CP)—Only the law of assault prevents Mayor Alex Hall, Oshawa, from "punching" Premier Mitchell Hepburn "the worst thrashing any man ever received," in his opinion, a pound mayor declared today as he said he would like to teach the Crown Attorney "a few principles of decency."

The mayor, who was a member of the Oshawa lacrosse team, Dominion champions in 1930, said that his only regret over "what it is to fight" because of Mr. Hepburn's statement that Hall had been dismissed as Crown Attorney for "political activity" was that he had not taken place up to noon today.

Mayor Hall termed the claim a "downright falsehood", said it was made "with malicious intent" to the statutes and that when he asked the governments' legal action to be over two years ago, the claim was dropped. "The money involved had to do with road work did not with accounts, he said. "I have never in my life handled a penny of the province's money," Hall said. "I have been a public servant and taken pay from the province for my services without my accounts first being audited by the Council and that I shall be called upon

The unlouched food returned to their pantries and shelves by the men and daughters they formed a mass parade, 3,000 strong, and preceded Oshawa's first strike band that de notes a hunger strike, charged the Oshawa relief office and got supplies.

They wrecked the interior before being allowed in the main door, then reformed and moved against the bosses of the general manager and other Motors executives, to the homes of floors with stones.

Many of the women were arrested after three policemen were injured.

Meantime the operators and workers' delegates reached an agreement on the terms of reinstating striking working conditions and the strikers returned to their office, prepared to resume work tomorrow.

STRIKE-BREAKERS ARRIVE AT DOCKS

Toronto And Hamilton Waterfronts Are Hoover Quiet

Toronto, Apr. 16 (CP) — Strike-breakers invaded Toronto and Hamilton waterfronts today as longshoremen loading ships ready for the 1937 season walked out, paralyzing the waterfront paid no attention to them and the single police officer on duty reported no incidents.

At the Tree Line Navigation Company 200 men were reported to have been employed with instructions to return for work tomorrow. Rates of pay were requested and granted at Hamilton where strike-breakers were reported to load the Seamount.

Action at Hamilton was expected to be quiet after union president E. Savage announced: "If we start trouble they will have to start it."

Point Edward marine circles declared that no ice at Lambton county port was unsettled despite the fine weather. The first ship was loading job of the new season yesterday, an official of the Sault Ste. Marie Locks was expected to confer on the situation.

BOY CELLIST IS CALLED GENIUS

Prominent English Critic Enraptured With His Technique

Winnipeg, April 16 — (CP) — Arthur Benjamin, prominent English critic, declared today years ago Winnipeg's 13-year-old cellist, Lorne Munroe, whom Benjamin heard in 1937 studying under the musical education the world can provide.

"If Sir Hugh Allan of the Royal College of Music in England could hear the boy play," he said, "he almost certain a scholarship would be granted him," said the London critic, adjudicating at the Manitoba musical festival.

Benjamin offered to take Lorne to England with him, provide him with board and lodging in his own home and see that he is given the best musical education possible if a Winnipeg Service Club would undertake $1,000 annual maintenance expenses. The Service Club is considering the offer.

Lorne has studied only in Winnipeg, but he took his first cello instruction, when he was three years of age and 2 1-2 hours of daily practice in recent years have been undertaken. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Munroe, wife of Wallace R. Munroe, provincial civil servant, teaches Lorne music theory.

Pleased With Offer

Both mother and father were pleased with Mr. Benjamin's offer but, with typical parental caution, refrained from comment on the prospect of Lorne going to London.

"I like to see Lorne stay on this continent," Mr. Munroe said. "We'd like to see him go to the musical centre in the United States. I don't want to stand in his way but he's going to be at least as good other side of the Atlantic from his home."

Neither mother nor father made any statement whether they would accompany the boy to London should the opportunity materialize.

"It would be a big thing for me," was Lorne's only comment on the suggestion of overseas travel.

Lorne does not find long hours of practice tedious. A sturdy, quiet and unassuming boy, he likes to play his chosen instrument.

UNION ACTION

No Sign of Conference.

Toronto, Apr. 16 (CP)—The conference, called by Premier Mitchell Hepburn in an effort to end the Oshawa strike, was still in doubt as had not taken place up to noon today.

The attitude of union officials in Oshawa regarding the meeting, however, was that they were definitely know although strike leader Savage indicated he would attend out time to ignore the invitation from the premier.

Mr. Hepburn asked General Motors executives yesterday to join with union officials in a conference which he hoped would bring a settlement to the strike, out since April 8, back to work.

Thompson In Oshawa.

Oshawa, Ont., April 16 (CP)— Hugh Thompson, United Automobile Workers' international vice-president in 700 General Motors strikers, today with $24,140,346 in the preceding Hepburn of Ontario) will not be taking part in any negotiations between the union and the company.

Thompson returned to Oshawa within the hour from Toronto where since April 2 with Homer Martin, international union president, who addressed an Oshawa strikers' rally on meeting last night. More than 1,500 strikers paraded to the railway station to greet him.

Barnstable.

Martin, slight, 33-year-old former Baptist minister, also had statements to make regarding Premier Mitchell Hepburn's opposition to international union leaders appearing in the strike picture.

"Hepburn is not in this province, he is in the remarked in a heated outdrawl. "I thought he was outside Canada. Maybe he is. I am convinced that Hitler and Mussolini were having a conference with Premier Hepburn would be taking part."

Martin announced he would telegraph Premier Hepburn requesting a conference. He expressed the hope for an "amicable settlement" and admitted the "possibility" the man might be back at work Monday.

CONFIRM CHARGE ORE WAS 'SALTED'

Responsibility For Falsification of Rubec Reports Laid to Unnamed Person

Quebec, Apr. 16 (CP)—Report of Wille Amyot, K.C., confirming the charge that assays of Rubec Mining Mines, Limited, in Northern Quebec, had been "salted" was laid before the public today with the responsibility for the falsification laid to an unnamed person.

Recommendation that prosecution be instituted against the person responsible was contained in the report, released last night, but Mr. Amyot declined to believe any person guilty name this person in this report to his subordinates. He would invite this individual to flee before being arrested.

The report, based on an inquiry by the registrars of the Quebec Securities Commission, the Canadian Ontario Securities Commissioner Godfrey that drilling between 15, 18 and 19 had been salted and further claimed, through one of the employees who assisted in the drilling, that similar salting had been done to drill holes 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24.

The report, compiled from findings of Dr. Edmund Montpetit, mining engineer, and Provincial Geologist L. V. Bell, charged salting of diamond drilling had been practised and that operations started at the company property in Rubec in 1936. The Rubec Diamond Drilling Company, its officers and employees were absolved. "Proof of such a nature," said the report, "would be diminished greatly if work on all Quebec mines was directed by a professional engineer."

Mr. Amyot suggested the Attorney General's Department institute legal proceedings against the person responsible and that the Provincial Engineers of Quebec be struck off the rolls of members.

This was the gist of a judgment handed down by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council yesterday following its hearing before the company's appeal from a decision of the Canadian Pacific Court of Appeals affirming the Arbitration Board's findings.

The Arbitration established compensation on the basis of replacement costs in a peace action. The Arbitration Board's figure was based on the line's scrap value.

Market Comment

The market continues to decline on steady selling, although the offerings are not of an urgent nature. From a technical correctionary movement will run its course and some stocks will decline to levels not warranted by the present or prospective earnings. This will enable the bargain hunters to accumulate attractive situations.

During a wide decline, the matter of values is entirely disregarded and stocks are sold to the law of supply and demand. The better the inclination of any to sell individual security the better it acts marketwise. A few strong spots are noted in an otherwise declining market.

With regard to the mines, the public apparently does not want to become convinced that there is no immediate likelihood of a reduction in the price of gold. It is apparent to point out that a very substantial volume of speculative buying was built up in the golds in the past year and a setback will tend to strengthen the technical position of this group of securities.

There is no reason to become alarmed over the present marketing action. There exists a wide contingent of small buyers who are welcoming the present reaction as it enables them to repurchase their prime favorites. In the present state of all bull markets, the one that terminated in 1929, had its sharp reactions periodically.

Report on Old Diamond

In a preliminary report on Old Diamond Gold Mines Ltd., Wm. A. Campbell, states in part:— Recent work undergone has been very encouraging, and it is safe to conclude from observation, and assay results that drifting south on the mispickel vein in opening up a possible ore shoot on the level. How important this is liable to be cannot be definitely determined at the present time. However, the assays while fairly erratic would indicate a grade profitable to mine under careful sloping. It is recommended that diamond drills examine North and South on the mispickel vein with more accurate, for the time being, concentrated on the south heading. It is also recommended that some provision be made immediately for crushing, so that bulk sampling can be done. Samples should be taken from each car as it is being together. It should then be crushed and a quartered down to a quantity sufficiently small enough to forward for assaying.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol

The Street was taken by surprise today by the story which was carried exclusively by Financial Service, which was to the effect that the Duke Group had sold their holdings of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company Limited at a record price of $27 a share for the "A" stock. The Estate of the late Mr. Morrison Davis is viewed to be controlling interest. In this concern which during the last year or so nearly 30,000 shares of "A" this block was disposed of in the market. As early as it can be estimated the purchasers will own approximately 1/3rd of the voting shares when this transaction shall have completed.

The present day management of "ID" have done a most domestic sale of the company since they took hold a few years ago with the result that they now rank first in this line of production. Further headway is expected particularly as a result of it a share might be earned on the stock.

The new affiliation should prove to the company beneficial as well as the company beneficiary as well ville.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Beneath His Station

By R. Ray Baker

The old man leaned forward and rested a hand on a knee of his son. They sat before a fireplace in which a snapping fire was struggling against a fall chill.

The old man? He was not that when you came to a closer inspection. he looked old, seated as he had been in the shadows, for his silver hair was all that was really distinct in the dusk. But now, when he leaned toward his son, the flickering flame gave his cheeks a youthful tinge.

There were wrinkles, but not deep. One would take it he had had a free and easy life, until gradually the impression formed that there was something about him denoting a sorrow. Possibly it was his eyes.

"It's up to you, Paul," he said in a voice that was singularly soft and pleasing. "I would not try to map you out of this marriage, but I want to warn you to be sure you are not making a mistake—as I did once. I regret to say."

"I am sure, father," the son said, with a note of finality, "I love this girl with all sincerity."

"Your station in life," his father began, "will not cause her to be your social equal. You say she and her mother live in a shanty in the woods near Cedar Creek, where you spend your vacation. They must be crude people."

"She's as good and a lot better than most of the girls in my station of life," Paul said. "I did not see her mother, for I never could get Anne to invite me to their home. In fact, it is not her mother, Anne told me, but a family by adopted aunt. Anne is really the daughter of an old friend of the woman she calls mother—if you can grasp that.

"They live in the woods from choice. Anne's father was wealthy and he left a large amount of money to his daughter; and Anne insisted on sharing it with the woman she now calls mother. Because they love the woods and choose to live in them—that does not indicate a low station, does it? And what if it does? I love Anne."

"It all sounds very rosy, this love talk," observed his father, and there was a touch of bitterness in his voice. "But it doesn't always work out that way. Look at my own case. Your mother was a lovable good girl, but she had not been educated to my ways of thinking. Like this girl you think you love, she was fond of the woods and she wanted me to spend my life in them. I could not reconcile myself to it, because I love the noise and bustle of the city. The sight of the wilds drives me frantic. But I consented to try it and build a habitation in the woods; not a modern structure, as I desired, but a rustic log house to suit your mother's fancy. I could not endure the solitude and finally one night we quarreled; and a terrible quarrel it was! In fairness to your mother, whom I loved in spite of our incompatibility, I must say that I was the cause of most of the quarreling."

"The next morning I left the house with you," he went on. "I sneaked out of the cabin with you bundled in a blanket and struck your mother, who awoke. I did not return for three months, and when I did, repentant, I found nothing but ashes to mark the spot where had lived to live. . . And never was I able to get a trace of your mother."

The son was silent several minutes.

"I know you mean well, father," he finally said. "But I love this girl for herself, not for what I can get out of it; and, besides, I love nature, too, so we ought to get along."

* * *

It was Paul's wedding day, and he was on his way to claim his bride from the forest. His father was with him.

"I said my say, and you've made your choice, son," he said. "It is for you to decide. And of course I'm going to be present when my son is married, even if it should be in the centre of the African jungles."

So they packed travelling bags and took a train for the wilderness. At Cedar Creek they disembarked and set out on foot through a path in the woods.

Two hours of walking brought them to a clearing where a log house sent a thin column of smoke heavenward. It was a small hut, but it looked inviting, an island in a sea of flowers and vines.

"This is the place," Paul announced. "I had never seen it, but I received good directions in my last letter." His face was lighted expectantly.

From the door of the hut romped a laughing girl, clad in a loose blouse, short khaki skirt and leggings. In the doorway behind her appeared a tall, handsome brunette of middle age.

Paul clasped the girl in his arms and suddenly she broke away.

"I must introduce you to mother, and I must meet your father," she said, turning toward the hut, to stop dead still, amazement advising upon her big, bright eyes.

For Paul's father and Anne's mother had followed the example of the young people and were hugging each other tightly, while she repeated over and over the one word "George" and he was saying "Ethel."

CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK

OLD and NEW

By Geo. H. Carver

On Monday, it is hoped by thousands the sun will shine bright and clear . . . . Warp breeze from the balmy south will drift across the far-flung section of the country. . . . Forgotten will be the momentous questions of the day . . . The situation in Europe will be forgotten. . . . Strike perils will be tabled temporarily. . . . . War clouds hanging over the nations of the world will be relegated to the limbo of forgotten things.

Business executives will go into conferences, which will last all afternoon. . . . Pert stenographers and trim secretaries will conduct great enterprises, and be the queens of all they survey for an afternoon at least . . . . . Thousands of grandmothers will go to their last resting places for the un-numbered time . . . Sudden sickness will decimate the countless family scrapbooks stealing the absence of one or more for the day. . . And the following morning will see the recording of ridiculous items . . . .

Hundreds of thousands of school-boy heads will nod over unseen lessons . . . And a large number of classrooms A. W. L.'s will be recorded . . . . Knotholes in fences will be plugged for three hours in many a city. . . . Act-of-nature representatives of business will solemnly remember an important engagement in the city . . . Farmers will rush from town for last minute repairs for machinery, which broke down shortly before noon. . . . For King Baphall will open his court for the 1937 season in the Big League Parks. . . . The sharp crack of hickory on horsehide, the umpire cry "Play Ball!" and the cheers of countless thousands will echo and re-echo throughout the country as the new season gets under way. . . .

President Roosevelt, himself an ardent baseball fan will throw out first ball at Washington where the Senators clash with Connie Mack A's in the initial struggle of the season. . . . .

Vernon Bishop, the travelling fly of the baseball diamond, has now stirred up trouble in the heretofore peaceful confines of St. Calixtus. . . . It appears that since the O.B.A.A. moguls saw fit to say "nay" to Bishop's transfer to Welland, those colorful columnists (no pun intended) Cash, Browne and Jimmy Whyte of the St. Calixtus Standard tried to ease the tension during the . . . Morrison of the Welland sheet cut loose with a real barrage, using the words "Lug" and "mug", and now it looks as if all columnar relations have been severed. . . .

Tommy Farr, reported by Trevor Wignall, who is supposed to be the ace sports expert, "ever 'ome" as being a cheese champ, whom Baer could lick with a couple of fingers, stabbed a rapier like left into the leering Bearish profile last night and gave the former heavyweight champion, a sweet boxing lesson. . . . A crowd of roaring Britishers, if you can imagine such a thing, cheered the Welsh miner to the echo as he hit the Californ'an Baer with everything but his aitches and he couldn't pick those up . . .

Faced by Big Marty Barry winner of the Lady Byng trophy, Jawn Adams Rochfrigs smashed their way through to their second successive Stanley Cup last night to send a howling crowd of Detroit hockey fans into further paroxysms of joy. . . . Rangers put up a gallant fight, and forced the big Red team to the fifth game before bowing to the lads from the river. . . . Odd looker there is on the Wood-ward Ave and Main Street, Napanee.

STOMACH PAINS THAT "CUT LIKE A KNIFE"

Mr. J. F. Smith, of I. . . , was going cheerfully about his daily work when he was suddenly stricken with stomach trouble. His writes: "I was under the doctor for a month with hardly any benefit, although the medicine was changed often. Finally I was taken off work. I got dizzy spells and had to walk about the room as the pain was so dreadful, like a knife cutting me. A hot or cold drink would cause agony. . . .

"Having read about Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, I got a bottle, and after taking three doses got relief. Before I had taken half the bottle I felt entirely well and have had no return of the trouble."

Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, the one with the signature, "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" on the bottle, has put so many people right that it is almost second to bring relief to you too. Sold only in bottles in cartons, 75c, powder or tablets, one

CALLING 'EM Between the Lines with Ken J. Colling

A bunch of boys were whooping it up—or maybe they were scooping the ball, but come to think of it they were scooping it up. At any rate we got to reminiscing the other eventide with a few of the older baseball nuts about the town. "Say, you baseball umpires must have it pretty soft. Always have the last word and that's how whether you're right or wrong," prompted one of the gathering. "Oh yea, that's what you think," we come mencement of an actual story, in which we played one of the major roles during a C.O.B.I. game played in Peterborough along about 1923 or '24.

The Oshawa club was playing one of those infrequent mid-week Central League games that are always seen in Riverside Park. We were working on the bases along with Cliff Boundy, of Cobourg, and Harry C. O. Empire, who was the umpire-in-chief for the day. Just as the game got under way a big black Packard appeared on the western horizon and those who have visited Peterborough know how rapidly a thunderstorm can break there. (Or Black City, (ask Claude Tice or "Peeney" Mills, they know). At any rate the Peter got the jump on Oshawa and rained the game in the first two innings off Big Jim Hamilton, who was hurling for the Motor City crew. The Oshawa boys were all ready to take the field in the third inning, immediately started to stall and endeavour to hold off the game until rain fell and avert defeat. The Motor City crew would not try to put out the Peter, who in turn were trying to get out by means of swinging at bad third strikes and then walking to the next base, but no go. Eventually the black clouds split in twain and the sun broke through, forcing the boys to go to work after Boundy and ourselves had threatened everything, including a promise to forfeit the game to Peterboro'.

Now comes the set-up for the shock we received. It was rumoured around Riverside Park that the late Bill O'Hara and Knotty Lee were both in the stands scoring Frankie Whitehouse, star portsider of the Peter, who was hurling his first season in the O.B.A. Pirates and foremost the Peter kept Whitehouse in the stable and started in then-junker, Jeff Hardill. After the clouds rolled away and the boys got back to playing baseball, Callahan was still two runs in the hole in the fourth. Harold "Duke" Daisle was playing right field directly behind us, Dan Dale was behind O.O.B.U. What actually happened to the two cases of "wet goods" we are really found out, but an official of the Oshawa club was seen leaving the park directly on Daisly's heels, so in all probability the "The Duke" didn't gain his point, but at least he gained the decision over the unsuspecting umpire.

Do you remember when Champion Joe Stecher and Strangler Lewis, professional wrestling greats when wrestling was really a sport, battled for many hours, some hours at New York 17 years ago tonight. Stecher and Lewis met in New York 10 years ago Lewis finally won it from him. That was in the days when the title meant something . . . and there weren't "world" title-holders in every city.

After warning "The Duke" to quit his clowning on several occasions, we finally became exasperated with Daisly's antics and when the umpire-in-chief was bench, adding, "You're outa de game, buddy." Much to our surprise Daisley trotted nonchalantly to the Oshawa bench, picked up his wind-breaker and helped himself to a drink of water. A few seconds later we heard a loud shrill voice coming from the direction of the Oshawa bench and recognizing Daisly's voice we turned just in time to see "The Duke" with his thumb extended, palm foremost, pointing the centre of his face. Dialling Daisley "throwing act" we merely pointed our index finger at the purveyor of the thumb and then motioned him to the exit—which in reality meant we were giving him the "gate".

Again much to our surprise Daisley made one beeline towards the turnstiles and at the same time the entire Oshawa team surrounded us calling us all the dumb clucks they could lay their tongues to. "Why you so and so, don't you know he's been trying to get put out of the park all day. We've got a couple of cases of beer down in the hotel; that's what Daisly is interested in, not O'Hara, Lee or this darned ball game," shouted Kip Worden and was our face red. Incidentally those were Prohibition days and what fun was had in the O.O.B.U. What actually happened to the two cases of "wet goods" we are really found out, but an official of the Oshawa club was seen leaving the park directly on Daisly's heels, so in all probability the "The Duke" didn't gain his point, but at least he gained the decision over the unsuspecting umpire.

Repeaters—the Detroit Redwings today are among the greater clubs in the N.H.L. When the Wings' defence, Pinkie the Ranger 1-0 last ew'k marked the second time in history that an N. H. L. club has won both the N.H.L. championship and the Stanley Cup in two years in succession. Ottawa Senators accomplished this trick back in 1919 to '21. All is rosy in the camp of the Wings' today and we'll hear plenty of hockey from Jawn Adams down in Napanee this summer. The Wings won the championship in a clean-cut manner and with four members of their roster sitting on the bench watching the proceedings.

CIVIL WAR IN SPAIN NEARS DEFINITE TURN

War-Torn Europe Looks Towards Ways of Peace; Sea Cordon about Spain

Supervisors Must be Picked up by Ships Bound For Spain And Such Ships Will Carry a Special Flag

SHIPS WITHOUT FLAGS STOPPED

Cordon of Warships Will Have no Right of Search, But Any Offending Ship Trying to Run Gauntlet of International Control Will be Reported

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Apr. 17 (CP)—War-torn Europe again slowly moves towards the ways of peace.

There are many difficulties to face. Everrunning armaments reflect the nervousness of nations.

Yet those who recently regarded another European war as inevitable now are content to let general orders to mobilize lapse further into the background.

Ring of Steel About Spain.

The long drawn struggle in Spain nears a definite turn in the road. After many delays British, French, German and Italian warships will, on midnight Monday, draw a ring of steel round Spanish waters.

British observers will guard the mountainous ways from the French frontier. Warships of the non-intervention powers will be in readiness.

Merchant ships of the 27 nations which on Mar. 31 agreed to an international control scheme will be affected. If bound for Spain they must first call at a French port to pick up a supervisor who will have the authority to examine the cargo and question passengers.

Supervised Flight to Have Flag.

Ships with supervisors aboard will carry a special flag, and pass through the warship cordon unchallenged. Ships without the special flag will be stopped and searched for their papers. The warship cordon will have no right of search. But the offending ship will be reported to the international board and notified that it is running the risk of penalties.

Vice Admiral Van Dulm of Holland presides over the international committee.

Thus begins the most ambitious effort of its kind in history to limit the area of a civil war. It is a scheme for which the British government has been working as the most effective means of checking that foreign interference in Spain which turned international agreements into matters for derision. The next step will be to convert that agreement on the withdrawal of volunteers from Spain.

Neutrality Has Results.

Non-participation in the Spanish situation now seems likely to have some definite results. But among leading statesmen there is a strong feeling that efforts in the purely political field are not enough to restore calm to Europe. There must be an easing of tension in the economic world. There must be a lowering of trade barriers. Concerted efforts must be made to restore the flow of international trade. Where industrial production is increasing, the higher prices of primary products spread the area of comparative prosperity.

Yet although the value of world trade in 1936 was 8.4 per cent. higher than 1935 it still amounted, according to League of Nations statistics, to only 27.7 per cent of its value in 1929. Quotas and currency control are regarded as the main obstacles in the way of trade.

Collective Action.

The situation, it is felt, must be restored; wherein, irrespective of frontiers, the purchaser can buy what he wants, the debtor can pay what he owes, the banker can go where he wishes, without running into government barriers.

When last September the governments of the United Kingdom, the United States and France agreed on the necessity of developing international trade it was hoped that the beginning of collective action might have concrete results. But those hopes were disappointed. The governments of Britain and France now have invited Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium to survey the situation and see what can be done.

Van Zeeland accepted the mission.

British Industry Active.

He sees Britain with more men at work than ever before, with the greatest industrial production she has ever known. He sees the rise of industrial production varying from country to country in amazing degree. He sees Soviet Russia with a 200 per cent. increase in industrial production since 1928. He sees nations climbing out of the morass yet still well below level of 1929.

He sees international trade straining at the leash and the world waiting a decision.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Franklin and the weather!

One hundred and forty-seven years ago today Benjamin Franklin, Printer (as he liked to be known) died. We like to remember him as a scientist, and particularly for his interest in the weather. Hardly a test on meteorology is taken where he is not referred to him. He proved that lightning is electrical. He observed that a storm moves forward the east even though local winds may easily blow from any direction. He gave us a theory of how storms originate. He gave us the principle of electricity which, of course, has been developed and transformed with Newton as to the theory of light underlying it to the vibratory rather than corpuscular.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, April 17 (CP)—Pressure is high over Quebec and the Atlantic States with a trough of low pressure in the southwest. Moderate winds have prevailed over the Maritime coast and another deep low area appeared in the Gulf of Mexico. Bermuda and the Grand Banks. Light to moderate falls in temperature have occurred in northern Alberta and Saskatchewan, while in the Maritime and Great Lakes districts the weather has been fair. It continues cool in the western provinces.

Lake forecasts—Moderate to fresh winds, shifting to northwest and northeast; mostly cloudy with some showers. Sunday, variable winds; fair to moderate; fair with stationary or a little higher temperatures.

Western Provinces—Mostly fair today and Sunday with not much change in temperature.

Round Table Conference Resumes in Oshawa Strike

Route Coronation Procession Will Take on May 12

This excellent map of London-town traces the course of the coronation parade, May 12, when King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will leave Buckingham Palace, proceed to Westminster Abbey via the Mall and Whitehall, then past Trafalgar Square and Piccadilly Circus by way of Regent and Oxford streets, East Carriage Drive and Constitution Hill back to Buckingham palace.

UNIONIZE FORD EMPLOYEES AIM

Union Officials State Drive Will Commence on Monday

Detroit, April 17 (AP)—A drive to unionize employes of the Ford Motor Company proceeded today and the United Automobile Workers of America said it would file charges against the independent producer with the National Labor Relations Board.

"We will have Henry Ford definitely on the run by Monday," said Homer Martin, U.A.W.A. President, at Oshawa, Ontario, where he met in connection with the General Motors of Canada, Ltd., strike.

He did not discuss the nature of the proposed charges against Ford Company, but at Detroit Ed Hall, a Union Vice-President, said it was likely action would be taken in connection with the beating of two union members employed at the Ford plant at Kansas City last week.

Hall, who went to Chicago to confer with Stewart-Warner Corporation officials, said he would proceed to Kansas City to investigate the violence.

The U. A. W. A. intensified its campaign to enroll Ford workers following the upholding of the Wagner National Labor Relations Act by the United States Supreme Court which provides that a Labor organization having a majority of the workers shall be the Collective Bargaining Agency.

Coronation Procession Rehearsed on Sunday

Crowds Expected on London Streets Early Tomorrow to Witness Cavalcade—Operations Will be Carefully Timed by Equerry and Police For Clocklike Precision.

By J. NORMAN SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 17—(CP—Cable)—Coronation procession will be rehearsed during the early hours of Sunday morning complete with troops, horses, landaus, coaches and bands. But khaki will be worn instead of the resplendent colors of the pageantry of May 12.

Tomorrow's procession is to start at six a.m. but to throngs of eager Londoners anticipating watching it the hour will seem more like five a.m., for Sunday is the first day of summer time. Yet, the police are expecting crowds of those people who are becoming increasingly aware that they will be unable to witness the Coronation, the greatest pageant in tremendous effort.

With a sovereign's escort and headed by household cavalry bands and an escort of Royal Horse Guards, a state coach will proceed by the Victoria Embankment, Northumberland Avenue and Pall Mall to Wiseton Place. There, at 10 a.m. two of the various guards regiments will join in and the procession thus reinforced will pass along Pall Mall, St. James Street and Piccadilly. Then it will go down the Haymarket, instead or up as called for by the Coronation route, and along Regent Street.

The operations will be carefully timed by a crown equerry and the Metropolitan Police, who are doing their utmost to assure clocklike precision for the May 12 procession.

Order of Procession

Band of the Scots Guards
Drums and Fifes of the Scots Guards
Two companies of Grenadier Guards
Drums of the Coldstream Guards
A company of Coldstream Guards
A company of Scots Guards
Two sections of Royal Horse Artillery
Eleven carriages
Two glass coaches
One landau

Mazed bands of the Household Cavalry
First division of the Sovereign's escort
Four slace landaus
Second Division of the Sovereign's escort
Four horses from the Royal News
Three horses from the Metropolitan Police
A state coach
Third and Fourth Divisons of the Sovereign's escort
Four army cars.

Other Ceremonies Rehearsed

Tomorrow's rehearsal will be the first of the procession, but the Westminster Abbey and other ceremonies have already been frequently rehearsed and with increasing diligence. New Tests can Determine Vocations for Individuals

Fewer Misfits Will Result When Tests Are Universal

THREE METHODS USED

Windsor, Ont., April 17 (CP) — Not far distant is the time when every child, youth, man and woman in the universities, factories or shops will be given tests that will determine their abilities, Professor J. H. Lery, of Toronto, industrial psychologist, told members of the Windsor Engineering Institute of Canada, last night.

When that time comes he said, there will be fewer round pegs in square holes because individuals will know for what vocations they are suited, the things they can do best, and the type of occupation they will be happiest at.

"Purpose of the psychological test is not to find out how much you know," he said, "but to find out how much you are capable of knowing and doing. The thing is to find out what vocation an individual is fitted for. These days too many people are doing what they should not be doing."

For example, he said, a great many children who take college courses should never go to college.

They should be taught, instead, to work with their hands. As it is now, parents are puzzled to determine what vocations they should encourage their children to follow when the whole question can be cleared up by certain proved tests.

Professor Lery explained that there are three methods of determining the capabilities of an individual, the first is to size up the individual by sight, judging him by facial and bodily characteristics. The second is the anthropological method. Use of measurements of the head and body. The third is the intuitive method. Tests are used, and that is the psychological method.

"If you see a man who walks with a strut, probably with his thumb hooked in the corner of his vest that means he has a peculiar amount of conceit and pride. The criminal classes have a peculiar walk. They have a slouchy walk with knocking of the knees," Professor Lery said.

PICKING SCARCE BUT ALL TAKEN

Nearly all day yesterday Wills Good, local itinerant paper, junk and scrap metal collector labored through the back alleys and side street of the city, pushing his little two-wheeled cart before him.

Pickings were scarce. Shortly the little pile of saleable collections began to grow from the rears of stores and other places mounted in the cart. Tiredly he manhandled the vehicle down what was expected to be the last gangway of the day late in the afternoon. Just one more treasure trove to search necessitating his walking from the cart for a few moments.

But those few moments were enough for thieves to make a pitifully small haul. On his return the little cart was empty, stripped of all his pickings of the day. In the bottom lay a section of corrugated cardboard. Scrawled across it in almost illegible print with crayon or charcoal was the message: "Thanks".

"Hijackers," murmured Wills, wearily.

BOARD EXAMINES STUDENT PAPERS

School principals may differ with opinions of departmental inspectors in their methods, but in local schools it was generally agreed by members of the Board of Education and fellow principals last evening.

In his regular monthly report submitted last evening to members of the Board, Mr. F. C. MacLaurin, principal of the Collegiate and Vocational School pointed out that during the month the school had been visited by School Inspector Anglin of the Ontario Department, making his annual inspection.

"He found the writing in the First Form somewhat poor, and in this I have to differ with him and submit a number of papers for members of the Board to examine," explained Mr. MacLaurin in his report.

"The examination set by him was in spelling, and on these papers he judged the writing as well."

A sheaf of the papers was passed from desk to desk for inspection by members.

"Inspectors always have to have something to kick about," commented Councillor Reg Moncrief.

"Perhaps his opinion is very great difference," agreed Principal A. C. Wilkin, high school, with a twinkle in his high speed. Naturally the pupil would have to write faster, be less careful.

These look very good indeed, to me," stated Mayor Herbert Ketcheson, Rev. A. R. Payne, closely examining the number of spelling papers.

Dusky Fighter Of Barnyard is Laid Low by Axe

"Joe Louis" is dead. "Joe" a dusky fighter, in his quest for new territory to conquer made a sad mistake and paid for it with his life.

The story of his rise to glory and his unconscious and swift decline was related, by a sad-eyed young-ster at the City police court this morning. He appears that "Joe" a splendid specimen of Black Giant Rock Monster, licked everything in the home barnyard, and, tick on all corners from this neighbouring places. But the heady wine of victory proved "Joe's" undoing. Not content with defiant crows or challenges to mortal combat, he wandered from the family roost. Then discovering that his rivals would not come into the open "Joe" conceived upon the idea of invading their domains. All went well until the opposition, until "Joe" who was of an amorous nature, made love indiscreetly to his neighbors' wives. Then came the slaughter. With the intruders in their family precincts, the infuriated birds flew to the attack, but "Joe" was no match for the beak and spurs of "Joe". Each morning the latter would be found dead in the defence of his home and family from the attack of neighboring barnyards. "Joe" was living up to his reputation.

Finally came the inevitable complaint and justice took its course. "Joe" was brought to a younger planet pathetically at the body of his friend as it lay in state on a table in its market. "Joe's" remains, which weighed seven and one-half pounds, realized the sum of $1.50 and will grace the Sunday dinner table of a Belleville family.

THE DRAMA

Collegiate Students in Very Able Presentation of Three-Act Play

A cast of twenty-two chosen from the student body of eight grades of the First Form, presented before a large and appreciative audience at the Belleville Collegiate theatre on Friday evening, under Principal Sharp's "The Crime at Blossoms". Many of the students were tendered almost ovations, by the audience on dramatic incident after dramatic incident in the plot of the three-act play was reached.

There is plenty of plot, satire and comedy in this story of a young couple, who had lived very much beyond their means. Mr. and Mrs. Merryman, and who had gone to spend a couple of months in the country. Their Elizabethan cottage was let by a Mrs. Woodman, to a woman and during the holidays of the Merryman couple this latter woman was found dead, believed murdered and a man killed in the cottage and when the Merrymans arrived home, suspicion fell on them in spite of excitement. With the assistance of Mr. Merryman's family of the public in this way. Mrs. Merryman plays the part of a detective and the solution of the case and Mrs. Merryman dramatically recites the story of the murder, which is considered possible the melodramatic story. Mrs. Merryman and Mrs. Merryman think this has gone too far and decide to go abroad, on the spur of the moment, but culprit creeps out of the garden room. The story is very dramatically told and we learn that the woman who had rented the cottage and was found dead was not a much persecuted woman, that she had died of a heart attack during a struggle with her husband and that another man had struck the husband down with a blow on the head him. The man plans to give himself up to the police, but the Merryman realises that he has done grave wrong in such publicising of the tragedy and plans with the help of Ian to clear the situation which her desire for making gossip has caused.

Comments of the audience were deserved, complimentary. The characters were well conceived and portrayed and the play moved in a lifelike manner. The situations were ably taken and put across the foot. Highly To Mrs. Sylvia Tutt goes much credit for the manner in which she directed the performance. She had worked over the parts very carefully with the student actors, and the result was evident in the acting and the movement of the drama.

The setting was appropriate, giving a very satisfying representation of the Elizabethan cottage, the home of the old Elizabethan cottage where members of the cast were:

Education Board asks Council To Provide $144,612.43 for School Purposes During Year

An increase of $13,500 or Mill And One-Third Required

SUGGEST REPAIRS

Drain School Grounds And Also Place Roof on One School

Belleville Board of Education will ask city council to provide the sum of $144,612.43 for school purposes for the year 1937, according to estimates brought down at the regular monthly meeting of the Board last evening.

This is an increase of $13,500.00 over the sum voted for public schools last year, or a difference of one and one-third mills in the general tax rate, caused mainly by this year's overdraft and extensive repairs to school buildings during the past season.

Except for the early suggestion by Trustee F. R. Wotten, following the final reading of the by-law that the completed estimates be referred back to the Finance Committee for further reductions where possible, they were passed with little discussion. The suggestion was later withdrawn.

The by-law asks that city council pay the sums of $63,128.99, "on or before the first day of April, and the sum of $14,500.00 on the first day of May, June and July and $15,000 on the first day of October, November and December. The balance on December 15th, 1937.

Department Changes Desire

In referring to the overdraft of $6,800, it was pointed out by Trustee Col. Geen, that this year the government had changed the basis of the allowance.

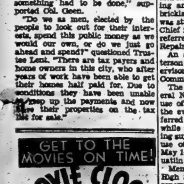
"Now it will have to be paid this year," he explained.

"We will have no overdraft next year so that will even things up," further added Trustee B. C. Slaier, Chairman of Finance.

Expenditures this year included nearly $12,000 for a new roof for one of the schools, Salaries in the Collegiate have been increased, although, some of the high school salaries have even been lower this year, pointed out Chairman of the Board, H. J. Allin.

Asked for drainage of school grounds in the city to avoid the muddy condition, and included in the estimates of public schools, as estimated by city engineer Mott will be $2,000 further added to the estimates total, pointed out Trustee Lent, urging that this item be kept off the list for the coming year at least.

"We can get along on a lot less than that. The school grounds are not any muddier this year than they were ten years ago," he replied.



Music Necessary

"It's perfectly in order to send estimates back to the board of estimates for a further parley, but council would like to have them in April and haste is necessary," commented Chairman Allin, "But the committee has given careful study on these, and if they are referred back it means a special meeting of the Board and further delay."

"That seems a lot of money to spend on school grounds for one thing, but if some of these trustees had attended the school meetings they could see the condition in which they come home and the schools themselves. We must do without something had to be done," supported Col. Geen.

"Do we as men, elected by the people to look after their interests, spend this public money as we would our own, or do we just go ahead and spend it?" questioned Trustee Lent. "There are tax payers and home owners in this city who have years of work have been able to get their homes half paid for. Due to conditions they are now being asked to step up the payments and now the whole proportion on the tax rate for sale."

Trustee Rev. A. B. Payne—"I feel sure this one item that has led to some discussion, should have gone into very thoroughly and would like to see the estimates unless that consideration had been given it. It is it had been gone over very carefully. We of the Board have responsibilities and one of those is safeguarding the health of the children, It is a disgrace for the city the size of Belleville to have playgrounds such as may be seen into our schools. We have been putting this off from year to year until the matter rests squarely on our shoulders at present. This is a very low figure, indeed, that the engineer has brought in as an estimated cost for the sanitation of the grounds."

Corridors Quite Muddy

Relating the experience of visiting one of the schools where corridors were "filthy with mud" Trustee G. W. Frederick suggested that cost included filling the low spots on the grounds.

"Just for drainage," explained secretary Guilday.

"You will have to be some fill afterward as well as drainage" commented Mr. Frederick.

The matter of sending the grading specifications to the Board for consideration, was also supported by Trustee F. R. Wotten, but later withdrawn before the motion was done.

The sum of $1,500 will also be included in the estimates for covering the cost of Night School as the Collegiate which opened on October 11 was decided by the Board in adopting the recommendation of the Advisory and Vocational Committee to this effect.

"Must we open the night school this Fall", questioned Trustee Wotten.

"According to the Department we must open a night school if a number of the auto mechanics class, which is regulated by the Apprentice Act" explained Chairman Allin, "Due to the request that have been received that other classes also open, the committee decided to carry out the wishes of the majority."

Codes of regulations for competitors for essays on subjects relating to the Empire will be issued to the principals of the four public schools and the separate school as well as the collegiate and Vocational School, Albert College, the Ontario School for the Blind and School of Wales School, under a recommendation by the School Management Committee.

The suggestion that as far as possible all future appointments of teachers of local schools preference be given to those holding first class certificates and that second class certificate holders now on the staff be requested to make an effort to obtain first class certificates, as given by School Inspector H. J. Clarke, B.A., some time ago, will also be acted upon.

Trustee H. B. Petterly was appointed as a committee of one to make a survey of the possibilities in connection with introducing a system of manual training and home, hold science in public schools of the city.

Must Replace Hose.

Though fire extinguishers were generally found first class in all the schools during a recent inspection by Fire Chief William Lynch, consideration, replacement of hose will be necessary following his recommendation. The habit of storing old papers and magazines as well as the collecting and saving of soot for use on backyards, in basements of schools was strongly condemned by the Fire Chief in his report. The matter was referred to the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee for action.

An application by E. Helen Patterson for the position of music supervisor was referred to the Music Committee.

The request of the Belleville General Nurses of the Alumni for the use of the collegiate auditorium on the evening of April 29th was referred to the Auditorium Committee, while a second request of the Nurse Supervisor, Miss Hughes, asking for use of the auditorium on Friday, April 14, for the annual summer graduation exercise day was granted.

Membership in the Associated High School Boards of Ontario was renewed, and Mr H. B. Petterly was named delegate to the annual annual convention to be held in Toronto on May 4th and 5th.

Inspection Duties.

Inspection of the school cadets of Queen Alexandra School will be held at 10 a.m. on Wednesday, April 21st by Captain Geen and Major Smith at 10:30 a.m. the same day, it was announced by the school principals in their invitation for board members to attend.

Principals of the four public schools will also be given the sum of $25.00 each for the purpose of buying athletic equipment for the schools, it was decided following a motion to this effect made by Trustee Ray Zufelt.

"I know one school principal who paid out $20.00 from his own pocket to supply balls and other things for his pupils last year," commented Trustee Zufelt in supporting a request for $50.00 each day by the principals.

"This money hasn't been provided for in the estimates," warned Trustee Wotten.

"If you leave those estimates pencil he able to squeeze $200.00 out of them for the purpose," assured the mover.

"The request should have gone in earlier," agreed Chairman B. C. Slaier of the Finance Committee.

Seconded by Trustee Rev. L. R. Wight, the motion for the smaller amount was passed.

"Have we ever heard of the departmental grant of cuts classes per pupil for athletic purposes in the schools?" queried Trustee Moncrief.

"That's something new to me; I don't believe I've heard of it," replied Secretary J. B. Guilday.

Further suggestion was made by Trustee Moncrief that this year the Supply Committee be given a starter grant with which to buy suitable "coronation" scribblers for pupils until the Coronation is over. The matter was referred to the committee.

In Legal Tangle.

Board members found themselves in a legal tangle, when brought up precisely where it had begun one or two meetings ago when a notice of motion advanced at last month's meeting by Trustee Harry Rollins, seconded by Trustee Zufelt was introduced as a motion last evening: That the Board of Education, following a precedent established in 1933, interpret Rule 10 to mean that the committees on Finance, School Management, Sites, Buildings and Repairs, Printing and Stationery and Supplies, shall respectively consist of the whole board, the school inspector from each ward and two high school trustees, and the Chairman of Finance be ex-officio member of the School Management Committee."

Opposition to the motion was at once voiced by Trustee Col. Geen.

"I can't see any reason to change the constitution of the Board for the present time. All committees have been working harmony. The Board will be changed next year, anyway and will probably have a whole new constitution," he added.

"Just what will happen if this occurs?" questioned Trustee Moncrief.

Rev. A.B. Payne—"It will lead to a chaotic condition on this Board This means that if it carries the by-law will have to be changed and in future the whole constitution will be open to the interpretation of each member."

Trustee Zufelt—"My only reason for seconding this was to bring about some harmony on the Board."

Mr. Payne—"I'd like to know if there would be any more harmony than there was at the last committee meeting."

Trustee Rollins—"If this motion carries it does not mean changing the constitution one iota. It means only that the extra high school representatives will be on the committee legally. There always will be harmony on this Board as long as we think that way."

Carried About Changes

"We were requested to ask Col. Poston's advice on this," reminded Mr. Kinnear.

"We did see him and he intimated that we should not be too hasty in changing any of the by-laws," declared chairman of the Board H. J. Allin.

"I ask to be excused on this account," pleaded Trustee Ray Wight. "I'm all at sea on the motion and the matter was read to me."

"It's not very clear to me, either," admitted Chairman Allin after careful perusing of the rule book.

"Some of these by-laws here must be twenty-five years old—but the present day work," suggested Trustee Zufelt.

The advice of the solicitor which enlightened the majority of members present, in the matter was read on the request of Dr. Kinnear, who followed up with the statement that "the gravest mistake the Board could have made was to engage a solicitor in the matter." He asked to be excused from voting also on the matter.

"The mistake of bringing a solicitor into it can never be rectified no matter which way the vote goes. The last chance for harmony went out when he came in."

Motion Carried.

The vote, which carried in the absence of its mover and seconder, both of whom had previous engagements elsewhere, was followed by a second one, under suspension of the rules, moved by Trustee Wotten and seconded by Trustee Hyde asking that Trustee R. L. Reynolds and H. B. Petterly be added to the School Management Committee.

"Now, we're right back where we started from," commented a member.

Under Enquiries, Trustee F. C. Meadows asked the privilege of being permitted to approach the Board on behalf of the local Kinsmen Club to request that in view of the large sum done by school children of the city, senior pupils be permitted to sell tickets in connection with the campaign about to be launched by the club. On the permission of Chairman Allin, the privilege was granted by Chairman Allin.

Before the meeting, Mr. Kinnear, a resolution of appreciation for the sterling work performed by the late W. W. Mott, during his years of school teacher and later Trustee of the Board, was officially placed on the Minutes Book. It was seconded by Trustee Guilday. Previous to the opening of the business of the Board one minute's silence was observed in his memory by the chairman.

Biography of a Fish from Egg to Fingerling Is Unfolded to Reporter at Local Hatchery Manager Lifts Curtain on Nature's Ways

Scenes of Intense Activity as Young Life in Fish World is Developed

FROM BOTTLE TO TANK

Reporter Repeats Biography of Young Fish And Tells It's Wonders

Just east of this city on the edge of the Bay of Quinte stands a little building of corrugated iron and concrete. There are fifteen more like it in Ontario, all dedicated to the preservation of fish which not only offer a day's sport when one sallies forth with steel rod and clip net, but the more plebian kind which form part of the bill of fare during the winter months.

Men labor there throughout the year and night changing over the screens wherein countless thousands of the little live minnows: they keep the eggs in constant agitation and circulation in the waters which swirl through their pipes and troughs and the large tanks full and brimming over for the larger fry are almost ready to be put into the lakes and taken north where they will inherited in some of the cold lakes that dot the country. But those workers in the place don't put so seriously, will, even if they are busy this cute to show the casual visitor about the place, pointing out the hundred and one duties which form their daily task.

Constantly on Move

Entrance to the building is made through the boiler room where hissing steam from the huge boiler which is kept constantly fired up aids its ablutant note to the murmur of running water within and the low whine of electric motors which keep the pumps constantly on the move, pumping the fresh bay water, 220 gallons per minute constantly circulating through its hundreds of devious channels; the water which provides the life blood for the thousands of tiny, goggle-eyed fish which swirl through the millions of tapioco-formed eggs which swirl and tumble in the hundreds of oversized, glass bottles on their oscillating racks reaching ceiling high.

Damp and Moist

It's damp and moist and watery smelling in a hatchery, that's the Belleville Institution is no exception. In the long, narrow room through the boiler room are the dozens of tanks running the full length of the long building, water drips from dank sides to the cement floor below, to run off in little gullies cut in the cement for the purpose, the company of rats greet the eye, and on the racks the hundreds of elongated glass globes behind with the eggs of speckled trout, trout and other eggs in process of incubation. Every inch of space of the room, run half its length, makes for better use of floor space and stretch to half the length of the other side. Shifting sunlight of a spring afternoon filtered through the windows, strikes the glass jars and magnifies the fine specks of life until they appear as strange, undeveloped serpents with protruding eyes and globular bodies. Now they slop or two closer, bend closer to the jars and the transformation from undeveloped eggs into tiny, active wriggling creatures with visible eyes in unending shifting motion. As they hatch from the distributed eggs, excess material left by the lip of the jars carries them into convenient tanks.

Growth of the Minnow

The minnows at this stage are all eyes and stomach. The white fish fry is observed where millions of these tiny wriggling shapes dart like microbes through the green water of the tanks. Long, slender tiny shapes, they resemble magnified, transparent germs. At the bottom of the glass containers, the unhatched eggs swirl in constant motion, disturbed further by the tiny fish seeking their way from the massed bottom to the top where they are supplied oft into tank after successive tanks to clearer water as the time, gaining strength in their slow journey to the larger tanks from which children of the city, senior pupils be permitted to sell tickets in connection with the campaign about to be launched by the club. On the permission of Chairman Allin, the privilege was granted by Chairman Allin.

Before the meeting, Mr. Kinnear, a resolution of appreciation for the sterling work performed by the late W. W. Mott, during his years of school teacher and later Trustee of the Board, was officially placed on the Minutes Book. It was seconded by Trustee Guilday. THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

Crossing the Line aboard R smown en route to Australia.

A tour of Fleet Admiral in 1926 and 1927 began the Empire travels of the present King. The next important trip was the voyage to Australia, when the commonwealth's new capital, Canberra, was officially opened in 1927. That trip was enlarged into a world tour, made aboard the battleship Renown, and during which the present King and Queen visited not only Australia and its sister dominion, New Zealand, but also the Canary Islands, the West Indies, Panama (where American and Panamanian welcomes were extended the party), Fiji and Jamaica and many other places.

We do not expect to give a chronological account of that tour though we must accept with will as the Duke and Duchess in Australia, but a glance side to the cruise is today's pictorial subject.

In their East African tour in 1924-5, the Duke and Duchess "crossed the line" and His Majesty was given the usual initiation into Father Neptune's order of those who have sailed far enough south to cross the equator. But when the world cruise aboard the Renown began, either the lord of the deep had forgotten or the party, or both, declined to accept the previous initiation as complete and final and insisted upon a second ceremonial. So to-day we have the picture reproduced on the occasion of the "barber" before being doubed with "razor" blades made of the fish of the fish eggs in such a manner that no sticking together is possible.

Hatching Problems

All the eggs do not hatch at the same time. When there is a sufficient number to make fish fry for instance, ready for planting in the bay and there are still eggs left unhatched, the hatchery manager stops the flow of water through the jars for a half hour. In some unexplained manner this causes a prompt hatching of the eggs and when this evolution is completed, the complete batch is dumped into a specially designed scow which is towed to the planting grounds. There, the fry are liberated.

WAR UNLIKELY SAYS STEEL MAGNATE

There are those who forecast war, and some hold that war possibility is remote. Lord Riverdale of Sheffield, England, a leading figure in the steel industry and a vice president of the International Chamber of Commerce, said that there would be no great war for twenty-five or fifty years and pointed to British rearmament as a forward step in the cause of enforced peace. Believing the League of Nations has failed as an instrument of effective security, he declared that "this year we are going to spend 445 million pounds sterling on arms, and on the following year four hundred million pounds." British public opinion today is roused to the point of willingness to make any sacrifice so that Great Britain may back up her word. The world knows that it will never be used for aggression but for the defence of liberty, justice and freedom."

It was to be regretted, he said, that this increased armament expenditure was incurred on armaments throughout the world when world trade was reviving, increasing commodity prices. He referred to a time when the hoarding of metals by the great nations would cease.

This is the general feeling animating Britain at this time—that adequate defence is the only security against international strife.

NOTEBOOK RECORD OF LINCOLN

Seventy-two years ago Abraham Lincoln was assassinated and anything in connection with his name is good reading though a period of nearly three-quarters of a century has passed.

Original notes of Dr. Charles S. Taft, an army surgeon who saw Lincoln shot and helped care for him during his last hours are included in an exhibition opened in Washington. The collection including the Taft notes, owned by Dr. Rosenbach is valued at one million dollars. It is said to be the greatest collection of the last days of the Civil War and Lincoln. There are three thousand papers dealing with the last eighteen months of Lincoln's life.

Dr. Taft's notebook is of keen interest on the anniversary of the murder. He tells of watching Lincoln and his party arrive at Ford's Theatre about 8.30 o'clock the night of April 14th, 1865, to see Laura Keene in "Our American Cousin."

"At about 10.30," he writes, "my attention was directed toward the President's box by the report of a pistol, and I saw a man drop from the box, and, shouting as he did so, 'Sic semper tyrannis.'

"I was endeavoring to pacify my wife, who wished to leave the place, when I heard several shouts for a surgeon; this was the first intimation I had that any one had been wounded; I sprang upon the stage, calling out that I was a surgeon, when I was seized by several men and lifted up to the State box; when I entered the President was lying upon the floor, surrounded by a number of men who were about lifting him to remove him; some were advising his removal home. This measure I opposed, stating that I was an army surgeon and wished him to be removed to the nearest house."

Dr. Taft goes on to describe in detail the President's removal to a nearby house and the attempts made to save his life.

"The pulse of the President fluctuated between 40 and 60 during the night and varied in volume and force, sometimes being quite full and strong and then thread-like and feeble; after 5 a.m. the pulse remained at about 60 but became gradually weaker and thinner from that time until his death.

"The wound ceased to bleed or discharge about 5.30 a.m. and from that time the breathing was stertorous, but gradually increased in frequency and decreased in strength up to the last breath, which was drawn at 22 minutes and 55 seconds after 7; the heart did not cease to beat until 22 minutes 10 seconds past 7; my hand was upon the President's heart and my eye upon the watch of the surgeon general who was standing by my side."

When asked what he liked best about the service he replied: "The launching of the table.

SLEEP . . .

At morn we pray the Christ-taught prayer:
We ask for bread, for hourly care;
For mercy, measured by God's perfect plan,
The balance in the hand of every man,
We ask that He would place;
Our human justice, tempered only by His grace,
Our hopes, desires, all passions we would lay
Obedient in the Hand that holds the world in sway.
And at day's close, whether we laugh or weep,
We ask not, for in faith we know
That with those blessings which to all men flow,
Day, night, seed-time, and harvest, will a stedfast
That blotting out to weary heart and brain;
The great unfathomable gift, that sense unplumbed and deep,
Unearned, unmasked, God's precious boon of sleep.

And when at last Time's noiseless feet
Shall pause beside our unlatched door,
And we shall watch the sun's red after-glow,
For us, to rise no more;
Then shall we bring our pangs and pains,
Our empty hands, or hoarded gains
We may no longer keep. Triumph, regret, or applause,
And as our world engulfed in surges past us sweep,
Then in Thine everlasting arms, O Father, may we sleep!

"DAMNDEST BUNCH OF TRIPE EVER RECORDED", is judgment of Peterboro Examiner on story from Toronto of a pig with a pet snake, eight feet long, and a veterinary. Here's the story as told by the Examiner:

Most folk prefere to see a dumb animal getting fair treatment, but we are certain there is not much worrying going on about what happens to snakes. But here is one case which is different.

A young woman in Toronto owns a snake eight feet long, and calls the thing Gordon. And right there all men who are possessed of that name are entitled to protest.

The reptile had a sore throat and its owner asked several veterinarians to look at the thing to see what should be done. They refused, but at last one was found who knew something about snakes and he fixed the thing. Now it is recovering, and while doing so is kept in a baby basket with pink ribbons attached, and there are several electric light bulbs in the basket to make certain the snake does not suffer from a chill.

Pardon the outburst but we consider that the damndest bunch of tripe yet recorded.

DEPRESSION HAS DEFINITELY DEPARTED FROM THE DEEP WATER FISHERIES OF THE ST. LAWRENCE river, according to late advices which indicate that the fish, game and commercial, are poloing on their fins, and rarin to go. Veteran Alexandria Bay commercial fisherman recently brought in a record catch including one sturgeon weighing 200 pounds, the largest of the species caught in that vicinity in twenty years. The big fish was hooked off Watch Island, six miles below Alexandria Bay, on a regular sturgeon line, about a quarter of an inch in thickness, with cut fish for bait. A ready market for sturgeon meat and caviar is always available in New York City.

Parliament Hill Hears

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Horatio Alger yarn in one paragraph:

I was lunching in the parliamentary restaurant with Senator Harry Mullins the day before the session closed. He said: "As you know, when I was a younger man I travelled all over the West buying cattle. I remember going once to the village of Saltcoats, Saskatchewan, to meet a young fellow in overalls came in with with a small herd of cattle. They were fine animals. In due course, and he got a nice price for them. "Yes?" I replied, wondering what he was coming to. "The young fellow's name was Crerar?" Senator Mullins continued. "In fact, Crerar's him sitting over there!" waving his hand dramatically in the direction of a table where Hon. Charles A. Dunning, Minister of Finance was seated with Hon. W. D. Euler and the Minister of Fisheries.

o—o—o

Senator Mullins, once launched on stories of the cattle-ranching days, can continue indefinitely.

I asked him how he came to go out to the North-West in the first place.

"I was in Glasgow, about the time of the Saskatchewan Rebellion," he replied. "I was there when some crazy fellow tried to drive a herd of western steers down one of the main streets of Glasgow. He had them all been unloaded from a cattle-boat. Everybody was excited. He must have bid thousands of dollars of damage to the shops and stalls. I enquired about them, and found that they were from the West. Of course, what they should have done was to have driven them somewhere near the docks, not try to drive cattle on the range from the streets of a city. I got interested in range cattle, and soon afterwards went out there to see for myself."

o—o—o

Of the many anecdotes Senator Mullins relates about cattle-buying in the West in that period, I will tell one more:

"That was a natural cattle country south of Medicine Hat, and it was a shame it was ever opened up for the homesteaders. I remember that if I was ever down at Wildhorse? Lake, 30 miles from Medicine Hat, writing a cheque for $1,500 for a little bunch of cattle. The cheque would only carried it around with him for four years. I wondered what had become of it. It was cashed recently, long I finally wrote to it off the books. Some time after that, I was down, and wired my bank in the east to see if the cheque was any good. It had been.

"Those fellows had no particular use for money. Shirts cost seven sixty or seventy miles from the nearest town."

The session just closed saw the revival of an almost extinct species —the private member. In the previous parliament the leaders did nearly all of the talking, especially on the government side. In the last session there were times when private members "stole the show" for hours at a time. Several of the outstanding speeches of the session were made by back-benchers.

Who among the private members of the several parties made the most progress during the session? Starred promise as "comers"?

No two persons would pick the same members. But after consultation with shrewd observers, I venture the following list:

Conservatives: Howard Green of Vancouver South, because of his intelligent and assiduous work in connection with his addresses on aviation.

Liberals: Allen Walsh, of Mount Royal, Montreal for his contributions to debates on unemployment and the Canadian National.

K. E. Penley, of Qu'Appelle, for speeches on wheat.

South-East Corner: Grant McNeil, Vancouver North, for his work on the Canadian National and on soldiers' problems. M. J. Coldwell continued the good impression of Rosetown-Biggar, Saskatchewan, most active of the Social Credit group in the House.

Liberals: Joseph T. Thorson, of Selkirk, for an outstanding speech on the constitution, and to a lesser extent for his speeches on defence matters.

Samuel Factor, Toronto, whose impressive speech on the necessity of a form of democracy in Germany won him much praise.

Ian Mackenzie, Gloucester, who proved that a formal speech (he made his maiden speech last session) can be a thoughtful provocative utterance.

A. A. Tucker, Rosthern, because he is visibly growing in parliamentary stature.

H. J. Deschenes, Huron North, because he is visibly growing in stature. He is responsible for the idea that a private member is more than a rubber stamp.

W. H. Moore, of Oshawa, because he has held his seat since 1917 and can vote against the United Kingdom agreement, for reasons adequately explained.

If I were making a secondary list I would include Messrs. Bothwell, Cahoda, scoring others, J. A. Glen, Hon. Edmund Bertrand, Pierre Gauthier, Oscar Boulanger, Gordon Ross and Malcolm McLean.

During one of the committees last session, Hon. Charles Stewart, then from Burlington, was repeatedly referred to as Mr. Stewart. Hon. Harry Stevens, whose 20 consecutive years in the House give him a rich store of reminiscences, recalls a case of allege of double service of more than ordinary merriment:

"I think," he says, "one of the funniest incidents in the House of Commons occurred when the late Mr. Sinclair, in replying to the late Thomas Chamberlain, Conservative member, who had been dilating on the 'Hall-mark Platform' remarked in his most serious manner: 'Now, I think you can rank this Hallmark Platform down the throats you will find you have a rocky road to travel.'

"It's small," adds Mr. Stevens, "that Ollie Wilson, M.P., making one of his back-country speeches in the old Duke of Islington Hall, said: 'This is the flag which has blazed a trail across the pale-face deep!'"

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop opened the book of his wife, with his pen-knife so it showed all the works, saying, "Why should I pay good rich jeweler some fabulous price to do something I can do myself in a few seconds? There must be a little slot in here somewhere that says 'A' and 'B' for fast and slow and all I have to do is push a little gadget a few times of a decimal yards S. The watch only runs about 6 minutes fast a week at least.

If you drop it it will probably get a good start," pop said, pop said, "I'm not going to have Mrs. Nash's boy helped asser to that.

O, pop, you ain't so on the funny, exclaimed boy laying on his back on the window sill, I said. It's got a green back and a diamond and long twisty legs, what kind of a bug do you think it is, pop? I said, and pop said, I think it's a doodle bug.

And he kept on looking inside his watch and I said, But why it is laying on its back, pop, do you think it's sick?

I think it is as dead as a doornail, now for Pete sake let me concentrate, pop said.

Pop had a hard doing, and pritty soon I yelled O, pop, hay look, and pop started to drop his watch and caught it again just in time saying, Look at that goose, nore blanket to blame you almost cost me the price of a new watch.

And then pop threw it down disgusted after all, it just quick kerred over and I said, I'm sorry, pop said, it's a wonder I didn't break you all to pieces, you only cy 60 dollar watch.

And he closed it up again and put it back in his pocket and wiped his handkerchief, saying, I guess I'll let the jeweller have a look at it, after all if everybody fixed their own watches the jewelers would all go broke and have to be supported at public expense and you wouldn't get no watch, and nobody wants that.

And he got in back of the sporting page pretending not to notice me laughing.

Stray Bits

The Spare Room—

A woman's institute discussed the spare bedroom recently and that splendid editor of Kincardine Reporter-Bramner reminiscing about the stove pipe in the parlor that was supposed to temper the air to the ancient preacher who occasionally condescended to honor with his presence the Basil Ste. Marie Star.

We gather that Arthur never actually occupied the room himself, so that how it came to be called "the spare" is pretty much on heresay as far as he is concerned. If he had ever lain in his bed after the early dawn and slued up the situation while he gazed over the top of the bed-clothes, his parishioners, he would surely have noted the yarn notices on the wall "What is Home Without a Mother?" "Shun Evil Companions" and the old original Canadian standby in all bygone sparerooms: "God Bless Our Home." The room, of course, meant for the boys of the family, and not for the student-preacher.

Down in the parlor to which the preacher was glad to escape there was a wood fire in the old heater with the shining brass urn on top and the stove pipe disappearing into the chimney. The floor was covered with a rag carpet, the melodeon and the what-not in the corner with its shell work. A glass showcase held a small picture of Westminster Abbey, Aunt Margaret's thirtype in a metal frame and other family treasures, including the Bible on the lower shelf, would all mildly interest the budding clergyman till sounds from the kitchen presaged breakfast.

"The family records of births, marriages and deaths," he says, "are further in his own handwriting on the blank pages, always interesting to the visitor. And he never failed to ask about each of the family on his return visits. It was mainly by the discussion of these records that he broke down the shyness of the young fry. Even if the kids had to spruce up a bit before his arrival, they were always a little savvy to see him go.

"Then, one of the family had risen early and built a fire in the parlor stove so that he had at least as fair a break as the boys who had to go to the stable to do the chores.

More than likely the reverend visitor had put the wood for the stoves himself, at one time, and so understood what the routine was. He was always a little long, and never made much trouble, except that the boys thought he was old when he was a little boy.

Arthur knows perfectly well that the parlor and the parlor of the old days are still Ontario institutions. The old stoves are gone and the furniture is a little more comfortable, but the old welcome for the visitor is still there."

There Used to Be a Parlor—

Well, just a little bit of the large family Bible in the front parlor of the home of the Kingston Whig. He answered his own question with the statement from the Rev. Dr. Hincks, of Australia, the Bible has been ousted by the radio. He says the parlor has become a living room and the Bible has been relegated to the scrap heap, out of sight. The passing of the old family Bible will be regretted by all of us who have memories when it was the most important and impressive object in the parlor. Sometimes the parlor was the receiving room and the sacred nature of the Bible and the furniture was of the stiff, horse-hair variety that was decidedly uncomfortable to sit on, but was regarded as an absolute necessity in the furnishing of a parlor.

The shade was kept scrupulously drawn, full-length at the window. Any sunlight which might fade the inviolate carpet. The door was kept tightly shut so that the room existed a dank, chill air in Winter and a hot stuffiness in Summer. The status of the guest with the household could be easily determined by the room to which he was ushered. The minister, for instance, was always shown into the parlor the household's best, but a visiting poor relation ranked the hard, wooden bench in the kitchen.

The passing of the family Bible with its records of births, deaths and marriages, and as a hiding place for old love letters is to be regretted. But the transformation of the old parlor into the popular living room of today is a change that will be spurned by few, remarks the Kingston editor.

INVITATION

Early Conference

Martin did not indicate definitely when the conference would be held but it was expected to be called immediately. Harry Carmichael, Vice-President and General Manager of General Motors, and James Mitchell, plant manager, will probably represent the company, as indicated in the Premier's invitation.

There was no announcement regarding returning to work of employees during any negotiations. Martin, after issuing the statement, said he would address a meeting of about 5,000 men at the Fisher, Fisher, plant of General Motors Sunday afternoon and speak at a membership meeting Sunday night.

Martin's Statement

Martin's Statement said:

"We have always stood ready to negotiate, provided negotiations are upon a proper basis. A proper basis was reached Thursday night in Detroit and confirmed Friday by telephone with General Motors officials in Detroit.

"According to the agreement reached in Detroit, negotiations were to be resumed between a local committee, guided by international representatives, including Hugh Thompson, (C.I.O. organizer) and the local plant managements. With that understanding we came to Oshawa on Friday. General Motors desires these negotiations to take place in the Premier's office.

Upon arriving in Oshawa, we learned that Mr. J. H. Millard, representative of the international union, had received the following telegram from Premier Hepburn:

"April 13, 1937.

"Toronto, Ont.

"Mr. C. H. Millard,

"Union Headquarters,

"Oshawa, Ont.

"Would urgently request, that you attend along with your council, Mr. Cohen, conference in my office tomorrow morning. Am also inviting Mr. Harry Carmichael and Mr. James Mitchell to be present.

"(Signed) M. F. Hepburn."

Accept Invitation

"This invitation was dealt with at the membership meeting tonight.

"We are pleased to accept the invitation of the Premier to meet General Motors at his office, and Mr. J. L. Cohen, counsel for the International Union, will attend with Mr. Millard and the committee on behalf of the Union."

Early last night Harry Carmichael, company Vice-President, amplified a previous statement on behalf of General Motors and negotiations would be begun with strikers if they went back to work, but otherwise Premier Hepburn would have to be a party to any subsequent parleys.

His statement said:

"In view of the fact that representatives of the United Automobile Workers of America from the United States have undertaken to make therapeutic statements in connection with the Prime Minister of Ontario, to the effect that he will not be a party to any future negotiations, on behalf of General Motors of Canada, Limited, I wish to make the following statement:

"There will be no meeting in Toronto of the committee of General Motors of Canada, Limited, and representatives of their employees until the men first go back to work, or unless the Premier of Ontario, Mr. Hepburn, meets the Canadian executive of General Motors in a joint conference with the shop committee of the workmen."

Proposals by Workers

The following Carmichael's earlier statement that if the workers called off the strike and returned to their jobs, "we hereby agree to meet the committee from the various General Motors plants of Canada and enter into an agreement with them concerning wages, hours and working conditions, with suggestions to begin immediately upon the termination of the strike."

What transpired at the meeting or March with the shop stewards was not officially disclosed, although it stated the stewards were in agreement with the Union, Wednesday's proposals.

It was unofficially reported, that these would be among proposals to be urged on the company as a condition to return to work: a new agreement shall include all General Motors plants and its subsidiaries, including plants at Oshawa; Windsor and St. Catharines; recognition of the Oshawa Local 222 of the U.A.W.A.; seniority rights for all employees; establishment of a grievance committee.

CHARGE OF THEFT IS DISMISSED

Accomplice Not Known Graves Testifies in Court

Charges of the theft of brass journals from the property of the Canadian National Railways, were dismissed against Randall Smith, 19-year-old Belleville youth by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's police court, after Thomas Graves, alleged accomplice of Smith's stated under oath, that he did not know who his accomplice was. Graves having testified, gave evidence to the effect that he did not know his accomplice, prompted Graves, Attorney B. G. Donnan K.C., to suggest a dismissal.

Mr. Donnan called for Graves' record which showed three previous convictions, while Mr. Donnan stated that perjury was obviously committed, and that Smith should know, that his friend took the "rap" for him as I'm going to ask for the maximum sentence to be imposed upon Graves this time," stated Mr. Donnan after Graves pleaded guilty. Sentence was postponed for one week, however.

Saved From Accident

Charles Collopbourn, translent, appeared charged with intoxication. "This is the man, who came pachmelling into my office door and he was doubtlessly intoxicated," stated Mr. Donnan. The accused admitted his guilt, but stated in leniency, "I've got a sailing job to go to," he added. "Somebody with common jail to date from the time of your arrest", replied Mr. Butler, "I'll tell you what you can only have two more days, Collopbourn," added Mr. Butler.

Five persons appeared charged with intoxication and all intimated they would meet the assessed fine and costs if given time in which to raise the money. Their requests brought results as His Worship granted them the extension of time.

As a sequel to a plea of guilty of conspiracy liquor made by Hector Palmer, Belleville, William Shiers, Finnish Street, was found guilty of selling liquor. Palmer testified that Shiers sold a small bottle of liquor from Shiers on April 10th. Shiers denied the accusation but His Worship said that all indications pointed to guilt and Shiers was ordered to serve two months in the common jail.

R. D. Ponton appearing for Shiers strongly objected to the court's decision. "There is no corroboration and anyhow it was you charged with consuming and not illegal possession," quoted Mr. Arnots of Palmer.

"You may request the same favour for one of your clients some day", prompted Crown Attorney Donnan and the question went unanswered.

When the 400 enlisted this week have been given a complete training, they will be free to return to their regular work but will be paid a small retainer and be kept as reserves, he said, subject to call at any time.

SEND 30,000 TRO OPS TO N. W. INDIA TO QUELL TRIBESMEN

In an effort to pacify rebel tribesmen on the northwest frontier of India—wild native fighters who have been systematically attacking British troops stationed near the frontier—British authorities at Delhi will send 32,000 men to the wild region of Waziristan. Leader of the tribesmen is the Fakir of Ipi, fanatical native who has been responsible for the guerilla warfare which recently took the lives of seven British officers, two non-commissioned officers and 20 native soldiers. Thirty-nine other soldiers of the same party were wounded. At the LEFT above is the first and only photograph made of the Fakir of Ipi, mysterious leader of the tribesmen. At the RIGHT is a typical native hillman, well-armed and almost impossible to contact in his wild home, but one of whom, recently took the liberty of posing for the picture. At the CENTER above is a map of the northwest section of India, showing the district where the guerilla warfare has been waged with disastrous effect to British rule. BELOW is a group of British and native Indian soldiers with a mountain gun of the type used by the troops in their patrol of the boundary between India and Afghanistan, the famed Khyber Pass is in this district.

Defective Vision Wastes Nerve Force

Medical scientists have found out that normal eyes use from 10 to 15 per cent. of the nervous energy of the entire body, whereas far-sighted and near-sighted eyes use as high as 50 per cent. of the nervous energy. Leaving only a relatively small percentage of the nerve power to operate the remaining organs of the body.

Thus, poor vision entails a severe drain upon the vital nerve forces of the body and frequently is the source of many disorders and ailments.

Have your eyes examined now—just to be sure that they are not wasting nerve or enduring or straining your health.

AT HOME STAGED BY CONSERVATIVES ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Over 600 Guests of Young Canada Club at Johnstone's Academy

BRIDGE, EUCHRE

Short Addresses by Dr. Welsh, W. E. Tummon And Mayor Arnott

If the consensus of opinion of the six hundred members and guests of the Young Conservative Club of Belleville can be taken as a criterion, then the "At Home" given last night in Johnstone's Academy by that organization can go down in record as being one of the most enjoyable events of its nature ever held in the city.

With twenty-one tables of bridge and fifty-two tables of euchre providing entertainment during the first part of the evening, a splendid floor show staged by a cast of talented artists, and the spacious dance floor of the Academy and his Commodores supplying melodious music hundreds of dancing feet, the affair moved smoothly along a well organized channel of entertainment. It was one of those affairs for which the organizations of this city have become famous. There was not a dull moment from the time the first card fell until the last strains of the National Anthem sounded finis to an evening replete with enjoyable memories.

A great deal of credit for the success of the affair must go to the President Harry Rollins and his staff of assistants for the brilliant manner in which the "At Home" was conducted. Events followed each other in a smooth sequence. There was not a hitch to the various proceedings at any time.

And permeating the whole was that fine spirit of camaraderie and enjoyment characteristic of a crowd of people who are being royally entertained.

The early part of the evening was marked by the busy hum of the euchre tables under the watchful eye of Dave Batchelor, Bob Ferneson and S. Collins, which was contrasted by the characteristic silence of the bridge enthusiasts in charge of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McKeown and Mr. and Mrs. Art Hill.

Immediately following the cessation of play a delicious supper was served by the Ladies' Conservative Association of Belleville assisted by members of the opposite sex.

Dr. Harold Welsh Popular

That Dr. Harold Welsh, M.L.A. for East Hastings still enjoys the marked popularity he held during the hectic days of the by-election, was evidenced in the tumultuous roar of acclaim which greeted him, when he was called by the Master of Ceremonies, Harry Rollins.

"The presence here of such a large crowd" Dr. Welsh said, in a brief speech, "speaks well for Conservatism in Belleville, especially in view of the fact, that affairs are in such an unsettled condition today."

"I will not take up any of your time for I know that you came here to enjoy yourselves, but I will say this, that in Queen's Park there is no dissension in the ranks of the Opposition. They are ready for an election at any time. I have here a telegram from the Hon. Earl Rowe with your permission I will read it."

Great misunderstanding regarding your meeting tonight makes it impossible for me to join you. May I extend to my friends and supporters my best wishes for successful meeting. Our mutual efforts we can restore decent government in Ontario."

Signed Earl Rowe.

"I too tender my wishes for an enjoyable evening," concluded the popular member amid cheers.

Floor Show Splendid

Featured by the baby star, tiny Barbara Donovan, whose singing and tap dancing practically brought down the house, the floor show staged by Thomas Bertram and his juvenile troupe of talented youngsters left nothing to be desired. The sprightly Misses Mildred and Joyce Woodhouse and Aileen Bowler showed a clever versatility in their execution of tap dance routines. They were loudly applauded and responded with encores. Miss Mildred Cook in her impersonation of a southern plantation darky was merited applause while the sweet soprano voice of Dorothy Browning heard in those favorites " I Love You Truly" and "Annie Laurie" held the crowd entranced in attentive silence or laughter greeted the fine imitations of various artists and the natural comedy of young Marshall Bertram endeared His rendition of a cat and dog fight had the audience in an uproar. Mr. Bertram also was Master of Ceremonies in a capable manner.

Prize Winners

Then came the announcement of the winners of the door prizes which by President Rollins, with many appropriate comments in the light of fortunate ones were escorted to the orchestra dais to receive their individual prizes. Mrs. Fred Haines and his popular band took over the entertainment spotlight and the large crowd turned their attention to enjoyment of the dance. Novelty and spot dances featured this part of the program which continued until an early hour.

Called upon to make brief addresses His Worship Mayor Arnott and Arnott of Belleville, and Mr. W. Ernest Tummon of Tweed, entered the spirit of the occasion, was enjoyed reading every kind confining their remarks to the fact that as everybody wanted to dance they would not take up any of the time.

The prizes and their winners follow:

Library Corner by K.G.

Emil Ludwig, biographer and historian of great men and events has introduced a different personality to his long list of successful books. In his latest volume, "The Nile: The Life-story of a River," he has written the biography of a river which has played a part in history for 6000 years. He personifies the river while tracing its course from its source and beginnings, as a young princess, through its many adventures, swamps and its association with the Blue Nile, or "wider brother" as the latter scenes of the 4000-mile course are described, together with the ancient cities of Egypt, its tombs and shores and their tribal conflicts. The epic of the Nile has been written in the form of a parable which serves to further the interest in the story of "Out of the confused simplicity of the wilderness, the Nile emerges as the symbolic clarity of modern civilization, sees the first dawn of its history, ages, ecstasy and in the end, wearied of men's lust for gold, sinks into the sea, to be renewed in eternal resurrection."

The literary baggage with which Maurice Baring has travelled during his life and which has made a permanent record in his memory, is collected in his new book "Have You Anything to Declare?" His reason for his publication of his "notebook with commentaries," is that "I have always enjoyed reading other people's notebooks and commentaries." They give a very full report and it was enjoyed by all present. Mrs. T. Branagh sang in her usual pleasing manner. The Roll Call was answered with the word "Joy" and the collection was taken and amounted to $1.70. Prayer and Hymn 383 was sung and the meeting closed by every one repeating the Magic benediction. Thank offering $4.75. The members of group 1 served lunch and a vote of thanks was given Mrs. Simpson for her home and to group 1 for the lunch.

Helen Allen, Toronto Telegram, "Beautiful and lavish." "A fine piece of vocal history."

"Fire Over England," to be presented at the Belle today and Monday, matinee daily, is based on the A. E. W. Mason book, and deals with the stirring days of Elizabeth and the Armada. History Repeated

Eric Pommer the director has taken his task of putting England on the screen seriously. Says he: "I feel that there is an extraordinary parallel with the state of affairs today with those of Elizabeth's time. England was short of cannon, short of ammunition, short of ships, and I stress in the film the importance of a strongly armed England."

To make sure of capturing the glorious "Rule Britannia" spirit of the time, Pommer had a Russian, Serge Nolbandov, assist Clemence Dane prepare the screen play; brought over an American to direct; had a Chilean cameraman photograph it; and so set to leave nothing to chance. employed a Swiss art director and a French costume designer.

The Belle Latest News and Views, a smart musical review, and a funny comicolor cartoon are announced for exhibition on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.10. "Pre Over England" starts daily at 2.00, 7.45 and 8.50 p.m.

Injury Jinx Keeps Key Men Out of Several Lineups as Major Leagues Open Monday

Expected 250,000 Will Witness The Double Opening

YANKS FAVORED

Race in National Loop Expected to be Closest in Years

By SID FEDER

New York, Apr. 17 (AP)—From New York's champions to Philadelphia's last-placers, by way of the mid-west, the 1936 standings and the hopeful predictions of the "experts" it looks like a banner year for big league baseball.

Old Man Injury Jinx, who knows a lot about the game but not a thing about baseball, has the only serious note in the swing perfection of opening day baseball. Key men out of several lineups for the getaway program Monday and Tuesday.

Otherwise, the dopesters, play and second-guess baseball are convinced the 1937 campaign will go down in the books among the top years, from all other angles.

Expect Big Opening.

Some 250,000 fans may be on deck for the double opener—the Athletics-Senators clash in Washington and the Phillies-Braves in Boston, with a seven-game schedule Tuesday following Monday's curtailed program. The biggest crowds, a looked-for 80,000 or so is expected at the New York Yankee Stadium, where the world champions entertain their perennial headaches, the Senators, in other good-sized gathering is almost certain for the renewal of the International League's heated rivalry, the Giants and Dodgers in Brooklyn.

Competitively, the race promises to be closer this season in the American League, with more concentration on pitching strength, and even more of a dog fight in the National. In the last few days, however, even the experts have been hard put to keep up with the possibilities as a result of the epidemic of injuries and ailments.

Joe DiMaggio, key man of the Yanks, will be out for two weeks, recovering from a tenderloin tap. Vic Carleton, No. 1 Cubs pitcher, will be lost for a month with a chipped elbow bone. Jimmy Foxx is in a hospital indefinitely, suffering from a sinus condition. Pitching mainstay Bridges of the Tigers and Lefty Grove of the Red Sox are ailing, and Stu Martin, St. Louis Cardinals' infielder, hasn't completely recovered from his appendix operation.

Yanks Appear Class.

As matters now stand, the Yankees featuring the same heavy-duty array that took the American League and World Series apart in '36 look like a shoo-in for the pennant again—but certainly not by the 19½ game margin of a year ago. The Tigers, with Rudolph Hutchinson and Hank Greenberg back on the firing line, and the Indians, with Rookie Bob Feller, biggest freshman pitching sensation in years, a potential 15 or 20-game winner, figure to be top threats. A possible explosive force on the Indians is Odell Hale, especially if their rookies produce.

In the National League, the Cardinals' swaggering gang is going to favored—but you can't make a lot of observers believe it. There isn't a year too many "ifs" in St. Louis, particularly in a comparatively new infield and a pitching staff that's way short full of holes a year ago, and is only partially patched up with Dazzy Dean and Lon Warneke.

ODDS NOW FAVOR 'PEG' MONARCHS

Will Likely Start 6-5 Favorites Over Copper Cliff Squad

Toronto, April 17—(CP)—Spurred by success of Sudbury Tigers in winning the Allan Cup, Copper Cliff Redmen gained new hope as they waited for their fourth game of their Memorial Cup Series with Winnipeg Monarchs this afternoon. Two straight wins for Redmen would take both Dominion Senior and Junior titles to the nickel belt.

For the Western kids, victory this afternoon means retrieving of the famed trophy they held in 1933. Coach Harry Neil, who led Monarchs to the Jr. title then is confident his boys will win today and make it 3 straight. Redmen won the first game of the best-in-five series but lost the next two.

When word reached Toronto early this morning that Tigers had beaten North Battleford Beavers 5-3 in the fifth game of the Allan Cup series in Calgary, Redmen staged a back-slapping celebration. But Maxie Silverman, their coach, soon persuaded them that the proper thing to do before an important game was to get lots of sleep.

Monarchs took Beavers' defeat calmly and said they were sure of keeping the West even on the two rounds by taking the Memorial Cup. And we won't bother waiting for a fifth game to do it," said Neil. Defenceman Vandacle, husky defenceman, who will be ready to start, despite a twisted back sustained last Saturday night.

Odds that started at 4 to 1 for Copper Cliff at the outset of the series were reduced to even money after the third game, and then switched to 6 to 5 favoring the Winnipegers. Close to 9,000 fans were watched the teams battle in the first three games and a packed house is expected at Maple Leaf Gardens this afternoon.

SUDBURY TIGERS HOLD ALLAN CUP IN COMING YEAR

Defeat North Battleford in Fifth Game by 5-2 Score

HECTIC SERIES

Eastern Team Puts on Powerful Drive in Third Frame

Calgary, Apr. 17 (CP)—Sudbury Tigers held the Allan Cup for another year in Canada today by virtue of the east's claim to superiority in intersectional competition.

Tigers rallied strongly in the third period last night to defeat North Battleford Beavers 5-3 in the fifth game of the championship series and increase to sixteen the years the east has held the famous trophy presented in 1908 by the then governor of Montreal, The west has won thirteen years.

The victory closed a hectic series between two fine teams, established beyond doubt as the best amateur machines in their respective sections of the Dominion.

Sudbury won the first game 4-1 and the second 6-3 and appeared to have the title sewed up then, with 18 seconds to play in the third game, fighting Beavers battled to a tie on the score at 5-all and registered their first victory in overtime 7-5.

Beavers evened the count Wednesday night with a 3-1 victory but Tigers provided it because Referee Earl Ovenrad of Okotoks, Alta., refused to permit replacement of Sudbury goalkeeper Bill Forward as Sudbury sought to tie the score with 30 seconds to go.

Protest Thrown Out.

The protest was thrown out by the rules committee of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association after a long argument was played with new officials. Lorne Lyndon of Winnipeg and Oliver Redliken, Rossland, B.C., replaced Overand and Bert Hedges, Toronto.

North Battleford took the lead in both the first and second period but the Northern Ontario titlist champions tied the score in both sessions and fired a trio of goals in the third with a closing drive that would not be denied.

Silas Georg Hastie, Tiger centre, led the clever Ontarians to victory. The second-line player made the plays for three goals and closed his great performance with an unassisted marker to complete the scoring.

Vic Myles opened the scoring in the first period when, after being deadlocked into a corner, he shot wildly in front of the goal and the puck caromed into the Sudbury net off the skate of Frank Lavigne, Tiger defenceman.

Choletie Scores.

Jules Choletie equalized before the period ended on a pretty play with Hastie. Beavers took the lead again in the second frame with Ringo Kampman, Tiger defenceman, in the penalty box. Cam Burtle fired home a rebound that Dave Duchuk shot as the Beavers ganged the Sudbury net.

Jim Dewey tied the score with two minutes of the period left, the lone goal from Hastie and flipped the puck into the North Battleford net from twelve feet.

Early in the final period, Hastie set the stage for Farmer Chamberlain to score the winning marker. Beavers sent four men on attack in a desperate drive and Len Hill broke away, passing to Don Grosse, who made it 4-3. Vic Myles was in the penalty box at the time.

Hastie climaxed his performance in the closing minutes, breaking from a Beaver attack and going in alone to score.

CHIPS from the SPORT BLOCK

OLD and NEW

By Geo. H. Carver

American sports writers sitting back in their ofttets wisdom decked for columnar cover yesterday, when they discovered their prophecies regarding the outcome of the Baer-Farr fight took a severe shellacking when did the Californian Clown, who tried to dignfies his fistic cap and bells under the cover of intensive training.

"Maxie will flatten Farr like an elephant's foot," they crooned the sports wisecracks of Broadway.

"Farr has a powerful left punch and a swing like the boom of a 1,000 ton schooner" . . . What a sock this young will be in '37. . . . The only thing about the affair that we like is that it will be far, far away. . . ." "The thing is in the bag for Maxie and so on into the night. . . . And so the "experts" in the agony o ans giving the poor British, or Australia's chance to cope with the smashing right of the Baer.

But it must have been a sight for the gods to see the chagrin and depression on their sunny countenances as the voice of the announcer boomed the fatal shrewd. . . . We can imagine that every time Farr connected with a punch—missed—and straightened with a jerk . . . And the process of shrinkage from the "mighty" Farr "specials" to the pigmies of Lilliputian stature as their favorite pugilist "fell down" and gave them in a ghostly clipping parade, that would have done credit to Dickens' sports-writing mental giants, must have been a sight for the prevertbial sore eyes.

And the thing, which appears to be troubling the knights of the sports keys now is whether Farr is so good or Baer is still the same old wreck, footlights fighter he always was. . . .

Summing up the fight the Baer fan failed to see the shadow of further pugilistic glory, when he emerged from his lair of retirement, and peopled by the ghosts of the ghosts of Farr, will, in all probability crawl back into an all-time grave of oblivion. . . . Plus twenty-two thousand bucks. . . .

Meanwhile autiste boxing promoters on this side of the pond, either through an ornate sense of curiosity, or from the fact that defeat of Baer-Farr gives a hot-office attraction to the walk-between and the sucker, which barges against the currents of common sense, when a hope-to-die hope he can get by with, have wired the Welshman situation offered to appear in the U.S.A. against that formidable leather-slinger John Henry Lewis.

Farr may put his first "John Henry" on the mind fine for a large amount of dough, but it is doubtful if he will put the second on the mat for the count.

The little boy and his father were strolling down a country road near Peterborough the other day. Suddenly the youngster touched his dad on the arm, "Hey, Pop", he shrilled "What's that taller doin' over there in the field?" "Shut up, you young squirt," replied the old man, "that one. "He's not doing anything. He's a lifter." They moved on across the around here every spring, without being planted".

Just about the time you two chaps are reading this drivel, two of the finest junior hockey squads, that this old Dominion ever produced will be buckling on the armour of combat in Toronto in the fourth and melee final game of the series for the Memorial Cup . . . Winnipeg Monarchs, western champions of the ice pavilions, have flashed a brand of the national pastime, which has dazzled the effete citizens of the town of experts, Toronto . . . Not to mention a new desperate band of puck-chasers, the Copper Cliff Redmen. The Pep Kids have a stranglehold on the junior ring by virtue of their two straight defeats of the Northern tide after losing a heart-breaking first game.

But the red-clad crew are far from being beaten. . . . They have demonstrated their ability to fight from behind in no uncertain manner, and now, with the cup almost torn of their grasp they can be depended upon to wage one of those struggles you see in the movies, in order to put themselves on even terms with the western enemy. . . . Twill be a grand scrap Twigs from the main stem—Hooray, we are going to see a ball game on the twenty-fourth . . . If it doesn't rain . . . George (Cultured) Cay, gave up his study of Onion Club rules and regulations long enough last night to cop the bridge title at the Kiwanis Club Party. . . . Now all his pals are "dashing" at the wedding bells and "divorces" may clash within the membership of the Onionery soon. . . . The well-dressed wise one approached a pedestrian near Campbell street last p.m. "Can you change two dollars", he asked. . . . "Sure" came the ready reply. . . . "O.K. then you can lend me a half-dollar". . . . Have you any Coronation Teas? . . . The sweet young thing inquired of the salesperson in the department store. . . . "No, ma'am, but these large ones are good, you can put any kind of flowers in them" . . . All right skip it. .

The season for the "maple knockers" as the two local bowling leagues is fast drawing to a close. Tonight two teams of Belleville five pin bowlers are competing in the Canadian bowling Association tournament in Toronto. The Canary team from the CIACO League consisting of Dan Strachan, Graham Bardgett, Raven, Slater and Howlett along with Dave Tobe's major "A" team, the Christie Cakes with H. MacLean, Art Whalen, Dave Tobe, Leo Barrett and Les Hicks make up the local contingent. Incidentally the Belleville bowlers did remarkably well in the "pre" qualifying round to do even better tonight. Doubtless the boys will hustle their bowling, however, to take in the international game between England and the United States.

With the combs of bowling a few tidy records have been hung up at the Recreation Alleys this year, to say Manager Leo Barrett. For instance there have been 94 leagues in operation at the Recreation Alleys alone, besides the leagues operating at the "Y", Bowl-A-Drome and Alemite Leagues boast of six leagues each in the junior group, besides there is the major "A" and "C" loops as well as mixed leagues in both the senior and junior classifications. To date Legault, Belleville's flashy little forward as Sudbury sought to tie the score with 30 seconds to go.

Protest Thrown Out.

The protest was thrown out by the rules committee of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association after a long argument was played with new officials. Lorne Lyndon of Winnipeg and Oliver Redliken, Rossland, B.C., replaced Overand and Bert Hedges, Toronto.

Choletie Scores.

Jules Choletie equalized before the period ended on a pretty play with Hastie. Beavers took the lead again in the second frame with Ringo Kampman, Tiger defenceman, in the penalty box. Cam Burtle fired home a rebound that Dave Duchuk shot as the Beavers ganged the Sudbury net.

Jim Dewey tied the score with two minutes of the period left, the lone goal from Hastie and flipped the puck into the North Battleford net from twelve feet.

Early in the final period, Hastie set the stage for Farmer Chamberlain to score the winning marker. Beavers sent four men on attack in a desperate drive and Len Hill broke away, passing to Don Grosse, who made it 4-3. Vic Myles was in the penalty box at the time.

Hastie climaxed his performance in the closing minutes, breaking from a Beaver attack and going in alone to score.

The American League in general swings into action on Tuesday with the world's champion Yankees entertaining Washington, the White Sox St. Louis, Cleveland, Detroit and Boston at Philadelphia. In the National League there will be but three games, New York at Brooklyn, the Cardinals versus the Cincinnati Reds, and Pittsburgh at Chicago. The Yankees look like the team to beat in the American League again and should repeat, while in the National League it will be tough sledding with the "gas house gang" from St. Louis, the Giants, Cubs and Pirates all being in the thick of the battle in the senior circuit. All is set for the umpires' cry of "play ball".

Joe Sberti and his XI-Y League associates are preparing for the opening of the XI-Y League football season and are ready to accept entries any day now. The customary three series will again be sponsored by the XIY Leaguers and indications are that a juvenile, Texas captain interested in playing softball or baseball in the XI-Y League should contact Mr. Sberti at the Y.M.C.A. or drop a card or conveniences. Incidentally and while on the subject of softball we understand that Jimmy Taylor, major O.A.S.A. squad is holding triweekly practices at the Collegiate Campus on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays under the supervision of Coach "Red" Cassidy and Manager Clem Bowden. Some 35 or more aged kids are out with the local junior O.A.S.A. squad last evening.

Harry Moore, publisher of the Trenton Courier-Advocate and veteran mentor of lacrosse throughout the Bay of Quinte district, accepted the position of coach of the Belleville Lacrosse Club last night. In persuading Mr. Moore to assume these duties the local sponsors of the quiet-stick game have got a live wire as Harry Moore knows his lacrosse and will doubtless prove to be just what the doctor ordered. The local lacrosse moguls commenced their activities with practice last night, information is correct, Canada's national lacrosse sport is on the upward trend locally. This afternoon Harry Moore sticks will commence to boys and the first practice held at the Collegiate campus. The proposed Lower School Boys' League is to be one of the main objects of the local Lacrosse Association while an intermediate O.A.L.A. team will also be sponsored. Bill Fry informs us he has contacted Kingston and a number of proven players from the Limestone City will line-up with the locals this summer, thus assuring Belleville of a contending O.A.L.A. squad.

Bill Cook and H. G. "Twigs" Woodley represented the Belleville Kiwanis Junior "A" at the annual meeting of the South Hastings League and were accepted into that loop. Belleville is to have its conventional 24th of May morning baseball game this year with the strong Iatia team being the opposition. The South Hastings League has branched out and will have an active club in Madoc. Belleville also being accepted into the fold along with Camelford, Ferguson, Shannonville and the above named three clubs. When approached by the O.B.A.A. relative to affiliating with the provincial baseball body the meeting was quite favorable and the final decision in the matter was left in the hands of the league executive.

The South Hastings League has supplied some really good ball for the district in years past, and should even furnish a few headliners in 1937. Rumours were the order of the night for weeks after Adam Pringle and president-host Shewfelt. All six clubs will swing into action on Victoria Day with a morning game in Belleville and a double-header at Madoc in the afternoon. Each club will play 20 league games.

TORONTO LEAFS NOT IMPRESSIVE AS SEASON OPENS

Dan Howley, New Manager Had Little Strength to Start on

OUTFIELD GOOD

Hurling Staff Will Need Addition at Early Date

By BERT PERRY

Holden City, Fla., Apr. 17 (CP)—Dan Howley's Toronto Maple Leafs International Baseball League season with a hope-to-hope he can get by with his present Toronto team of youngsters until Major League clubs get to unload surplus players and send him promised help. Leafs finished in fifth place last year, the club's first season.

Three veteran outfielders and a rookie, three pitchers with unimpressive records and a young catcher are holdovers from the championship Edson Toronto team.

The other infield names on the roster are newcomers with two years' experience in Class "C" or "D" baseball.

Howley came out of retirement to manage the Leafs after Jimmie Reese first move was to sign Johnny Hermanski, veteran catcher with Toronto in 1933 and '34. Next, Howley obtained Frank Madura, young second baseman with Greenville in the Cotton States League. Madura batted .310 with Scranton in the New York-Pennsylvania League last season and walked 123 times in 139 games.

Outfield Steady.

Howley has no reason to worry about his outfield. In addition to Tom Oliver, George Blackerby and Hermanski, veteran outfielder, he has three rookies in Bobby Porter, Maye Smith and Ted Petoskey, Porter, a Toronto boy, looks good enough to start the season as a regular although Petoskey and Smith have been as impressive. Petoskey is one of the fastest base runners in baseball. Too, he fields and hits well.

Howley may have to get a first baseman, a shortstop and a third baseman but he has three recruits, only a step from International League calibre, for these positions and may switch Madura to shortstop.

Hurling Big Problem.

Al Smith, a former second baseman, is the best prospect in camp, Ken Strickrott and Don Gautenbein are after the third base spot.

Clarence Struab, Heving and Tommy Heath, obtained from the Browns, will share catching duties.

The big problem in the pitching lem is pitching. Jimmy Pattison, Frank Nekola and John Pomonis, left over from last year, have improved among the newcomers. There are Woodrow Wilson Davis, who won 17 and lost 3 with Cordele in the Georgia-Florida League last year, Joe Mulligan, who won eight and lost eight with Syracuse two seasons ago, and Paul Sullivan, a giant southpaw from Detroit.

John Berly, another right hander, owned by Baltimore but with Leafs in the latter part of 1936, and Mike Meola, leading pitcher in the Pacific Coast League in 1935 and last year with Syracuse complete the mound staff.

Cockroaches Menace To Public Health

The common cockroach is the potential carrier of numerous disease organisms. Investigations have shown that many germs can pass through the digestive tract of the cockroach unharmed, and may be present in a virulent condition in the insect's excreta. Among these, to name only a few, are included the bacteria that cause tuberculosis and typhoid; also pathogenic streptococci, and the protozoa that cause dysentery. As cockroaches will feed on human sputum, there is real danger that tuberculosis might be spread in this way, particularly in public eating places. In addition it is known that cockroaches serve as the secondary or intermediate hosts of parasitic roundabouts or round-worms, one species of which causes a form of cancer in rats and mice. In view of their menace as disease carriers, and also because they contaminate human food with a persistent fetid odour which comes from secretions of certain of their glands, the control of cockroaches is of general public interest. These insects have flattened, horny bodies and large spines, which enable them to move quickly in tight passage in cracks and other small crevices in walls, floors, etc., where they usually remain hidden during the day and emerge at night to prowl about in search of food. They are practically omnivorous, but particularly favour human foodstuffs and on the account are usually most numerous about kitchens and pantries and similar situations. Infestations may often be detected by the presence of the cast skins and empty egg capsules, even when the living roaches have escaped notice.

The most widespread species in Canada is the small, so-called, German cockroach, Blatella germanica L., which is very prevalent in apartment and dwelling houses, hotels, restaurants, stores, etc., where warm moist conditions and a plentiful food supply are to be found. Sometimes, during the summer months, they live and multiply in garbage dumps, in a number of these and towns they have been reported causing a great deal of annoyance by migrating from such places into nearby dwellings. The common cockroach is a small species measuring about five-eighths of an inch long when mature. It is light-brown in color, and bears two distinct dark-brown stripes on the thorax. It is troublesome all the year round in heated dwellings.

The control of cockroaches may be effected with sodium fluoride. The powder should be dusted lightly in places frequented by the insects, and allowed by means of a dust gun or insecticide puffer into cracks and crevices which shelter them. The sodium fluoride adheres to the bodies and appendages of the roaches, which in cleaning themselves are poisoned by it. Owing to the somewhat poisonous character of this insecticide reasonable precautions should be taken to prevent children or domestic pets from gaining access to it. Two other materials often recommended are pyrethrum and borax. Pyrethrum insect powder is less effective than sodium fluoride, it loses its effectiveness quickly on exposure to air and has to be used in larger quantities. Borax, also, is less satisfactory than sodium fluoride. It is also less obtainable, and mixed with equal parts of powdered sweet chocolate is a fairly effective remedy. Fly sprays containing pyrethrum extracts commonly used, but kill only by direct contact. All the preparations referred to may be obtained from the Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Want a Good Lawn? Here's How to get it

Just as soon as the soil is dry and firm enough to walk upon after the snow has disappeared is the time to commence operations for ensuring a good lawn. The first thing to do is to remove all the dead grass by giving the lawn a thorough raking. Special attention should be directed to fixing up the bare patches showing from seed. The seed should be sown broadcast evenly on the bare patches after they have been well dug to a depth of two inches. The seed should then be lightly raked in with a new lot of attied soil and packed down firmly. The patches should be kept moist, but not flooded, for at least two weeks through the application of a fine spray.

Fertilizer is necessary for the lawn and should be applied just as soon as the raking and seeding have been done; and as soon as the fertilizer has been applied it should be well watered in, care being taken to use a fine spray, so that the seed is not disturbed in the newly seeded areas. When the time for cutting arrives, which is as soon as the grass is long enough to allow the mower to function properly, regularity in the process should be observed, and it is advisable to allow the grass to grow over two inches at any time.

Reliable grass mixtures may be obtained from seedsmen but for those people who wish to mix their own, A. C. Young of the Dominion Experimental Farm at Fredericton who as a Canadian authority on grasses, has lectured on home lawns in the United States, recommends for the average lawn a mixture of four parts of Kentucky Blue grass and one part Red Top. At this rate it takes in four pounds per 1,000 square feet of lawn. If it is desired to include White Clover, one-eighth part should be added to the mixture. Where the above mixture does not give satisfactory results owing to local conditions, Rhode Island Bent grass should be used at the rate of two to three pounds per 1,000 square feet. For shady areas, one-third the quantity of Rough-Stalked Meadow grass should be added. Failure to grow grass in shady places is due more often to conditions of low fertility and lack of moisture than to the shade itself.

Seed Treatment Reduces Heavy Loss

Farmers are now busy making preparations for spring seeding. Good crops and heavy yields are directly associated with the use of clean healthy seed of the best quality. The importance of this due to the ravages of seed-borne bacterial and fungous parasites, are much greater than the average farmer realizes. Fortunately all seed should be treated before it is sown regardless of its quality.

Seed treatment of wheat, oats and barley has been greatly simplified in recent years with the appearance on the market of organic mercury dusts. These, when properly applied, effectively control smuts of oats, covered smut of barley, loose smut of both kind of wheat and the other seed borne fungi and bacteria that are responsible for the blights and root rots commonly found in our cereal crops. Due to their easy application, effectiveness, and stimulation to germination, they are rapidly replacing formalin and copper carbonate. They are now, however, recommended as a control for the loose smuts of wheat and barley. These smuts are not affected by the use of the ordinary seed treatments but can be controlled by the hot water treatment.

In applying organic mercury dusts to the seed, care should be exercised to follow directions as outlined on the container. The amounts of dust recommended should be carefully distributed over the seed coat. Insufficient dust will be ineffective in control, and excess will injure germination. Grain either being treated with mercury dust, should not be fed to livestock or poultry, or used for human consumption. It can, however, be kept over, under suitable storage conditions, and used for seed the following year.

Further information concerning seed treatments may be obtained by writing the Dominion Botanist, Division of Botany, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Canada.

European Corn Borer Control

During the past season, the European corn borer was injuriously abundant in the Ottawa district, and in an effort to prevent a repetition of this outbreak in 1937, every grower raising either sweet or fodder corn should make a determined effort to put the recommended control methods into practice.

The remedy in this case is cheap and simple states Alan G. Dustan of the Entomological Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture. The corn borer passes the winter in corn refuse lying in the field or stored in buildings. In late June and early July of the following year the moths emerge and lay their eggs on the lower surfaces of the new corn leaves. These eggs hatch in a few days when the young borers bore their way into the plant and feed within both stalk and cob.

Control is brought about in the autumn and early spring in ways completely destroying all corn refuse, and contained borers, lying in the field or stored in buildings. The following clean up suggestions should be carried out:

(1) Cut all corn as low as possible in order to remove bulk of the borers with the stalk.

(2) Feed completely, or burn all stalks before the end of the following year.

(3) Uproot and burn all sweet corn stalks which cannot be conveniently cut low under the ground as they have dried out.

(4) Plough down all infested stubble and corn refuse in garden and field before June 1st as carefully that it is all covered.

(5) Burn all corn refuse remaining about the farm before June 1st.

As soon borer moths begin to emerge from one farm to the next, community action to control it is most important. Make every effort to induce neighbouring growers to put control practises into operation and clean up all corn refuse this autumn or next spring, before June 1st.

White Grubs in Ontario and Quebec

The study of white grubs, the immature stages of June beetles, has advanced to the point, at least in Ontario and Quebec, where their probable economic importance for the year can be anticipated. As a consequence, the Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports that in Quebec there will be little or any damage due to these pests south of the St. Lawrence and north of the South Nation district. In Ontario, however, June beetles will be in flight, laying their eggs, and the young stages which are rarely seriously injurious will be present in localities in which white grub losses are usually suffered. Where June beetles abundance proves to be abundant, considerable stripping of trees may occur.

Throughout the greater proportion of Ontario, notwithstanding the fact that very severe damage was caused in 1936, little damage is expected from the grubs themselves throughout any part of Ontario in 1937. Owing to the fact that there will be for the locally a major flight of beetles in the Niagara peninsula and throughout a narrow strip along the northwest shore of Lake Ontario, eastward to Port Hope, there will likely be considerable stripping of trees due to the feeding of the beetles, though even here virtually no loss from attacks by the grubs is to be expected. The absence of injury throughout Ontario is due to the insects being present in the non-injurious stages. The very severe outbreak in 1936 in Ontario in Glengarry, Grenville, Peterborough-Hastings, the lake Simcoe and Bruce county will continue to show in 1937 in the form of dead areas in pasture and sward sod. These should be watched carefully, and wherever replacement of this sod by weeds, particularly in meadows, is likely to occur, the infested out fields or spots should be cultivated and seeded down before the weeds establish themselves.

BACON AND EGG SUPPER IS HELD

West Huntingdon.—The annual bacon and egg supper was held in the Orange Hall, West Huntingdon on April 14th, sponsored by the W.M.S. and A.Y.P.A. of the United Church. After the supper a good programme was given in the church.

After a few brief remarks by Rev. Mr. Turner, the following pupils selection was given by Mrs. W. Pitchet. Reading by Mr. Lloyd Morse; Musical selection by Carman Dafoe of Pomboro. Reading by Miss Daniels of Foxboro; Reading by the Ellis.it sisters. Reading by Mr. Chas. Moran. Duet by the Misses Allen sisters of Mount Pleasant. Solo by Mrs. W. Pitchet. In a few words Rev. Turner thanked all who had helped to make this event a success and especially the many neighboring appointments. Closing number "God Save the King." Proceeds of supper: $24.50.

EAST SEYMOUR

East Seymour—Burnbrae Y.P.S. entertained St. Andrew's Y. P. S. of Stirling on Sunday evening. Sixty-two Stirlingites were present, making in all some one hundred and ten.

The meeting opened by the singing of a hymn, after which Rev. Kotfend led in prayer. The president, Mr. Roy Juby of Stirling, local Society in a few well-chosen words welcomed the visitors and turned the meeting over to the president, Mr. Roy Juby. McMillan read Matt. 5: 1-16. The first number on the program was a duet quartette, Rev. and Mrs. Kotfend, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Shirley. Shirley Montgomery recited a humorous selection. Rev. Kotfend sang. Mr. Chas. Bracup gave three readings including an encore. Mesdames Bishop and Kotfend rendered a piano duet. Betty Hulin sang accompanied by Her mother, Mrs. Fred Hulin. Rev. Kotfend gave a monologue on the life of Mrs. Carrie Jacobs-Bond interspersed by the singing of "The Perfect Day" and "I love you truly". Mrs. Bishop favored with a piano solo. Rev. McMillan announced the Benediction, after which Rev. Kotfend took charge of the recreational period and put on a stunt that created much merriment. Refreshments were then served by a bevy of young men and women of Burnbrae. A hearty vote of thanks was ably given the Stirlingites by Mr. Chas. Carter, seconded by Miss Clara Thain, unsolicited in the usual way, followed by Miss Winnie Ward and Mr. Roy Juby, thanking the Burnbrae folks for their appetizing lunch.

The accompanists of the evening were Miss Mae Johnston, Mrs. Bishop, Mrs. Kotfend.

An accident which might easily have proved fatal occurred at the corner of the sixth concession near Campbellford on Tuesday afternoon when a team of horses which Mr. Percy Parr of the 5th concession was driving became unmanageable and ran away and into downtown, narrowly escaping running amok of the school children returning home from school. In the meantime, Mr. Parr was thrown off the vehicle, somewhere near Dunk's grocery. Crowds gathered and Dr. E. A. Stewart conveyed him to the Campbellford Hospital where an X-ray was taken revealing a fractured pelvic bone besides suffering from shock and minor bruises which will lay him up for some weeks. The horses kept on their mad career and finally themselves at the garage, going across St. Andrew's Manse lawn and were finally captured, having jumped over a part of a parked car damaging it to some extent. Mr. Parr had just traded horses with Mr. Fred Bennett near Campbellford which made it very unfortunate.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Fleming and Co.

Both from action of the market and from Street sentiment, it would appear as if most of the liquidation has run its course and dealers are again reaching a buying level. Turning to the news side, we find optimistic on the mines again and the tone in general is much better than in some days.

While the market is immediately beset by strike news a soggy tendency is being overcome by some apprehension regarding the future and, by and large, outlook is not adverse. Strikes are usually followed by an increase in selling orders and a recurrence at the close of business. Such has been the case of late. Nevertheless a definite change in trend, providing demand, plus world wide reflation, are too powerful forces to allow a downward tendency in commodities. In business, however, to say how long the present phase may continue, it may not have spread sufficiently yet as to be widespread buying of industrials. Nevertheless, the unexpected may have entered a buying area and other opportunities should slowly be presented.

Market Outlook

That the market may enter the initial phase of readjustment this week with slow appreciation in some securities of the list is the opinion of several observers. Current business favorably is welcomed by many bulls.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 17 (CP)—Hiding prices on the stock exchange this week with another severe price decline that involved all groups. Base metal shares were particularly hard hit and there were some wide losses in the golds.

Sherritt-Gordon was sold for a loss of 35 cents to $3.36, making a decline 50 cents in two days. Fred Orville weakened 26 cents, Wasa-Amulet 16 cents and International Nickel ¾, and smaller losses were posted for Sudbury Basin, Alderman-Chromium and Jack Waite. In the silver lists Silver Miller dropped 5½ but Eldorado slipped 15 cents to 3.80.

Lake Shore, one of the weakest of the golds, hit a price of 80½ for a loss of more than a two points. Losses of 30 to 50 cents were boarded for Macassa, Little Long Lac, Pickle Crow, Sisco, Wright Hargreaves, Stadacona and Mining Corporation. Other golds off 10 to 15 cents were Moneta, Central Patricia, Hard Rock, Jellicoe, Kerr Addison, MacLeod Cockshutt, East Malartic and Preyder. Dome gained a point.

Penny golds worked lower with the Hollinger-Prize leader and at the close losses of 2 to 7 cents were showing for a long list including Kirkland Townsite, Bankfield, Falconbridge, Gunnar, Gold Eagle and Premier.

Among the industrial losses were limited to about the minimum fractions in the foods, steels and oils and in the utilities narrow gains predominated. Distillers-Seagrams dropped a fraction and the other beverage stocks were steady.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, April 17 (AP) — Mild support appeared for the rails today in the market's second and a number of speculative issues yesterday scheduled.

Dealings were exceptionally quiet, even for a Saturday, and numerous issues failed to change hands at all throughout the session. There was little movement in the closing hour.

Transfers were around 450,000 shares.

In the Canadian division Dome Mines, McIntyre and Hiram Walker showed slight improvement, Canadian Pacific and Distillers-Corporation recovered a trifle, Dominion Government 4s lifted a bit. Canadian funds rose 1-64 of a cent to 100.15 cents. On the curb Lake Shore Mines fell back two points.

Buoyed by further business optimism, Certain-Teed, International Standard Oil and Corp. got up 2 points or so each, the latter two at new peaks for the year.

Dow Jones reported seven directors declared an extra disbursement to stockholders of $3. a share.

Grant of Five Cents a Box Given to Parent Association

As part of the series of education-al meetings being arranged by Mr. J. L. Brown, Dominion dairy grader of the local office, and P. R. Mallory, secretary of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association, now being held for cheesemakers of this central area, a gathering of makers and others interested in the industry was held in the agricultural rooms at Napanee.

Harry Hall, secretary also of the exhibition committee for the Dominion-wide 1937 cheese show to be held in this city in November, first spoke at some length upon the various details connected with the exhibition and requested a grant of five cents per box to be paid by the manufacturers towards promoting the exhibition. The funds so raised will also pay their membership to the Cheesemakers' Association, and surplus to be used as prize money. The request received unanimous support of those present.

In an address Mr. Brown gave a detailed account of conditions which have recently been explained at length the method of finishing for exhibition purposes. Mr. Alan Cook, who will have charge of this city, in a brief address paid tribute to the efforts of the Ontario Association in arranging for this year their membership in the province last year and pledged the support of the trade to a bigger and better show in 1937.

A group meeting of cheesemakers of a cheese factory in connection with his district is to be held by Instructor Brennan at an early date. These meetings are to be held in each district through the Central Ontario area. The object is to acquaint the maker with the requirements of the trade in high quality cheese.

STRIKE PARLEY

Throughout the hectic proceedings of the last few days, General Motors have repeatedly stated their willingness to confer with their own employees but just as steadfastly refused to have anything to do with agents or union representatives from United States.

Question of Relationship

While General Motors will meet representatives of the corporation's own employees, the executives of the striking employees in Oshawa, Ont., remain to be seen whether they will meet them also as representatives of Local 222, United Automobile Workers of America, affiliated with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Union Recognition

The union is accepting, said Mr. Millard, of Cobalt, that the committee on behalf of the union" would represent. While this statement strikers would include United States Union Representatives, the delegation was not made clear. Mr. Hepburn has consistently refused to deal with any such "foreign agitators".

The latest official word from the premier on the strike was issued last night when he said General Motors had made a "generous offer" in its proposals to negotiate with the men returned to work. Mr. Hepburn said if all the men left the environment would see that it was carried out, and that the jurisdiction of the government allows.

Alleged 'Fair of Staffers'

The premier said another Homer Martin International Union president, one Hugh Thomson, organizer of the U.A.W.A. would be permitted to take part in the negotiations which started at Oshawa yesterday.

"They're just a pair of bluffers and might as well get out of the country pronto," the premier said of Martin and Thomson. "Incidentally they can take the Mayor of Oshawa (Alex Hall) with them as soon as we get the money he owes the province."

HEALTH IN SCHOOLS IS REPORTED GOOD

Health in local schools was better during the month of March, and the attendance showed a slight corresponding drop in number, according to the report of School Nurse Miss Ethel Hamilton. During the month four cases of mumps were reported, 15 cases of tonsitis and adenoid operations were performed, 12 dental clinics were held in Queen Alexandra school and 28 pupils had work completed. Eye clinics were held for 40 pupils.

Physical training classes carried on by the volunteer nurses for entrance to the collegiate have been of a forward to and largely attended," declared the report.

A vote of thanks for the work of the volunteer nurses was passed at last evening by members of the local Board of Education in receiving the report.

DAILY SHORT STORY

She Was A Hunling Hero

By Ad Schuster

"I have no objection to your being attached," declared Caroline's mother spoke slowly, "but doesn't it strike you that you are intolerant of those who have other tastes?"

"Maybe," the girl answered lightly. "But this I know, I am going to see big strong men who fear nothing and who are of a different breed than those I have known. I am going to escape from the states and the high brows and when I come back—well maybe I will have entirely returned."

Caroline's mother, somewhat calm, visited for the hero of the open spaces and the first man she saw, other than old Abe Potter, who with his wife owned the retreat, was Leroy Boone. Boone was tall and slender. He wore nose glasses and spoke in a voice that, except for his woodsman's clothes he looked like a college man. Caroline was disappointed and yet Leroy was the only man within sight."

"I have been told you might be a man of the West," she said, giving him one of her best smiles, "and I want to learn all about the customs and people."

"It is probable you will find us much like the men of any other section," Leroy answered as he seated himself.

"You don't understand. I come from a little town in the East. I am vigorous and independent. It is a place where girls are quiet and ladylike and men are studious and timid. I wish to forget books and science, and live with the trees and the hills. When I meet a man I want to be a miner, hunter, or even a stage robber. Can't you see?"

The man of the West removed his spectacles, drew out a handkerchief and polished the glass with deliberation.

"They don't rob stages out here any more," he said, "and most of the cow-boys have gone to the movies." After a moment of deliberation he added, "Maybe, by hunting large enough, I could scare you up a man whose father had been a cattle-rustler."

"I see," Caroline was offended. "You do not understand. This is life is so unexciting here why are you in the mountains?"

"I might be a tourist like yourself but I'm not. You see I work for the biological survey."

"Mercy that's a queer thing to have in the hills! It means college education and books that you are a student and not a real wild westerner after all. I didn't think," she caught herself before confessing she did not think his appearance was promising and continued, "I didn't think it would be so difficult to meet the kind of men I've read about."

When Leroy Boone came by again he brought her a rare flower he had found on the trail and again he smiled oddly when he saw she was not pleased.

"Your western man," he said, "the one you have pictured, would not have picked a flower and sacrified it so carefully. No—I think he would have been shooting the lights out of a saloon or rescuing a leather-skirted girl from the hands of the villainous rustler on the rival ranch. I'm too bad there isn't a motion picture house up here."

"No worst his way", walking leisurely as a man with plenty of time.

"He's angry because I didn't thank him for his flower," Caroline decided. "Well as soon as he understands I do not wish biological surveys buzzing me round, I will be better satisfied. I can see plenty of men like him at home." And when she returned to the cabin she said nothing to the Potters of the man who had given her his picture or scheme.

Several days before the girl met him and at last she admitted to herself there was something in his quiet, slow, tolerant manner that attracted her even while it exasperated. But she would not surrender. She had taken the superior attitude and until he proved himself a hero, worthy of his environment, she would continue disdainful. By the time she came to learn they were as well acquainted as the peculiar, strained situation would allow.

"I am sorry you are going," he said, "very because I will miss you and because you should stay long enough to get the real values of our West."

Was the man going to propose? Caroline wondered and then Caroline felt suddenly her values had changed and that she was going to miss him. Then came that tantalizing smile and the banter which enraged her.

"If I were the sort you have been looking for I would mistap you, throw you over a horse and take you to the parson. But as it is, I can only . . ."

"Say good-by." finished Caroline and she hastened to the cabin vowing she would be glad to forget this man who had no right to pretend to be of her West.

As Abe Potter drove her over to the station he mentioned Boone.

"He works for the biological survey," he said, drawing the words out importantly. "They hire him to hunt mountain lions. Last week he got five in one day!"

For five minutes Caroline was silent. Then tickled at last, Mr. Potter, turn around and drive me back. I'm going to stay another week."

TARZAN'S QUEST

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Though Jane found no game, she returned presently with a plentiful supply of edible wild fruits. Then, under her guidance, the camp began to take shape. Rough shelters were quickly laid out, and soon Jane's expert hand set a bright fire roaring.

It was dark when all the work was done; then the travellers felt they could take their ease before the fire. Jane, who had been taught jungle lore by Tarzan himself, showed them how to make the fruits more palatable by roasting it on the end of a stick.

The food restored the flagging spirits of the whole party. But they would not have been so cheerful had they known that from behind the concealing foliage of a nearby tree, a pair of eyes looked out upon them—mysterious eyes—eyes eager and savage!

. . . By a strange coincidence—or was it some odd phenomenon of telepathy —a shocking thought flashed into Tarzan's mind. Suppose Jane's plane had landed in the territory of the savage Kavuru, who kidnapped women for their own mysterious purposes?

Dance Hall Lady

WOULD YOU CALL IT LOVE?

CHAPTER TWELVE

Anne's heart was hammering but her voice was calm and her manner was cool as she answered David. "Certainly I'm not in love with Stanley Rye. Whatever put such a thought into your head?"

"You did," David responded unhappily, and looking at her from beneath somber, hurt eyes, he said, "I can't understand your liking such a snob."

"He's not a snob to me," Anne said coldly.

"So he has been here again!"

The girl could not resist saying that she was glad to have seen Stanley on the morrow. David brooded, and she wished that she had controlled her tongue, but she had not and she did not know how to repair the damage. As for the man, he stared in silence at the cheap, tawdry dance hall where the girl he loved earned her living. His eye fastened upon Ray Havel.

"What a chump this is!" he said vindictively. "Look at that girl over there, would you?"

Anne looked. Ray had twined himself arms about her partner's waist, a practice strictly forbidden, and was gazing unfathomably into his eyes, her palsied, quivering lips not two inches from his.

"That doesn't mean a thing," Anne offered placatingly. "She is only trying to make a regular out of her partner. See, the supervisor has stopped them now. Ray only behaved that way in a place where she knew she would be stopped."

"For pity's sake Anne, how you have changed! You don't mean to sit say you do that sort of thing."

"You just showed and I don't do that sort of thing, but Ray is not a bad child. I happen to know that she is terribly, terribly in love with someone else."

"She has a dam funny way of showing it!"

Anne had gone farther in her defence than she intended, but David had irked her into it. To her relief, he remained for a moment silent and sullen, his face pale and drawn. A great pity for the maid of perfectly obvious that they had been quarrelling. Anne thought—and she had should have had the wit to see further beneath the surface, to see that Ray was only making the most sort of existence and this sort of pleasure—filled her heart given to her nothing better. Still she was in no mood for further arguments with David.

Just then, looking up, she caught Cora's glance. Cora came from her and the morose David his eyes traveling to a corner where Ray was against the wall, waiting a chance to dance, men too timid to break into a line-a-dozen girls. Cora was not too timid. In a minute more he would have claimed the girl, them towing along a customer.

"I'm sorry, David," said Anne swiftly, apologetically, "but if we're to sit on at the table we'll have to order something to drink. Cora's getting restless; he's been signalling me. Ordinarily it would be all right, but tonight . . ."

David glowered, ungraciously ordered tea for two, while Anne sought nervously to convince him that Cora was not a tyrant but was merely the manager of a dance hall.

"He's really fine," she summarized.

"You're certainly getting funny ideas of what's fine."

"If you were going to be so horrid didn't see why you came at all!" she cried, stung to contagious anger.

"Very well, I'll leave."

He was like a sulky, angry, badmannered little boy. As he rose she grabbed at his hand and pulled him down, so much in the old way that he was mollified. For a moment he let her see what was in his heart.

"Listen, Anne," he began, looking boyish and pathetic, as he leaned across the table. "I'm sorry I've acted like a baby, but just the same you've egged me on. It's all because I love you," he persisted unhappily. "I love you so much honey. There's never been anybody else, Anne; it's always been you."

"Don't, David."

He would not be bullied.

"I know perfectly well that you can take care of yourself in a loud land or anywhere else. I know it, and I'm proud of you. I've never liked these girls who faint at the sight of a mouse, but all the same—"

"I wish you wouldn't see Stanley Rye any more after that tea tomorrow," he said angrily after a brief silence.

His hands were knotted together, blanched white at the knuckles, his eyes were fixed upon her face. The girl opened her lips, but he continued steadily: "Stanley Rye may be all right; probably is. I'm not interfering that he's not any melodramatic designs on your virtue or anything like that. But one thing's certain: picking you up in a place like this he doesn't mean anything serious—he couldn't. He'll think you're the same kind of girl I think Ray is, in spite of your spirited defence. You said yourself that the men who come here—"

"Stop!" Anne commanded in a stifled tone.

"I won't stop. If you start running wounds with Ray, you'll be ruined for ordinary living. You'll be no good. Sacrifice for what? One things that money can buy, the money you haven't got and won't ever have in the normal course of things. Things that you like doing now won't be fun any more; you'll have a Hollo-Noyes complex."

"Don't you remember the fun we enjoyed?" David asked.

The girl felt rising in her breast a passion of hatred and violence. She wanted to strike him. What did he know about Anne Shanley's field? Or what she herself felt? But as he gazed into his haggard, anxious face her indignation died, and she said nothing of what seethed in her mind and heart.

Instead she managed in an unhappy voice "Let's dance."

The two made him look at her quickly, but he rose obediently. It was not a pleasing dance for David. When one of Anne's regulars tried to obtain a dance, David behaved with such outright rudeness that she was ashamed for him; he knew it and was plunged into deeper misery and melancholy. And, in the end, she was compelled to tell him that he could not take her home.

"I'd like nothing better," she answered him sincerely, "but I can't. I hadn't promised Ray earlier to drop in on this friend of hers, whose girl she wants me to meet. I'm tired to death, really; I'd much rather go with you."

He was not cheered. His manner was stiff.

"I wanted to take you by Cobleigh to show you how you've thought we'd catch a breath of air and have some spruce brandy. You remember, don't remember, but that's the first place I ever took you."

"Oh, I do. I do remember."

Galotti's, a tiny Italian restaurant with tables in a latticed garden, was famous for its spaghetti, and, at the top to the starry sky. A fountain tinkled, soothing, girlish; old to and fro and from behind the tinkle of a piano a Gladys Cooper type of song and drink—delicious on such a night. How long ago it seemed since Dave had first taken her there! It was three years.

They were almost alone now in the quiet, deserted dance hall near the empty orchestra pit, the placating, apologetic girl, her head drooping, shoulders sagging, all the curt gone from her manner, David's head bent looking down on her with wounded, somber eyes.

"Just a minute," said Anne suddenly. "I'll see if Ray will let me out of the engagement."

She sped to the dressing room. Ray was changing from her dance frock to the new black and was trying the effect of blooming a shadow lily darkly flushed cheek.

"I thought you were saying the new dress for tomorrow night," remarked Anne in surprise.

Ray frowned.

"I wanted—Grace to see it," she replied uneasily.

Anne was not really interested. Briefly, swiftly she explained the situation. Hurry Ray could not understand. Ray did not understand.

"You promised you promised!" she exclaimed vehemently and accusingly. "You know you did. A person that will break a promise—"

"All right, Ray."

Reluctantly Anne returned to David. He was smoking a cigarette watching for her. The eagerness died from his face as she spoke.

"I see," he said coldly. He turned on his heel and left—and she was deserted.

Illogically, Anne held Ray responsible for the unpleasant conclusion of the unpleasant evening. She was annoyed by Ray's silly insistence that she keep her promise, bored at the prospect of a midnight call, which she determined should be a short one. In silence the two girls rode uptown on the bus. The night was hot and breathless; the buildings that lined Ray Street seemed smothering close. How much more pleasant Galotti's would have been!

At Sixtieth Street Ray rang the bell and Anne followed her down the perilous little stairs from the top of the bus. Still in silence, the two walked three long blocks east. Anne had been too concerned in her own grievance to pay much attention to "Grace", whom Ray had described as a friend from a former job. Not until they turned into a tall, enormous apartment building and entered a luxuriously appointed lobby did she experience the first faint stirring of suspicion. Seemed to be unusually prosperous; rents on Sutton Place equalled those on Park Avenue.

"We're expected, George," said Ray haughtily.

"Not seen you for a long time, Miss Havel."

"No".

The doorman led the way to a mirror-lined elevator and they were whisked upward twenty stories. Anne walked behind Ray down a carpeted softly lighted corridor. Suddenly Ray paused, fumbled in her bag, and to her companion's surprise produced a key and fitted it into the door.

Really doubtful now, Anne hung back, but Ray stepped confidently into a small foyer cut off from a living room beyond by velvet hangings of a beautiful and arresting blue. Hesitating in the hall, Anne heard from the living room a girl's clear, frightened voice exclaim.

"Who's here, Ray?" and a quick rush of feet, the sharp bang of an unseen door. More footsteps.

Ray had wheeled and was in full retreat when the door curtains parted and Richard Graeme advanced into the foyer. Her feet were slippered and she wore a beaded dressing gown.

Anne's heart quit beating for one endless, paralyzed moment. Then Richard spoke.

"This is a surprise," he said genially.

END OF A DREAM

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

It was like a nightmare. Anne would call certain words from her shame; her face went fiery red and then slowly faded to the hue of sallow. With sharp pain and resentment she understood that the other girl had used her, had counted on her truthfulness, her lack of discernment, perhaps her sympathy, too, on her liker acquiescence. Ray was not looking at her, but at the man, and Anne found no words. Her throat seemed closed.

Richard Graeme, Ray, still looking only at him, walked past and into the room beyond. Anne followed blindly toward the hall, toward the elevator, toward escape. It was Ray's problem; let her solve it.

"A minute, please," called Richard in an odd breathless tone she never heard from him before.

He was not at fault; much as she loathed him, he had not treated this cheap and horrible situation. Impossible, impossible to be coldly bade her enter she hesitated, bowed her head and obeyed, stepped into a beautiful, luxurious room whose terraced windows looked on the lights and shadows and mist of Manhattan, a room hung like the nest of an eagle close to the sky.

Except for Ray, pale and frightened, there was no occupant. From a low divan a short velvet evening cape had fallen to the floor, and a gold, dripped to the carpet and the reverberation of a banging door followed by the purr of a car. Ray was staring at the cloak, staring at the cigarettes burned red. She began to tremble.

"How you two startled me," Richard said, His color was high, his eye hard and bright. He was carrying the thing off, his voice lighter than usual and very clear. Anne knew that he was speaking for the benefit of the girl hidden behind the curtains, and knew more that she might sink through the floor.

"I suppose Cora gave you the keys", Richard was saying, his manner to Ray one of cool and his dressing gown.

"Yes, she—she gave me—" Ray had begun furiously, stirred from her paralysis. Anne said sternly, "Cora gave us the keys."

"He shouldn't be so free with them," Richard replied lightly, half facetiously, but there was no facetiousness in his eyes and his voice was cold and very clear. "Where is he, downstairs?"

"Yes," said the cab." Anne replied in a voice as distinct as his own. "Shall I—shall I go and get him?"

"I've got to work this evening, Twill him next time to carry his own messages, the lazy lazer. Tell him I'll see him at the club," he concluded politely. "Oh yes, and Miss Havel, you might—" he smiled keys."

Mistakenly Ray gave him the keys and permitted Anne to steer her into the hall, to close them definitely behind. Once there she leaned against the wall, staring ahead stupidly, Ray stood motionless as a sleepwalker. The storm in Anne's breast broke.

"So here's she began in a manner of frigid calm. "I've stood up for you; I've liked you but now I'm through. I never want to see you again, to speak to you again. I hate you! I loathe and despise you!"

Ray seemed not to hear.

"He had a girl there," she said dully. "I guess—I guess he's through with me."

"I should think he would be!" Anne declared bitterly. "Haven't you any sense at all? Don't you know you can't go trekking in on men's apartments spoil of them? What do you suppose he thinks of you? He'll say you're a—a—"

"I thought he'd throw me out if I came alone," said Ray, lifting brilliant, unnatural eyes. "But with you along I hoped he might let me stay for a while. I wanted to talk to him."

She clasped both hands over her face. "I can't live, I can't live without him," she whispered. "It's killing me."

Her hope is dead."

Anne was still in a fever of shame and anger, hardly knowing what she did or said, only wanting to pound into Ray's consciousness the utter, the shameful indecency of her conduct.

"Do you?"

"I certainly do."

Ray's face assumed a queer intent expression; her dry brilliant eyes were frightening. She moved a staggering step forward and before Anne realized what she was doing Ray had turned, was running swiftly, crazily, down the carpeted floor past the elevator, past the other apartment on the floor. At the end of the hall there was a window can Ray hope to escape, any possible window where thin curtains slowly stirred.

Oh God! Anne felt the blood drain from her body. Ray flung herself astride the low sill, was outlined against the velvet night, swayed in filmy drapories.

Anne tried to scream, to shout, but she made no sound. She started running. She would never have made it but Ray, with a last child-like gesture, flung her arms high above to call out, "I'm going to jump."

Anne reached her. They were grappling at the sill, swaying back and forth, half inside, half out, and behind them fit stories, below the thin stuff of the curtains tore, the pole snapped, crashed. Anne breathed a desperate prayer that "Grace" heard, would come. No one came. She gasped for breath and felt her own strength ebb. Ray was endowed with a maniac's reckless strength. Another minute and both would be over the edge, falling, falling, falling . . .

There was only one chance.

"Go back, Ray," Anne panted. "I don't care."

For the fraction of a second Ray ceased struggling and Anne Ray dragged her inside; pushed her to the solid floor that now seemed so much more solid. Ray, her face pale as the death she had sought, crawled to her feet, opened her mouth to scream. Anne slapped her, slapped her hard.

"Shap out of it," she cried, shattered, spent. "I don't care if you hate me. I can't stand any more."

With that she started to weep, leaning against the wall, weak and ill from reaction. Ray looked on dully, her face white, her hair wild.

"You saved my life," she mumbled. "I wanted to die."

Anne wept no more but she still shook uncontrollably like a person suffering a violent chill. She looked at the other girl with hatred and aversion she spoke.

"Then why not do it decently? Why make me the victim of your cheap, sordid life? Why drag me in a horrible scandal? What have I ever done to you?"

Rough treatment but precisely the treatment that Ray needed. Reason was returning to her now.

"I didn't think of you."

"You might try thinking of something else for a change."

Anne repaired the ravages to her features and Ray, pale and cold, was told Ray to do the same. Meekly Ray got obediently to her feet, moved toward the window and shuddered. When Anne walked steadily down the hall Ray followed her, leaning at her heels, meek, humble, apologetic. Anne spoke to her.

"Mind you, don't start a scene in the lobby. If you begin crying I'll simply leave you there."

So Say Expert Statisticians — Interesting Report of Crippled Children Work by Rotary

Belleville Rotary Club reviewed its work for crippled children at a very regular meeting Monday, surveyed the work since its inception by the club and made plans for even more constructive work in the coming year. President Joe Shortt occupied the chair and the speaker was Chas. J. Symons, Chairman of the Belleville Rotary Club Crippled Children Committee, since the beginning, and member of the Executive Committee of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. The Crippled Children Committee of Belleville Rotary Club is composed of C. J. Symons, Chairman, Dr. Max Baker, Mackenzie Robertson, J.A. McFee, J. R. Boyce.

The history of Rotary efforts on behalf of crippled children was outlined by Mr. Symons in a very interesting manner, showing the great good that had been accomplished by united effort. One of the first things to sense the importance and necessity of united effort in behalf of crippled children was the late Judge of Elmira, N. Y., a retired business man, and an ardent Rotarian, who devoted his life to the work and gained a reputation as a "Children's Friend."

Mr. Symons also said: "Here in Belleville Rotary club the young people's Union was held at the home of Miss Marion Fargey with an attendance of fifteen.

Rex Battle, Famous Musician

One of Canada's best "known" musicians is soon here at Canada's leading hotel, the Royal York, in downtown Toronto. He is Rex Battle, leader of the Royal York Hotel concert orchestra, which plays daily at the hotel and is heard on regular coast-to-coast radio broadcasts. The picture of Mr. Battle is from a portrait recently done by Allan Barr, and shows the massive concentrating on a difficult piano passage. At the Royal York Hotel, which is the largest hostelry in the British Empire, Rex Battle's orchestra is a favorite among the guests, who gather in large numbers at his concerts or tune him in on the individual radios in bedrooms throughout the hotel. The orchestra has spread its fame by playing for conventions that gather at the hotel from all over the continent. The Royal York's fine facilities for this type of hotel trade attracted 75 conventions, totalling 6,000 delegates, up to the middle of March, while 46 others are scheduled to bring 11,000 delegates to the hotel from all over the country later in the year.

There is a saying familiar to all workers for crippled children which says in effect that what it took been for the goodness of God you and I might have been one of these unfortunates.

Cabinet Members Explain Protection of Ships on High Seas

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Apr. 19 (CP)—The government was under heavy fire over Bilbao in the House of Commons this afternoon. The Labor and Liberal opposition parties joined in indignant attack. Questions rattled across the floor with the splutter of a machine gun.

They poured on Foreign Secretary Eden and Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty, in turn. Across the turbulent scene flitted the mysterious figure of "Potato Jones", the skipper of the British Freighter Mary Llewellyn.

Toasting "Potato Jones"

"It is true the whole Mediterranean fleet is toasting Captain 'Potato Jones'" ironically shouted Ernest Hurcle, Labor, as the opposition roared with laughter.

"Why not send the whole opposition to Bilbao with the weather is safe," demanded Sir Alfred Knox, Conservative.

Clement Attlee, Labor leader, declared he found the government's replies to questions unsatisfactory. His gave notice, therefore, that he would raise the question again on adjournment tomorrow night.

War Not Opposition, Demanded

Were British ships bound for Bilbao detained at St. Jean de Luz? What right had General Franco to interfere with British shipping on the high seas? were questions put to the government that France's blockade was effective?

Mining Admitted.

He admitted there was some doubt about authority within the three-mile limit, but the government thought no vas not safe for British ships to proceed to Bilbao. PREMIER STATES EXPLOITATION OF LABOR TO CEASE

Studies Plan to Licence Trade Unions That Ship Dues Across Line

HALL TO SPEAK

Workers Will be Addressed by Thompson And Hall Tonight

Toronto, Ap. 19 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, proclaimed dawn in the Oshawa General Motors strike negotiations, today announced Government law officers were studying legal possibility of licensing trade unions which collect dues here and send them "across the line."

The Premier reiterated he was determined to stop the "exploitation of Canadian labor" by such organizations as John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization. Throughout the 12-day automotive strike the Premier has been opposed to the United Automobile Workers of America and the Oshawa strikers' six members, because of its C.I.O. affiliation.

"If we could find out where all of dues, a large part of which goes across the line to men like Lewis, we would end this trouble," said the Premier.

Canadian Wins Boston Race; 150 Started

Boston, Apr. 19 (AP)—Walter Young, a comparative unknown from Verdun, Que., today gasped his way across the finish line to win the 26-mile, 385 yards B.A.A. marathon when favorite Johnny Kelley of Arlington, Mass., faltered in the stretch.

His time was 2 hours, 33 minutes and 20 seconds, slightly behind the record of 2 hours, 31 minutes, 1 2/5 seconds set in 1933 by Leslie Pawson of Pawtucket, R.I.

Young, mentioned by only a few as a possible dark horse, had trouble left at the end to stage a brief spring across the finish line, but his strained face told plainly of the tortuous grind he suffered.

Kelley, an unemployed florist, was taken after the lead stages of the race after leading for most of the long pull.

KING CAROL

PRINCESS NICHOLAS

PREMIER TATARESCU

PRINCE NICHOLAS

Reported near civil war, Roumania was facing the gravest crisis since the assassination of Premier Duca, as Socialists, Conservatives and peasants rallied to the side of King Carol against Prince Nicholas and the outlawed Iron Guards. The crisis arose when Prince Nicholas demanded that his morganatic wife and four-year-old son be given Royal status. King Carol exiled his brother from Roumania. Later, however, the order was suspended and the young prince arrested. The Iron Guards composed of Fascist and anti-Jewish supporters attempted to use Nicholas' expulsion as the basis for a new drive against King Carol and Premier Tatarescu, who succeeded Duca in 1933. OSCAR THE SNAKE GETTING POPULAR

Even Receives Fan Mail But Not Ready to Come Out Yet

Leamington, Ont., April 19—(CP) Oscar the snake, famed for riding about Leamington in the seat padding of a truck the past three months, is getting popular, Oscar receives fan mail.

The other day came a letter from Brownsville, near St. Thomas, addressed to "Oscar the Snake, care of Sam Wallace, Leamington, Ont." The writer happened to be an old friend of Wallace's, in whose truck Oscar rides. He wanted to make sure Wallace was doing right by the two-foot garter snake.

Sympathies were extended to Oscar for the lack of vitamins in the padding of the cab cushion, where the friendly reptile has been snoozing since January. Oscar was urged to head back to Dover Township, where Wallace picked him up, half-frozen, in a wheat field.

Spring had come again and he was about time Oscar pulled himself together and got something to eat. The writer pointed out.

You can live so long on nothing, and no longer, Oscar was told.

But the serpent hasn't offered to come out of his cushion-nest lately to hear the words of advice and Wallace opened the letter in the absence of Oscar.

3 ARE SENTENCED TO REFORMATORY

Plead Guilty to Breaking And Theft at Bonarlaw

Reformatory sentences were given Harold Draper, 40, Copper Cliff, Ontario, Joseph Wm. Hutchinson, Fred Le Blanc, 22 Campbellcroft, N.B., after the trio of transients pleaded guilty to charges of breaking and entering and theft, from the general store of Fred Wm. Barlow, Bonarlaw, on April 13th last, before Magistrate R. J. Butler in police court this morning. Le Blanc, who boasted of a lengthy criminal record, received the most definite and a further indeterminate sentence of two years less one day, while Draper and McFarlane, who had no previous criminal records, were given terms of not less than six months and not more than one year in the asylum institution.

The trio were arrested by Provincial Police Const. Gallagher, 24 hours after the robbery at Bonarlaw, when the transients, the trio were found in possession of most of the goods, valued at over $100 when apprehended. As they appeared in the prisoners' docket today, Crown Attorney R. O. Donnan K.C., cautioned each one regarding the right to a lawyer. This is a serious matter, do you desire counsel?" he asked each defendant, but three individually shook their heads indicating their willingness to go ahead.

When LeBlanc appeared Mr. Donnan read his record of previous criminal convictions, which proved the accused had served five years in prison for crimes of a similar nature. After reading LeBlanc's record Magistrate Butler addressed him: "What is your right name, boy?"

"That one is good enough, I don't want to show up my right name," replied the accused.

In stating out sentence Magistrate Butler stated he was of the opinion that Draper was not the ringleader, which prompted him to give that man the additional term of sentence. The goods recovered were ordered returned to Mr. W. J. Barlow, Bonarlaw, who had also suffered the loss. Mr. Barlow was present in court and received his goods after the proceedings.

NON-UNION MEN DOING THE WORK

Shipping Companies Little Concerned About Strike

(By The Canadian Press)

Shipping companies with boats tied up on the Great Lakes ports by the seamen's strike today saw disputes kept union stevedores away from work at Hamilton, Toronto and Point Edward waterfronts. While the longshoremen stuck to their demands for more pay, the companies hired non-union men to take their jobs.

Strikers at Hamilton were told that a meeting would be held, scheduled for the head of the lakes, Lawrence Robertson, a union man, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. He was released early in the week at Fort William on $50 bail bond.

While Toronto Unionists claimed one company had refused to have the On-tario Labor Department arbitrate in the strike, Louis Fine industrial Standards Act officer, confirmed that no application had been made for his services.

Picketing continued at both Hamilton and Toronto docks, but arrangements were made for continued loading and unloading operations by non-union labor, of which companies said there was more than enough available. Both sides looking for a possible settlement were scheduled for today at Point Edward.

Upon being questioned, however, the man told of going to Victoria Park to rest, after having consumed considerable of a local brew. "I was attacked by two men and robbed of $12.00," stated Mr. Manahan, he stated he had $22.00 in his possession when he left home, and how he could find only a ten dollar bill, Dr. Cronk was later summoned and ordered the injured man to the hospital.

Seen With Company

Subsequent investigations by local police revealed, however, that the victim of the assault on Pinnacle St., had observed the old man walking south on Front Street, toward the Government Dock, late Saturday afternoon in company with a man whose identity the police refused to reveal at such an early date. The man then left the company of the victim and proceeded in the direction of the dock, where he lay for a number of hours apparently in a dazed condition or perhaps unconscious before he was found by the police on Pinnacle St.

Police also believe it would be practically impossible for a person to administer such a terrific beating to even such an aged person with only the aid of fists, and stated today that it was the opinion that Mr. Manahan was attacked with either a black-jack and sandbag and that the victim of a sickling fracas, the injured man apparently having been kicked in the chest, where he today complains of an excruciating pain.

Up to late tonight Provincial and R.C.M.P. police arrested J. Osterhout, Schreiber and J. Stine, Wallbridge, on charges of attempting to rob the elderly Mr. Manahan, when the pair were ambushed by police and apprehended. Osterhout and Stine committed to the county jail and are waiting trial.

On Saturday and at the suggestion of Inspector Frank Chaiser, O.P.P., Mr. Manahan came to Belleville and deposited a sum of money in a local bank, and stated last night, retaining only $22.00 for current expenses. "I interviewed the old gentleman today and he is still uncertain as to what actually happened on Saturday night. He was doubtless the victim of a brutal and cowardly attack as he received one of the worst beatings I ever saw," added Inspector Gardiner today. Reports from the hospital today stated the aged man was resting comfortably.

$2,500 STOLEN FROM CASHIER

Unmasked Men Scoop up Cash Box Contents at Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Apr. 19 (CP) — Two armed bandits held up the cashier at Brewery Products Limited, the city day and escaped with at least $2,500.

Neither of the men was masked. Another $1,300 kept in a cabinet below the counter in the cashier's cage was overlooked.

FILM STAR LIKES MEN WITH BRAINS

Marlene Dietrich Would Also Prefer to be a Man—Thinks They're Smarter

Hollywood, April 19.—(AP)—Marlene Dietrich says she'd like to be a man.

"I would much prefer to be a man," she said, "because beauty said today. "They have clearer and superior minds. I can think of no advantage in being a woman that compensates for his superiority.

No handsome, not-very-bright male actor, however, will get on the screen, she continued.

"Handsome men are not enough" she said. "To me, it is the man's brains which are much more important than his looks. I like to see him use the build of his body."

Love, said Miss Dietrich, leaves her cold.

You can not feel any emotional stimulus in such situations, she added.

She said she would rather have Charles Laughton, not renowned for beauty, make love to her on the screen than any other actor, regardless of looks.

Laughton, in his superb acting, manages to look beautiful with uncombed hair banged in his face and with his clothes so wrinkled that their original shape is unrecognizable," said Miss Dietrich.

HON. EARL ROWE GUEST OF PARTY HELD IN TRENTON

Murray Tp. Conservative Organize at Social Gathering

Trenton, April 19 (Special) — Hon. Earl Rowe, leader of the Conservative party, was the guest speaker at the Murray Township Conservative organization social evening held in Canterbury Hall on Wednesday night. Mr. Rowe delivered a two and half hour address to somewhere in the neighborhood of 200 invited people from Trenton and the surrounding district. William Goodfellow, president of the Northumberland Conservative Association introduced Mr. Rowe. "It is the desire of the people to maintain democracy in this country, Mr. Rowe stated and continued, "it has failed in many nations therefore it is the duty of a government to fulfil promises made before an election and keep peace and harmony among the classes and creeds of this province so that they can enjoy social legislation."

Losing Prestige Claim

"We have a government at present that has lost prestige more rapidly than any other in the history of this province," he exclaimed. "Because it has disregarded the fundamental principles of good government in public life. Mr. Hepburn made the most spectacular retreat without precedent of any Premier of Canada. Mr. Rowe asserted and remarked he never heard about the whale swallowing Jonah, well, Mr. Hepburn swallowed the whale when he repealed the Separate School tax act, Solemn contracts of Ontario were repudiated by Mr. Hepburn whether they had been wisely drawn or not and power agreements made from which he has broken. Activities at Ahtibi where power can be manufactured the cheapest on the North American Continent were discontinued by the Liberal legislation. Our Premier boosts of a seven and a half million dollar budget surplus but it should be better than three times that for the people were taxed $25,000,000 more this year as compared with $50,000,000 in the closing session of the Henry government.

Twenty-one million dollars was collected from the gasoline tax alone and close to $5,000,000 from the license of saloons. Mr. Hepburn's budget should be labelled the "moonshine" budget instead of the "sunshine" budget as he advocates, said Mr. Rowe emphatically declared in ending.

Dr. N. E. Welsh

"Protection of our public school system was the platform I was elected on." Dr. Harold Welsh, member of East Hastings, declared and the bill was amended by an 80-to-0 vote at the last session of the provincial parliament. Credit for the repeal of the assessment act should go to the Conservative party of Ontario," he said. "Premier Hepburn has never recovered since the battle of East Hastings," he contended, "because he upset the harmony of the talk that existed in the province. Hon. Leopold Macaulay's election from the Ontario East division was the greatest stand for British unity and democracy that the world has ever known." Dr. Welsh said.

"Ontario Department of Health has been asleep for the past two and a half years and it is in a very sorry state," the speaker charged, and remarked that Mr. Hepburn cut down the government hospital staffs and saved $40,000 in salaries but endangered people's lives in doing so.

Nothing has been done in mental institutions and they are overcrowded.

Some patients are forced to remain in bed all day while at New Toronto a number are sleeping on mattresses on the floors. An American doctor who recently surveyed the hospital situation reported they were badly neglected. At present 2,700 mental cases are waiting admittance into institutions, but owing to the shortage in the staff of doctors and nurses it will be impossible to accommodate them for sometime.

SHE DREADED GOING UPSTAIRS

Woman's Fear of Rheumatic Pains

One of the many troubles that afflict rheumatic sufferers is the difficulty of getting up and down stairs. Such was the case with this woman, before she started taking Kruschen, but now she finds it no trouble. Read what she says:—

"I have been taking Kruschen now for over 12 months, a half-teaspoonful in hot water first thing in the morning, and I feel a new woman. I had very painful rheumatism in my knees and back and also my head was getting very bad. I used to dread walking upstairs, now I am very thankful to say I have no trouble at all and I scarcely have any pains. I feel better in health than I have done for many years."—(Mrs.) G.M.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid. Other ingredients of Kruschen assist Nature to expel the dissolved acid from the system.

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

Their Majesties Have Many Pleasant Recollections of Their Australian Visit.

Fifteen thousand miles the Duke of York had travelled to open the new federal parliament buildings of the Dominion of Australia and the Duchess and his duchess received when the Renown steamed into Sydney Harbor attended by the pleasure the visit accorded the Dominion.

Sydney provided days of crowded official functions that were only the beginning of the four days that culminated in the impressive ceremony at Canberra, the new capital, on May 9, 1927. Balls and luncheons and dinners were interspersed with visits to the cities of Sydney and other cities visited during the tour, and to public gatherings that eagerly acclaimed the young prince and his duchess who showed so obviously their interest in the country and its people.

There was relaxation too, with the couple entering into the sports and amusements of the land and adapting their schedule, as much as possible in the short time at their disposal, and with the many cities to be visited, to every phase of Australian life. Their interest in the Dominion had not faded the years and today's pictures record a charming incident that recalls their Australian tour. For at the left, the Duke of York is shown when also along with the Duke, attended in an official capacity at the unveiling in Westminster Abbey of a bust to Adam Lindsay Gordon, the Australian poet and the first of his country to be so honored. The other picture records the informal drive through Sydney at the beginning of the 1927 tour. After the Canberra celebrations, when at the invitation of Mr. Stanley Bruce, Prime Minister of Australia, the Duke turned the key which opened the doors of the new and stately Parliament buildings, the Duke and his party set their course homeward.

He had passed another milestone in his career and had added a new page to history in the saga which leads to his coronation.

RADIO INSPIRES KNITTING SOCKS

Mrs. McClung Tells Some of Her Own Reactions

Winnipeg (CP)—"The middle-aged person doesn't like the amorous, glamorous love song on the radio—I've got Ho Hum, My Heart—while the youngsters don't want book reviews, which we like, so it's a case of give and take," said Mrs. Nellie L. McClung, telling the Women's Canadian Club about her work as a governor of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

It was a "great democracy" pointed out Mrs. McClung, in which everyone must be informed by radio in order that others could have lyrics, talks and speeches of their choice.

Radio had brought entertainment right into the home. "The girls stay at home and get their needle point done while they listen to their favorite programs and the men can read or smoke their pipes in peace," she declared, and remarked that Mr. Hepburn cut down the government hospital staffs and saved $40,000 in salaries but endangered people's lives in doing so.

BLUE FOR KHAKI CORONATION DAY

British Regiments Will Spruce Up For Event

London (CP)—Production of the new blue uniforms to be worn by troops at the Coronation is well under way. King Edward approved the uniform December 3, subject to a few minor alterations, and King George has recently approved the amended model.

The new uniform will be issued to regular line regiments and territorial troops of the British army. The Household Cavalry and Guards will continue to wear their existing uniforms and the rifle regiments will retain their dark green.

The new uniform may become the permanent ceremonial and walking-out uniform for the British army. It will not be worn in public until the Coronation. It is made of plain blue serge without facings on collars or cuffs and in a smart cut to fit the figure more closely than the khaki tunic. Buttons are brass.

Regimental facing colors will be worn on the cap and incorporated in the trouser stripe. Scottish regiments will also wear blue tunics, with navy at the front for wear with the kilt or trews.

Admiral Keyes Reminds Britain More Than Air Defence Needed

London (CP)—"Pacificism will not ensure peace unless you have got force behind it," declared Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes in urging a strong British navy in an address at King's College.

Replying to a recent declaration that air that was necessary for defence was an immense air force, the admiral declared: "Imperial defence is not as easy as that. The protection of London from being bombed and the ability to bomb other nations does not make for the security of the Empire."

The future of the Empire might be decided on the ocean hundreds of miles out of the range of aircraft, except those carried by the ships

TEACHING THE WORLD

The war in Spain is having effects far greater than any Spaniard ever intended, be he loyalist or rebel. Troops of different nations have tried themselves out and there has been a rush of soldiers of fortune to try their hand in the old game. Armies have been tried of every conceivable new kind and some of them have proven their qualifications for death-dealing and others no doubt will be abandoned. Some notions which have been held are being discarded, not old opinions but new ones, such as this that the modern infantryman is not so great a figure in the modern war. Spaniards continue to live in bombed cities, and it seems even plenty of planes cannot wipe out populations. In this war there are countless proofs of the value of infantry. Without it no army could do much, at least it could not reap the harvests of victory.

Soldiers of fortune used to have a fine time in the old roistering blustering days of other centuries. They had real experiences. In this war they have experiences but they may not last long. That is not so enjoyable. The war is too hot for many of them and they leave.

Indeed it will be a good day when the soldier of fortune is no more. A foreign soldier may have a high motive as when he goes because he agrees with the objects and aims of one side. But most soldiers of fortune just want the excitement of being in danger and in a fight. This class is not to be desired. They are against every modern peaceful effort of those agencies which are working for international peace.

THE TITANIC ANNIVERSARY

The Titanic marine disaster stands out indelibly on the minds of those who were growing up or were adult twenty-five years ago.

On Wednesday of last week the event was marked by the sound of a rifle volley and the dropping of a wreath on the spot where the greatest iceberg tragedy of all time occurred.

The cossigaard cutter Mendota's engines stood still, her church pennant was raised to the masthead and brief services were read over the spot where over 1500 persons were swallowed up in the water on the morning of April 15th, 1912. Each spring the Mendota and a sister-ship begin vigil against encroachments of icebergs, which are charted daily, their courses and their drift and their probable positions later are broadcast to ships at sea. The two cutters make the patrol in fifteen-day shifts. Not a like accident has occurred in the quarter of a century.

APPREHENSIONS OVER POPULATION

The greatest danger of the world today is an empty British Empire, declares the Bishop of London, Dr. Ingram. As an example he states that Canada wants 10,000,000 more Britishers to help it to prosperity. "If it can get them," His Lordship's remarks are made at a time when apprehension is being expressed by thinking people in the United Kingdom because of the declining birth rate. That this is no idle fancy is proven by a pamphlet entitled "The Future of Our Population" recently published by the Population Investigation Committee, a body of experts formed last fall to examine the situation in the British Isles. Included in the committee, of which Professor Carr-Saunders was chairman, were representatives of the Medical Research Council, the Royal Economic Society; the Society of Medical Officers of Health, and a number of other well-known medical and economic authorities. This body in its report examines, with the help of diagrams, the evidence for the view that the British population is destined, during the next 15 years, to enter a period of increasingly rapid decline. The conclusion is that there actually is cause for alarm.

For example, between 1838 and 1913, births on the average exceeded deaths by about 300,000 in each year. In 1934 the excess was only 120,000, "and by about 1940 there will probably be no excess at all." Furthermore, it is pointed out that in 1935 the children aged 1 to 14 constituted 23 per cent. of the inhabitants, and it is estimated that at present rate of decline, in 1965 they will constitute only 10 per cent., and in 1995 only 4.2 per cent. of the population. Medical, psychological, social and economic reasons considered responsible for the development are outlined, and there is little comfort in the record. If "wealth accumulates and men decay" in Great Britain and the other parts of the Empire, there will be a real danger, as the Bishop of London asserts.

While deaths are catching up with births in Britain, over on the Continent every effort is being made to increase the natural growth in population. The perils of such a situation are apparent and it is well that Church, medical and social authorities are drawing attention to the situation.—Montreal Gazette.

CORONATION SONNET
(John Masefield)

You stand upon the highway of the sea,
Wherein the ships, your children come and go
In splendor at the full of every flow,
Round to and from whatever ports may be.
Through this beginning reign, for years to come,
May fortune set your lot in happy times;
Your seaman saint still marking, with his chimes
Daily, some ship of yours returning home.
Though you are changed from all you were once beheld:
your the coral:
I can not think upon your might unstirred
O mystical city of the lost sea-bird
May wealth, out-sansoming the ports of Eld,
Be yours, with spiritual gold and holy laurel.

GRANDMA'S SULPHUR AND MOLASSES, SENNA TEA, LINDSEED MEAL, flaxseed, epsom salts, mustard plasters, goose oil and all the familiar home remedies handed down for generations before there was a doctor on every block, a clinic for babies once a week in the town hall, hospitals, and multiplicity of drug stores, were treated to kind words at a recent convention of physicians and surgeons in the United States—all of which goes to show that the wisdom of the ancients was not all moonshine. Plain simple remedies sufficed for the few ills of the days of our grandsires. They worked harder, lived simpler, went to bed earlier, had fewer operations and had the most of their infections. Modern life is strenuous, full of variety and volume, in our eating, clothing, home heating, dissipations, etc., and in consequence a variety of human ills have developed. Our grandsires lived in fashion normally and have to be supported by various potions, liver, kidney, and other organs go on the blink and it is no wonder that the panaceas, called patent medicines have developed by the thousands in variety. In this connection it is interesting to consider the once humble and retiring codfish which has given its liver to science and down through the years has attained honorable and useful standing in the community, rather than the shelf of the drug store. The cod is interesting, and besides providing food and employment for many fishermen and their families on the bleak and rock-bound coast of Labrador and wherever it contributed materially to the health of the nations, as witness the following anthology of the cod compiled by a bright editorial seeker after the unusual in George Graham's newspaper, the Brockville Recorder and Times, from a statistics furnished by the External Trade Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, a strange place to seek edible and readable editorial comments:

"During the spring months, anxious mothers there are chasing their offspring about, and occasionally Dad, with a bottle and spoon. Not so long ago the dose may have been sulphur and molasses, at the present time it is more likely to be vitamin A or D prepared in a palatable preparation, or better still, a capsule. One gallon and there is the equivalent of four or five teaspoonfuls of cod liver oil neatly deposited where it will do the most good.

"The cod is a cold water fish which appears annually in enormous shoals off the coasts of northern countries. As early as the 17th century, "trayne oyle" or cod liver oil was shipped in considerable quantities from Newfoundland to English ports. Although its use was for technical purposes chiefly, it was known that several Arctic races used it for food. It was not until the beginning of this century that the vitamin content was discovered.

"The early method of extracting the oil was to expose the livers to the atmosphere and let them rot. The action of decay destroyed the cell walls of the liver, freeing the oil. The oil so produced was brown, dirty and decidedly disagreeable, both as to taste and smell.

"The process is very different today. As soon as the fish is caught the liver is extracted, washed and examined. Every effort is made to extract the oil immediately and for this reason some of the trawlers carry equipment to render the oil while they are still at sea. Fish caught inshore are rushed to the collecting stations to be treated. The oil is extracted by steam cooking which breaks down the cell structure, freeing the pale or light yellow oil which has only a slightly fishy smell.

"Canada produced 61,000 gallons of medicinal cod liver oil in 1935 valued at $38,000. The exports of cod liver oil amounted to about 100,000 gallons valued at $7,000 and the imports to 330,000 gallons in 1935 valued at $229,000.

On Getting Up

"I forgot who it was, writes, Somerset Maugham, "that recommended as the best thing for getting up each day two things they distilled: it was a wise man, and it is a precept that I have followed scrupulously, for every day I have got up and I have gone to bed." Although going to bed requires decision and is often unnatural, it is not a heroic act like getting up. The day includes twenty-four hours with noon the lowest it is a half-way mark between mere sloth and absolute abandon, but getting up in the day is late enough to make getting up easy. Although thousands—perhaps millions—of people get up regularly every morning without complaint, they are simply creatures of habit or necessity. "Oh, how I hate to get up in the morning," the old estate agent says. "It's time to get up in the morning," Harry Lauder used to sing, "but it's nicer to lie in bed." It certainly is. Getting up cannot compare with lying in bed.

It is observable that small children run, they have had very little experience with life, can get up early, jump once or twice and then plunge cheerfully into the before-breakfast run. Long before their parents have made the first tentative decision of the day the children are performing miracles of agility. Grandpa, also, get up quickly, appear to be fully awake and have no regrets, possibly because they know they are not that they will nap on the porch or under the curtain, and sometimes all day. But grown folk with mature minds who know that getting up is only a preparation for having to work are frequently attacked by distress when they first open their eyes. The day looks positively dangerous. "I sets well and I sleeps ance of age.

Superstition plays its part in the games of youth, too, and certain varieties of material were considered lucky and unlucky in the military.

Besides games which depended on expenditure for luck, boogie, jacks and so on, have found much satisfaction in playing with cherry stones, metal buttons, bone dice, nuts (or "conkers") and even ordinary stones, and mothers of the period, having thrown away a collection of such "rubbish" taken from junior's pockets, found it hard to sympathize with his subsequent grief. It is really that they had robbed him of a fortune.

However, it was not difficult for him to set himself up again, and in a few days his wealth would be reinvested, though possibly he still would sigh for the vanished hoard. There seems to be no chance that games will be revived and probably grown-ups are all the better for it that they have disappeared.

Ticat was a fruitful source of broken windows; the enthusiastic flinger of a whip top was not too careful to avoid lashing the passers-by, and marbles had to thread their way through groups of boys playing "ring taw" without a casualty of other games.

It has to be hoped that youth will outgrow its present obsession for gambling to be "public enemy number one."

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning I was washing my hands and pop was shaving his face, saying. By golden I'm glad I'm not going to university. of your mother's wedding, to say nothing of mine. Well well, this is the first time in years I've had a chance to see you mean, pop, dom she have one every year? This isn't any legal holiday, is it? she said, and pop said, I suppose it isn't to be. I'll give you a little hint. It's not the date alexander Grahe became engaged to Pocahontas and it's not the date Columbus left with the national holiday to celebrate the wedding of Guy Fawkes and Mary Queen of Scots.

It's no good telling me what it's not for I said, ma said. Which reminds me, exactly 2 months from today will be our wedding anniversary, I said, and pop said, Yee gods.

Meeting is never escape, and ma said, Yes, time flies, doesn't it?

Nothing ells but, pop said. The 19th of June, you don't think I'd forget that date, do you? I said, and ma said, What special date is it today?

O, today, the 2nd eruption of Mount Vesuvius, pop said.

And he took out his notebook and wrote something in it, properly being June the 19th.

Games Boys Once Played

The modern boy's repertoire of games seems to consist extensively of acting hold-ups. The players are divided into those who are armed with toy pistols of various makes (some quite realistic) while the inexpert bleating of lambs, but which are intended to represent the rattle of machine guns.

The boys themselves probably are not to blame for this lack of variety and imagination, for the games of earlier generations have died out for the good by players, and the automobile has robbed them of the highway, lane, pond, hole and bore and even bottoms and alleys are almost forgotten, while flies are seldom seen.

It was and still is, a mystery how boys knew when the season for the marbles had arrived; but one game would suddenly, as regularly as the seasons, and any plaything having no more until the following year.

It was essential, too, in connection with boys' games that none of the apparatus used should appear to be new. There is a feeling with many combats was preferred to the brand-new cut-and-carve, and for this reason a new ball, bat or other article was handled as roughly as possible so as to give it an appear-

Tastes Boys, Girls Studied

Girls like mathematics, poisons and musical pictures; boys like history, potatoes and mystery movies. A majority of girls would like to be private secretaries; but boys, in the main, would be newspaper men.

These are the findings of a child preference survey made by the Children's Welfare Federation. Through questionnaires sent to the camps conducted by the 182 organizations, reaching 110,000 boys and girls, which make up the federation, an effort has been made to discover the tastes and talents of youngsters. From this information a more successful program of camp activities can be planned, it was said by Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, president of the federation.

In the field of sports, the survey showed that swimming was a leader among girls and baseball among boys. Adventure and mystery books were at the top of the reading list for both girls and boys.

When it comes to hobbies, boys go in for collecting stamps, autographs and "junk," in perspective order. Thirty-one per cent. of the girls had no hobby, according to the questionnaire, but with those who did, dancing was the most popular.

To the question: "Do you play any musical instrument?" large percentages in both groups replied 'no.' This was the answer of 79 per cent. of the girls and 70 per cent. of the boys. The piano was the favorite instrument, with violin coming second, and, for the boys, the saxophone was third.

Spikeball holds a surprisingly strong place in vegetable honors, followed closely by celery for girls and lettuce for boys.

Second choice in career ambitions is given to that of aviator by boys and actress by girls. —Christian Science Monitor.

It Wouldn't Work Now

In these days we hear considerable regarding shorter hours of work and more pay for those employed in our great commercial and industrial enterprises. The modern employer of labor considers the welfare of the workers; assisting to provide for their entertainment and amusement, protecting his health and his life by providing sanitary and safe factory conditions, and in other ways demonstrating the humanist spirit.

But it was not always thus.

Our attention has been drawn to an interesting document which was brought to light recently in connection of the eightieth anniversary of Calson, Pirie, Scott and Co., store of Chicago. The store was established in the first store of the company used to destroy the old building the "Good Old Days" as far as workers are concerned. Here are the rules which the employees were said to obey eighty years ago:

"Store must be open from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. the year round.

"Store must be swept; counters, base shelves and showcases dusted. Lamps trimmed, filled and chimneys cleaned; pens made; doors and windows opened; a pail of water, a bucket of coal and kindling wood before breakfast (if there is time to do so) and attend to customers who call.

"Store must not be opened on the Sabbath unless necessary, and then only for a few minutes.

"The employee who is in the habit of smoking Spanish cigars, getting shaved at the barber's, going to dances and other places of amusement will surely forfeit the employer reason to be suspicious of his integrity and honesty.

"Each employee must not pay less than $3.00 per year to the church of his choice, and attend Sunday school regularly.

Men employees are given one evening a week for courting and two if they go to prayer meeting.

"After 14 hours of work in the store, the leisure time should be spent most in reading."—Chatham News.

Buffalo Bill's Win

Buffalo Bill Cody, it seems, once won the whole town of Deadwood South Dakota, in a poker game.

That's the story old-timers of the town have been telling about Wild Bill And Burgess Rice of Portland, Ore., is willing to back the story up with his own version.

Rice says he ought to know: It was B. W. Rice, his father, who was on the losing end of the game.

The elder Rice, according to the 50-year-old story, was owner of the saloon where group of Western Pennsylvania frontiersmen played poker. He also owned the frontier town's one hotel, several stores and two mule-pack trains.

Buffalo Bill had been wandering had on that day. His pairs and four card flushes refused to be helped. Another player, who owned a ranch, insists was Buffalo Bill, was having a run of phenomenal luck. He always filled, even when he drew to straights, were open in the middle. Rice was stripped of cash. Finally he drew a pat hand. He opened with a diamond ring. All the Cody dropped out.

"I'm flat," Rice said. "But I'll bet the saloon on this little hand."

"I'll make you enough to include the hotel," said Buffalo Bill.

Rice was puzzled. He studied his hand. Then he went Cody one better.

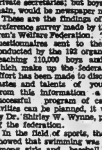
"I'll up it enough to include the shacks and the two mule teams."

Cody smiled.

Rice laid down his hand—a pair, two, four, five and six of hearts.

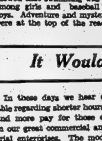
"That's a good hand," Cody is reported to have said. "But not good enough."

Cody spread out his cards—ace, king, queen, jack and ten of spades. Buffalo Bill raked the cards in for all the royal flush on the draw.



Rice blew up. He roared. He swore. He got up from the deck of and vowed never to play again.

Finally Frank Winch, Cody's biographer, doubts that the winner of the famous game was Buffalo Bill. Winch says there is no record that Cody ever gave up stakes as big as the legendary Deadwood game.



"But if he did play," Winch said, "it would be safe to say that Buffalo Bill won the long standing from the top of the deck. No one ever accused Cody of being crooked at cards."

FINAL BREAK SEEN WITH LEWIS

Expulsion of 'Rebel' Unions May be Made Complete

Washington, Apr. 19 (AP)—Members of the Executive Council of Labor Executive Council said today the group was near the point of breaking finally and above altogether with John L. Lewis' rival Committee for Industrial Organization.

Frank E. Morrison, A. F. of L. Secretary, said it was probable the council session opening today would move for expulsion of the Lewis "rebel" unions. That would be done by fixing a time and place for a special federationist convention to ratify last year's suspension of the groups.

The ostensible purpose of the council meeting, however, was to discuss a general organizing campaign and the situation created by the decision of the National Labor Relations Act by the U. S. Supreme Court.

CAR FOUND ABANDONED ALSO LICENCE PLATES

Complete mystery attends the finding of the Oshawa automobile plates and an abandoned Studson car in Bellrock Valley today, police admitted at noon. Mr. Ernest Hurrell reported the discovery and finding of two automobile license plates on his property early this morning. The plates were issued to Ontario 3-46, were later identified as having been purchased by a Mr. Thomas McCullough, Shadow Road, and had subsequently been torn off an automobile and left on Mr. Moock's property. Directly on the spot where the plates were found, however, Mr. R. G. Wilkins, gas house employee, reported an abandoned automobile on William Street, and this was the property of Mr. McCullough.

Police investigations later revealed, that the abandoned motor car was a Studson sedan, 1929 model, and also that it had been freshly painted. It was of a dark blue Studson sedan. The license plates that had been found were issued in 1936 to model Chevrolet, owned by Mr. McCullough, who had not been informed by police that his plates were missing.

Police are of the opinion, that the car abandoned on William Street left in Belleville, but the license plates were purchased or were also stolen from Mr. McCullough, following which the license plates found in Bellrock Valley were abandoned on his property by the car thieves. No prisoners as the theft or either car were received by the police, however.

EDEN, HOARE

not understand that," Eden replied.

The present situation, Adamson rejoined, might involve British ship owners in difficulties with Italy. What action was the government taking to see that British shipping was protected on the high seas?

Viscount Cranborne, president of the Board of Trade, replied to a question, said four British ships recently had been attacked by submarines.

"If British ships can come out safely, what is the government doing in," demanded Clement Attlee, Labor leader.

Question of Escort.

"Is the master of a British ship entitled to defend himself?" questioned Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal opposition leader.

Sir Samuel Hoare: "No, sir! Shipping is definitely discouraged from performing."

This brought ironic cheers from the opposition.

Sir Samuel repeated that British warships were under instructions to use submarines "in the territorial ships attacked on the high seas British ships have the right of visit to stay at St. Jean De Luz. The Italian ambassador has been here to Bilbao as the naval authorities considered it unsafe to proceed. British naval officers have been here in fact to blockade had been established which appeared effective.

Maintenance of Blockade.

Commander Reginald Fletcher, Labor: "Has the government received a report on the means whereby this effective blockade is being maintained?"

Sir Samuel Hoare: "By insurgent ships and mines."

The case of the British freighter Thorpe Hall was brought up. This ship was held up by insurgent vessels off the north coast of Spain August 6. British destroyers answered her call for assistance and escorted her to Bilbao.

Did this not show Adamson questioned, that they admiralty had changed its policy in now turning the other cheek? Silence.

Sir Samuel Hoare: "No. It shows we are protecting our ships on the high seas."

INCOME TAX RISE BRITISH FORECAST

Three Pence Per Pound Increase Expected in Budget

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 19.—(CP Cable)—Neville Chamberlain, in the House of Commons, tomorrow will present his third budget as Chancellor of the Exchequer and as the Statute book, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin as Prime Minister.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer will have to budget for an estimated expenditure of $865,000,000 (£4-306,000,000), which is an increase of £57,000,000 over the last budget. The defence services alone call for an expenditure of £197,000,000. In addition to £80,000,000 from borrowed money.

The probabilities are that, as was the case last year, the income tax will be raised 3d in the pound. That would bring it to five shillings in the pound or 25 per cent, the rate imposed during the dark days of the Canadian Budget. Higher taxes on gasoline and a tax on cosmetics are suggested as possibilities. A reduction in the exemption limit from £125 to £1,500 per annum is similarly suggested.

In view of last year's leakage, which led to the resignation of J. H. Thomas from the cabinet, special precautions have been taken to prevent a repetition. Today the chancellor's ministerial colleagues will not see the budget until 4 p.m. tomorrow, an hour before the official budget speech

DRAMA

"THE GATE TO HAPPINESS"

Produced by Cast From Paller

"The Gate to Happiness," a three-act drama was presented by a cast from Paller, under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of the Presbyterian Church. Because of the showery day the early evening the attendance was small but made a very appreciative audience who enjoyed the many interchanges of subtle wit. Amusement was also afforded in the dress and able interpretation of their parts by Rev. Mr. Blain, Cecil Coy and Aunt Sarah. In every case the characters were well chosen and very capably filled their roles.

The dress was modern. There was but one stage setting, the late of the Coy residence situated between Mr. Bonnie and Miss Jenny's wonderful flower garden. The back wall of the stage was bordered by a fence which separated the lawn from the street. . .

The story is of the reformation in the Coy household by the daughter, Cecil, who returned home good on the New York "musical comedy" stage. Complications were added by the prejudice of the village people and, the family to conceal her connection with the home by giving out the statement that she was teaching school. Comedy is added by the triangle element between Stephen Blair, Eden Coy, and her New York admirer, Rex Curtis. During the second and third acts a visit is made to the city and results in Rex's limp being cured. Cecar being the prejudice of the village people

AT THE BELLE

Simone Simon and James Stewart Star in "Seven Sinners"

Scene from Romance of "Seventh Heaven"

The honors in "Seventh Heaven" ... and there are plenty of them for this romance ... are divided pretty evenly between the tremendously moving picturization, and the big, tenderest romance of our time, and the fine cast that is emerging fully as actress destined to be known as the greatest star on the screen ... Simone Simon, co-starred with James Stewart in the Twentieth Century-Fox production coming to the Belle tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday, matinee daily.

Another strongly dramatical love story, adapted from the stage play successfully directed by John Golden, presents again that star-crossed pair of lovers, Diane and Chico, who lift your heart to the sky.

Simone Simon as the little waif, Diane, surpasses all hopes expressed for this sensational French screen find, who has the strange gift of touching the deepest places of your heart. And James Stewart, tall, laughing, gray-eyed ... shines opposite as Chico with the same spirit and the sky, yearning love.

For the background of "Seventh Heaven," Austin Strong has made it has re-created a vivid and picturesque Montmartre of the latter quarter days of 1914. In the huge, subterranean Paris sewer, the cellar of the working day, scornful of the providence that failed, first, to make him a decent father, and second, to bring him a fine intelligent wife.

Chico saves the waif, Diane, from a beating, and also from Gendarmes who would arrest her for throwing wine in the face of a cafe customer who annoyed her. To do this, he has to pose as Diane's husband, and the Gendarmes announce that they will check up on him.

Forced to live up to his story, Chico takes Diane to his garret, where the vista of the stars at night makes him forget the day-long toil in the sewer. When war breaks out, and Chico is called to the army, he realizes that he is in love with the waif he befriended, and pleads to return to her in spirit at eleven o'clock every day.

Despite news of Chico's death, Diane keeps faithful to her vow, a faith that leads to one of the most touching and beautiful moments in a powerful conclusion to the tender love story of our time.

Also on the program Raitoff, Gale Sondergaard (Academy Award winner), 7.20 and 9.10.

Awarded Gold Medal

"Fire Over England," the Alexander Korda production to be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times, has been awarded the League of Nations Gold Medal for the best picture of the year.

"Fire Over England," scored an emphatic hit before three large audiences at the Belle on Saturday who applauded it roundly.

Flora Robson, Laurence Olivier, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Banks, Raymond Massey and Wilfrid Lawson head a large imposing cast. The Belle News, a smart musical review, and a clever comedy short rounds out complete the program. Two complete shows will be presented at 7.10 and 9.10. "Fire Over England," begins at 3.00, 7.40 and 9.45 p. m.

WEMBLEY LIONS HAS MORE FINISH AROUND THE NETS

Win First Game From Hershey B'Ars on Saturday 6-3

GRABOSKI SCORES

Bears Have an Edge in Centreice Checking

Toronto, April 19—(CP)—Newly crowned Canadian Junior Hockey Champions, Winnipeg Monarchs go hunting bigger game tonight, but the little fellows will be bolstered with five recruits for their clash with Wembley Lions in the second game of the Round-Robin International Series.

The game will be a meeting of the home forces, for the Lions, who defeated Hershey's Bears 6-3 in the first game Saturday night, present Wembley with their entire lineup. And three experienced Winnipeggers played on the Monarch team of 1935 that won everything in sight in its tour of Europe that winter.

The scoring lines, that brought Wembley the championship of England's National League this year proved a little too good for the leaders of the Eastern Canada Senior league. While the Bears had the edge in centreice checking, scoring the Lions had not encountered before. But, in the fast game of hockey, they hadn't quite the finish around the nets of the English champions.

Murphy Gets Three

Three goals by Edgar Murphy, who is a Montreal boy and one of the other Canadian stars used to play hockey in Ottawa, and a goal apiece by Ted Graboski, Alex Archer and Jo-Jo Grabouki, proved too much for the Bears to overcome. They tried hard. Harry Frost scoring two and Jerry Cormier one. Every goal but Graboski's was scored in the third period.

Wembley will be the International schedule, the Bears run up against Winnipeg Monarchs tonight. The Tigers won the Allan Cup last Friday night, defeating North Bradford Rovers in the fifth and final game of that series.

The Monarchs play the Bears Wednesday night and take on the Tigers the following night in a double-header to be the highlight of the six-game series. Next Saturday night, Sudbury comes to Lions. The two teams with the greatest number of points then will meet in a best-of-three game setu for the series title.

Monarchs Skate Copper Cliff Into Ice to Win 7-0 Taking Memorial Cup to the West

Keen Competition in West Playdowns Reason For Win

McCREEDY STARS

Redmen Muffed Big Chance to Win in First Period

By WILLIAM H. DUNSDAY

Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Toronto, April 18—(CP)—Keenest of competition in western playdowns, today was offered as the big reason Winnipeg Monarchs smashed astride Copper Cliff's mighty Redmen for the Dominion junior hockey crown. Coach Harry Neil said his boys didn't relish it at the time but are glad now the going was so tough out west.

Hitting the peak of their form here Saturday afternoon, the purple-shirted Manitobans stated Redmen into the ice as they piled up a 7-3 decision. It marked the end of a stiff four-game struggle, but Neil did not think his boys were pressed any more than in three series they contested out west.

"We had to battle like Hades to earn this trip each and anilin' Harry. "In three different rounds before winning the Western title things stood black for us more than once but we had just enough edge to get through. On the other hand the Copper Cliff club seemed to have it easy down here."

Three Teams All Tough

Portage La Prairie, St. Boniface Seals and Saskatoon Wesleys all presented squads, that pushed Monarch to the limit before submitting defeat in series, each of which went the limit. Neil figures that if Redmen had that kind of opposition before the finals they may have "an even tougher proposition."

Neil had words of praise for each of the game youngsters, that won three straight from Redmen after losing the first fixture. He coached Monarch to the Memorial Cup in 1936 and the experienced trio of year gave Western Canada an edge in International junior competition with 19 successes to the east's nine.

After Monarchs try their luck in the international tournament against the world's best senior teams here, they will take the Memorial Cup to Winnipeg. It was held by the West Toronto Nationals who defeated Saskatoon Wesleys in the finals last year but did not ice a team this season.

Clubs Well Balanced

Neil pointed to his club's fine balance as one reason for their victory. Out of 36 scoring spots registered in four games, his first-string forward line accounted for 12 goals and 11 assists; his second line three goals and six assists and his defence three goals and seven assists.

Johnny McCready, who led Monarchs with four goals in Saturday's rout, led the team in point getting. The sniping ace will be left off eight goals and two assists, one more point than gained by little Dick Kowcinak, with two goals and seven assists. Jeff Whitney anipers around above Alf Webster and Bert Heximer, Redmen's leaders.

Copper Cliff's big chance came in the first period, when they outplayed the Westerners and muffed two perfect scoring chances. Both arcks took the lead early in the second period and led by the end of the frame, adding four more in the third period, while holding Redmen scoreless.

Lorimer Martin, Paul Rheault and Remi Vandale completed Monarchs' total. Jack Shewchuck, playing with a helmet due to a head injury suffered in last Wednesday's game, was again Copper Cliff's big gun. He was so effective Coach Mazie Silverman moved him to centre ice late in the final period.

Scoring figures:	G.	A.	Pts.
McCreedy, Monarchs	4	2	6
Kowcinak, Monarch	2	7	9
Langelle, Monarchs	3	3	6
Fox, Monarchs	2	3	5
Webster, Redmen	3	1	4
Heximer, Redmen	3	1	4
Pike, Monarchs	3	2	5
Zake, Redmen	2	1	3
Martel, Monarchs	1	3	4
Hamill, Redmen	2	1	3
McCreary, Redmen	1	2	3
Vandale, Monarchs	1	0	1

OLD and NEW

By George H. Carver

'Twas a glorious celebration staged by the Detroit Redwings on Thursday night following their victory over the Gotham Bums for their second successive Stanley Cupship. The boys and a number of their admirers went gaga in a downtown hotel until early morning . . . The battered old mug occupied the centre of the table with sparkling champagne bubbling to the brim . . . And they do say that the giggle-water was plentiful.

Lester Patrick hovered in the background with goblets of the foaming liquid with which to celebrate lifted his schnoozle from the cup lip, the mug was filled again to overflowing . . . 'Twas daylight on the Detroit river, when the revelers and their followers sought the roost.

Big "Jawn" Adams got so excited during the series took the Rangers that he promptly flopped over in a dead faint . . . . . But there was Jawn, Saturday night . . . The boys "brung him to" and the loquacious backbone of Detroit's champions was himself again in a short time. . . .

And the boys down in Edmonton—Napanee to you—likewise celebrated in real fashion, when the news, that Adams' team had garnered the Allan Cup . . . Adams hails from Napanee is very popular with the folks in Percy Gilbord's ballwick, and the gang was behind him to a man. . . . Hundreds of telegrams bearing Napanee dateline went Detroitwards following the victory. . . .

The British Lion twisted the tail feathers of the American Eagle on Saturday night when the Wembley squad romped on Canada, down back the Hershey Bars by a count, 4-0 . . . And one of the best players on the ice, according to some of the local lads, who saw the games was none other than Jo-Jo Gratkoski. . . . The former Oshawa and Brockville star showed a lot more pep and assists in three others. . . . The wispy player has lost none of his skill and cunning the boys say, and stood out with this splendid work in the pivot position. . . .

The Winnipeg Monarchs proved beyond the slightest shadow of a doubt, in the Memorial Cup series, that team was the pick of the Canadian junior hockeyists, when they buried Mazie Silverman' Copper Cliff Redmen beneath an avalanche of seven goals to one in single return. . . . The Peggers swept through the Northern defence with consummate ease with five markers coming from the magic stick of Johnny McCreevy.

Tommy Farr, British heavyweight champion, whose whipping left fielded Maxie Baer out of the pugilistic picture in his alleged comeback, is all in line for the title plums which the California larruper, had his lads set out for himself. . . . The latest move from the United State promoters is to offer the Englishman a crack at Max Schmeling, one of the German heavyweight Walter Neusels, who has been causing surprises Maxie, himself and the boxing world in general by making the German say "uncle" when the right in line for a smack at the title. . . .

And by so doing, he will be pulling British boxing back on a scale it has not enjoyed since Jimmy Wilde was crowned King of the Bantams. . . .

American sports writers are indulging in their annual pre-season pastime of picking the final standings. . . . Practically all of them are wrong. The vast majority, in fact practically all of the baseball experts agree in line pick the Yanks and the Cards to head their different divisions. . . . Cleveland also the experts of Young Bob Feller is accorded a chance high in the first division of the American League, with the Chicy Reds ensconced in the lots of favor in the National Loop . . . batting power of the Yanks, the expert opine, will blast through to the championship, while the Deadly Dealing by Lon Warneke are expected to lead the Gashousers to the pennant. . . . .

RED WINGS JUBILANT OVER VICTORY IN STANLEY CUP SERIES

First Divisions in Both Leagues Crowded if Predictions True

All Managers Sure Their Charges Will be in Front

FEUDS OPEN

By SID FEDER

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, April 19—(AP)—The first divisions on both sides of the big league baseball fence are going to be crowded, when they post the final standings next September, if you take the word of most of the managers directing the show.

Making their pre-battle statements a few hours before the curtain lifted on the 1937 season today in Washington and Boston, the pilots, with a few exceptions, figured their respective clubs couldn't miss one-two-three-four.

There appeared too many first division selections and too few positions to go 'round.

Jack Adams of Detroit, is pictured as Frank Calder, president of the N.H.L. presents him with the cup. Doug Young and Herbie Lewis are also seen, in that order next to manager Jack. As can be seen from the expression on their faces the Detroiters were happy over their second championship.

For the second straight year the Detroit Red Wings have captured the National Hockey League championship, and thereby coveted Stanley Cup. This year, although badly crippled with injuries, they successfully defeated the thirsty Canadiens in a five-game series and went on to meet New York Rangers. The New Yorkers had decisively defeated both Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens in straight games and were considered the surprise package of the NHL, what they met the Red Wings. BURLEIGH GRIMES HAS HARDEST JOB OF ALL MANAGERS

First Year With Dodgers Will Either Make or Break Him

STENGEL IN CLOVER

Gets $15,500 For Just Sitting on The Sidelines

By PAUL MICKELSON (Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, April 19—(AP)—Impressed with the fact that no big baseball leaguers parade to the post for their annual diamond derbies . . .

Hardest job . . . . Burleigh Grimes gets the nod. In his first year as pilot of Brooklyn Dodgers, old Burleigh aims to remove all signs of daffiness from the Flatbush lads and to lift them into first division. If Burleigh succeeds in that many of his aims, he'll be a wonder.

Easiest job . . . . Jimmy Casey Stengel, the man Grimes succeeded as maestro of the Flatbush Follies. Hired with a contract one year to run, Casey will get $15,500 for just sitting. That's more than what Grimes will get for working and worrying.

Busiest manager . . . . . Chuck Dressen, head man of the hustling Cincinnati Reds. Chuck will be busy if the Giants, Cardinals, Pirates and Cubs are still in the National league.

Quietest manager . . . . . Joseph Vincent Louis Gerard Gazella Dahlgren Yankee.

Toughest ball club . . . . . The St. Louis Cardinals have the reputation and are proud of it, but don't be misled. The one big "question mark" of baseball is Cincinnati Reds, who have made feeds cooking today as any three clubs.

Oldest star . . . . . Jesse (Pop) Haines will be a mere old next July, but he's still pitching. He's the Grandpappy of the game. He started tossing 'em for Dayton in 1914.

Youngest star . . . . . Robert Andrew Feller, 18-year-old kid wonder of Cleveland is the pitcher-in-law. Clark Griffith of Washington, to mention one pilot.

Highest salaried player . . . . . Lou Gehrig, home run hitter of the Yankees, who gets $39,000 a year. Mickey Cochrane, Detroit manager, makes the same amount however, with bonuses and sidelines.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Jack Corcoran, Canada's outstanding sports promoter and his shadow, George H. Harris, were in Belleville over the week end and completed arrangement to hold wrestling bouts in the Belleville Arena, under the sponsorship of the Queensbury A.C. of Toronto. Jack had a "lighter" card all arranged for the Maple Leaf Gardens on April 23rd with Henry Grabler, the man of many legs, Ted Keys, California football notable, Ollie Olsen and other top-notchers all signed, when this world's amateur hockey series loomed on the horizon and the hockey moguls were given the Gardens. This card right in our alley as Matchmaker Corcoran is going to transfer his proposed Maple Leaf Garden show to the Belleville Arena for Thursday night of this week.

"If we don't produce the greatest wrestling exhibition ever staged in Eastern Ontario, it won't cost the Belleville fans a red cent and we'll leave town at our own expense," remarked Mr. Corcoran when in town. "We'll bring in wrestlers who have only recently appeared in Madison Square Garden and in Boston, the greatest wrestling city in the world. Right at the moment I can't give you the title and name of each grappler, every wrestler to be a top-notcher," promised Mr. Corcoran on Saturday night. Belleville fans are also clamoring for good wrestling for some time as here's the only opportunity knocking right at our door. Jack Corcoran is also presenting amateur boxing bouts and if the sport-loving fraternity does not display the interest in attendance at the wrestling matches, Mr. Corcoran may take a fling at staging professional boxing show at the Arena at some future date.

Sport has been practically dormant since the Belleville Redmen won the O.H.A. championship and needless to say the fans should welcome the wrestlers with open arms. Belleville has been deprived of an outstanding card we know from well enough to take that old word. Nowadays there is no use trying to kid the sporting public, they know their sport and when a top-notch card is presented, whether they are appearing in New York, Sea, Boston, Belleville or Timbuctoo. We feel assured that when the card is announced the public will rally to the call and Mr. Corcoran intends to keep his promise.

The champion Percival softball club, intermediate "A" titleholders of O.A.B.A., will take to the diamond for their initial workout of the season Tuesday eve at the Collegiate grounds. The ranks of the Percivals have been raided and considerably strengthened by other local softball organizations, only leaving four of their 1936 champion roster available. The field is open and we have to use all seniors and juveniles," declared the champ stenorite today. Other local baseballers will doubtlessly follow the Percivals and call early practices, as the local Softball Association expects to commence the season's campaign on Tuesday, May 4th.

Residing in Belleville of a recent date is J. R. Richards, former Toronto and St. Catharines lacrosse enthusiast. The local gutted-stick executive would be well advised to include Mr. Richards on their advisory board as he has had a world of experience with such successful lacrosse clubs as the Tecumseths of Toronto, the old Torontos and St. Catharines. Incidentally the lacrosse sticks for the school boys will be available about the middle of the week.

Negotiations to have the Ogdensburg Colts and the Perth Royals of the Canadian-American Professional Baseball League, play a postseason exhibition ball game in Belleville on May 12th have been opened, we understand. The "Can-Am," long season crowd the 15th of next month, with some of the clubs now in spring training down south. The clubs will be equipped with pre-season games and the Belleville fans on the season of the Coronation Day being a holiday, should turn out when Belleville meets Perth, here against Knotty Lou's Ogdensburg club should prove quite a drawing card as the Perth club has a working agreement with both the Boston Braves and Boston Red Sox, while Lou is negotiating with Cincinnati to have the Reds rub his back in Belleville, when the Colts were should draw well in Belleville. The Belleville baseball fraternity can hardly forget Fred Ferry, then world's amateur fistic champion, of the gold standard, when Ferry knocked York for England two years ago today. Ferry was considered a professional contracts that would net him $10,000 and would play for King and country for one baseball season, anyway. Later he turned pro and is reaping a harvest of American dollars.

Although some really good hockey prevailed the opening game of the playoffs amateur hockey tournament, at Toronto, was a financial flop, about twenty-five hundred taking in Saturday night's game which saw Hamilton Lions, champions of the English League, meet the Kirkland Lake-Lake Shore Gold Miners, who were visiting Toronto with the title belt weak Jo Jo Gratkoski, perennial all-star, and a host of other ice player new with the Lions, and quite possible the . English team were given a real run for their money before series and sweep the province. Gratkoski and Gratz quite handily "When we had our first game against the Hamilton boys," "Dynamite" Joe Primeau said, "we didn't have a chance" added Joey.

Congratulations to a great junior hockey club, the Winnipeg Monarchs, today Memorial Cup champions and junior champions of Canada, for they have proved their superiority in winning three straight, after losing the initial game of the series, over the Copper Cliff Redmen. Too fast afoot and with a smooth-working attack, the representation the Monarch were too good. The Manitobans were drawn against the powerful Wembley Lions in their first game of the present week's amateur tournament last night. There are those who hold that the Monarch should be permitted to play a one hundred per cent Winnipeg team and not be forced to accept additional players in an effort to bolster them up. Even Toronto fans are of the opinion that the Monarchs can stake their pass with the best amateurs in the business. Tonight will see the Lions, however, when they meet the Lions.

DAILY SHORT STORY

The Tradition Held Good

By Clarissa Mackie

The old Frost house stood, in its majestic loneliness, on the flats hill beyond the Methodist church. In years past by, the Frost family had been very prominent in Littleside—the men had been lawyers, and the real family tradition might have been called nobility.

War came and took toll of the Frost young men. Judge Frost and his good wife, both died during that period, and an only daughter, who had been a nurse in Flanders, had returned to her empty home to be married to an Englishman's army officer. Then locking up the home, she gave it into the keeping of Rose Frost, a distant cousin, who lived nearby, and sadly said farewell to the ladies of Littleside.

We have never heard from our Jock's Rose. It we were convinced of his death, something could be done with the house; but if you will look after it—perhaps some day, Jock will come home again."

No one believed that Jock Frost would come home again. And yet one morning his far-away cousin Rose awoke to find him in her blue eyes and with a thrill in her heart.

"I just have a feeling that Jock may come back to-day, and I'm never do to ignore the family tradition and let him knock and get no answer. So I'll just toil mother at breakfast, if she does not need me; I will get right away and get ready for Jock." So Rose, brighter than usual, addressed her mother.

"I do not need you, Rosy, and you may take Hester if you want her. There is not very much to do today, I think."

So Rose and Hester spent the day working in the big house. At five o'clock the two women could say that the house was ready for any returned wanderer, or any ancestral guest that might appear.

There were pleasant fires burning on the hearths, and the glow of lamplight and firelight sparkled on the brightly polished window panes. In the small sitting room was a gaddie table spread with a linen cloth on which were placed the old Chelsea china and polished old silver.

"You must be terrible sure, Miss Rose," said Hester.

"I do feel sure Hester," said Rose confidently, "and for that reason I am going home to change my dress. I will be back in an hour."

"If anybody comes, Miss Rose, there ain't much for 'em to eat," contended Hester.

"I will bring something over—perhaps Sam will kill a chicken and I will bring a loaf of fresh bread."

Hester hurried around during the absence of her young mistress and had a good fire in the kitchen range when Rose returned with a big basket. "Mother has put in all sorts of good things Hester, and I know that she thinks I'm crazy!"

"She thought you was crazy the night you dressed up and thought you was robbing the hen roost — and when your pa and Sam went out sure enough they caught that furriner from the river bottom—remember?"

"Yes, indeed," laughed Rose, for her laughter ceased and the front door knocker sounded smartly.

"Well, here he is!" declared Hester, whipping off her kitchen apron and disclosing a frilly white one beneath it. Then she hurried to the front door. She did not notice that Rose Frost had fled to the large front parier, where she sat shivering behind the grate fire screen.

Hester opened the front door and discovered a tall, bearded man, wearing a large gray coat and a hat pulled low over his dark hair.

"Oh, howdy do, Mister John," said the woman cheerfully. "We was looking for you, I guess."

The stranger entered and, removing his hat, laid it on the rack, and then turned to her.

"A room, if you have it, please," strangled cry of "Mother—mother" started up the front stairway. Hester trailing after. When they reached the top of the long stairway over the white-faced girl who Doctor Weed arrived with his chauffeur. They carried the fainting man up to the room that used to be Jock Frost's, and laid him on the freshly-made bed. Then the doctor wrote a prescription sent Cyrus to the drug store, and then went out and spoke to Rose.

"It's your Cousin Jock all right. Think he must have had a shock during the war—falling down stairs was a restorative shock. He woke up a few minutes ago and said, 'Mother—mother—Rose—Hester—Doc!' Then he asked for his father and Vickie—I guess it's up to you to tell him, Rose."

The Frost tradition still holds good. The doors are always hospitable open and Jock Frost, heir of the leading citizens, often says to his wife, Rose, "We don't keep to the Frost tradition, my dear. If I had found an empty house that night, you know what might have happened!"

TRENTON

Trenton, April 17—Howard Hardy was found guilty of obtaining $120 relief from the town of Trenton by false pretences when he appeared before Magistrate R. J. Butler in Police Court. He also pleaded guilty to assaulting Edward Ryan. Chief William Bain testified Hardy beat Ryan for refusing to give information to the relief office. "Ryan was the only person who knew I received $600 from my aunt's estate," Hardy said, "and I cashed cheque in Wellington." You know you're not the money illegally, why didn't you pay it back to the town?" the magistrate questioned. "I bought clothes for my wife and myself," Hardy replied. "The story doesn't hold water and it's perfectly clear you intended to hide the money and obtain relief," Crown Attorney R. C. Donnelly stated, and suggested that conviction. Magistrate Butler fined Hardy $17.36 on the assault charge and imposed a sentence of three months. Assessment of $12.60 was made for the costs of the court on the false pretenses count and he was ordered to make restitution. Failing to pay make fifteen days in common jail on both indictments.

Charles Spicer appeared on a charge of operating a truck without P.C.V. licence. Magistrate Butler suspended the case for one week but assured Mr. Spicer he would not be assessed any more than the minimum.

Cecil Leroy, Jack Clarke, Charles Bronsco, Frank H. Lee, W. R. Mc-Phail, Francis Little were fined the regular amount for speeding.

Addition Not to be Finished

According to reports Trenton's market building will not be finished this year owing to the financial condition of the town.

The structure which was partly erected last year and enclosed by a temporary roof was used all winter by farmers from the surrounding district and has served as a comfortable meeting place for organizations. Another story was to be built on the present building to make it correspond with the town hall.

H. I. F. Progressing

Reports from the local H. I. F. committee show that residents of the town and the neighboring district are beginning to enquire about the improvement loan. Dr. O. M. Newton chairman of the committee announced results will begin to show within the next month.

Serjt. Duffy Attends Coronation

Around noon on Thursday Sergt. Angus Duffy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Duffy, Maidlan Ave., boarded a fast train en route to Ottawa where he will be stationed temporarily until sailing to England and the Coronation celebration. Earlier in the Spring announcement was made that Duffy was not accepted to attend the crown of the Sovereign but a reconsideration was hurriedly made last week. "A" Company of Hastings and Prince Edward County Regiment gave Duffy a fitting send off in the armouries on Tuesday night and presented him with a pleasing sum of money to be used on his journey. Officers of the regiment seemed tremendously elated about being represented at the coronation and extended Serjt. Duffy a hearty bon voyage.

Coronation Features R.C.A.F.

Mayor H. R. Cory announced yesterday that nine Royal Canadian Air Force flights, largely flights, approximately 500 people from Trenton and nearby centres, taking part in a gigantic parade were the main attractions of Trenton's Coronation celebration. While the Union Jack is being unfurled a formation of aeroplanes will power dive at the head base on the park of Mount Pelon to afford a fitting conclusion to the morning's activities.

Preparations are being made to accommodate surfeited space to group three thousand school children and it is expected that the entire length of the parade will be over one mile long and will take one hour and a half to pass one point. As the spectacle proceeds an announcer will describe the different historical scenes from the balcony of the Hotel Gilbert.

Merchants of the town have already given substantial subscriptions toward the financing of the ceremonies. Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, M.P.P., Hastings West, may donate 2,000 hand flags for the children to carry in the parade it was announced. The village of Frankford has consented to take part and nearby centres are making preparations to supply the village band and several Trenton ex-service men of Frankford and members of the town council as well as 120 school children are to be present. Other neighboring centres are also willing to lend assistance towards making May 12th a day that will go down in the history of the town of Trenton and in doing so celebrate the Coronation of King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth.

Hinds and Dench Amateur Show

Winners of the four nights Hinds and Dench Amateur show held in the Capitol Theatre last night were chosen after careful consideration on the part of the judges. Competition was exceptionally keen each night and talented children and elders performed wonderfully well. Mayor H. R. Cory acted as Master of Ceremonies and handled the assignment well. Those winning awards were: First, Miss Diamond of Belleville, tap dancer; second, Miss French and Mr. Harvey, comedy team; third, College School choir; fourth, Reid and Stehl; fifth, Harry Miller; sixth, Rhythm Rangers; seventh, Miss Waldron; eighth, Miss Mary Hutton; ninth, Miss Dorothy Ross; tenth, Douglas Waddell and Betty McDonald. Judges were A. Smith, G. Cobley, A. Vasan, G. W. Pierce, O. M. Newton, J. Johnson.

TARZAN'S QUEST

Dance Hall Lady

— by —

Jane Clayton

"Oh, I won't, I won't,"

Anne said nothing further.

"Don't you like me any more?" Ray asked plaintively.

"Let's not talk about it now."

The elevator reached the floor, the door slid back and the two girls silently entered. Anne was bruised for curbing, stares but the operator's expression remained casual, disinterested. So that was all right. They dropped to the lobby.

"Please call a taxi," Anne spoke to the doorman. "Ray, sit down."

"I haven't any money," Ray whimpered.

"I've plenty. Oh!—" Anne broke off.

Her pocketbook was missing. At once, she remembered where it was lying upstairs where she had dropped it, lying near an open window where torn, broken curtains cascaded to the carpet. Just then the prospect of another trip to the twentieth floor appeared as nerve-wracking and arduous as the prospect of a trip to the South Pole but there was no help for it. The pocketbook with its cards, its letters could not be left to be instantly identified, to furnish material for discussion, for speculation, for a possible investigation.

"What is it, Anne?" Ray asked timidly.

"Nothing,'s was the unencouraging response. "You stay here." Anne ordered the other as she would have ordered a child. "I'll be back."

She was lifted again to the floor that she had hoped never to see again. She asked the operator to wait. Quickly she located the pocketbook and quickly returned. The elevator had gone.

Behind her tired eye Anne felt the pounding that announced the onslaught of a raging headache. Once she had the sharp sensation of nausea, and the green walls and the green carpet and the ceiling lights seemed to swim. She leaned against the bell, wondering if this nightmare evening would ever end. At the gradual creaking of the elevator she straightened. The door slid open. Someone got out as she started.

"Why, Anne Lee," said a familiar, delighted voice. "I didn't know you were here!"

She looked straight into the face of Stanley Ryc. Her face, which before was pale, became ghastly.

"What's wrong?"

She had reached the limit of her endurance. Meeting him here was all that was needed to finish her. For an instant she could have laid her head on his shoulder; for an instant she could have sobbed out the whole story. Some dim vestige of pride prevented that. She could not collapse; she had her self-control set. Her home, get herself home.

"I don't live here," was all she said.

"But you—" he began.

"It's only that I'm so tired I could scream," she muttered thickly. "Is there anything—"

"Not!"

"I don't live here either," he said, trying, as he spoke, to remember that we should run into each other."

He was feeling for words, uncertain, puzzled. Instead, a peculiar scowl etched on his forehead. He erased it into the carpet with his stick.

"Yes, now it is!"

Funny when there were two apartments on the floor and one of them was Mrs. Ethel Orcard's that when it was two o'clock in the morning there was outside the door apartment, alone, dishevelled, unstrung, miles from home.

"The address, please, for me," she told him curtly.

As the door opened she heard him say, "I'll see you tomorrow, then."

She him tomorrow! Tomorrow was ruined. Why hadn't she told him that Ray was downstairs? Why hadn't she let him put them into a taxi? Why hadn't she let him help do. She bit her lip and held back floods of helpless, burning tears.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

TEA AT THE RITZ

At five o'clock the dark-panelled green dining room at the Ritz rings to a leisured melody, the muted clang of tea pots against silver-ware, the rustle of brave panking in silken or tailored suits, the soft cries of well-modulated voices taking their bread 'n'at' as a matter of course. Not so much the hour of tea at the Ritz, an hour favored by languid, idle women, whether they have wearily watched the day die and now await the decoration of evening.

Anne had never before had tea there, but her mind was not upon the Ritz. Nor was it upon the frock she wore, although earlier she had been pleasantly conscious that she was as demurely smart as any of the others. The frock, of course, was the black and plaid. Irene was fumbling. After hearing the saga of Ray, she had characteristically rushed off to Heller's and back home again.

"My latest investment," she had declared gleefully, flying into the studio, tossing her hat in one direction, her gloves in another and pearing with the box of plaid the frock that Anne had mourned. "An investment? Oh, Irene, you shouldn't have!" Anne had admired and exclaimed articulated breathless thanks, before repeating "An investment?"

"You bet your life, youngster. Do your best to hit it off with Stanley Rye and maybe some day we'll both wear diamonds."

Both girls had gone off into gales of laughter. Still not even to Irene did Anne confess the strength of her desire that Stanley should like her. Always before she had discussed all "new" men with her roommate; but not this man. This man she discussed with no one.

The moment she realized wretchedly that things were not going too well, Bach time Anne was told her Stanley's very politeness, the awkward pauses and the conversation itself that was at the same time too casual and too labored.

"What grand cakes!" This from Anne.

"Yes, they are good here. How's your tea? Strong enough?"

"Couldn't be better. I've never drunk this kind before. What is it?"

"Jasmine; I like it too."

Another stretch of silence while both nibbled at the grand cakes. Suddenly Anne could bear it no longer.

"What's wrong with you today?" she asked, looking bravely across the table at him.

"Why—nothing."

Still that broad, handsome face reddened and a wary glint came into the eyes. Again there was a long disquieting pause and the tag end of a conversation from the next table drifted to them. "—and I told him,my dear, that it was a lousy boat, simply lousy. Fancy sailing without a private bath!" Nothing gained. Anne took a long drink of water. Her head in her glass.

"It's last night," she said.

"Certainly I've no right—" he began in a puzzled, polite way and then he amended honestly, "Perhaps it is last night."

"You're wondering why was there when I called? Do you want to know?" Her color was high but she had got it out. He regarded her quietly and for an uneasy moment she feared that he would not reply. Then he moved slowly, as he slowly stirred his tea.

"I don't at once explain something first. It's a strange thing but I feel that you and I have been friends for a much longer time than we have been feel, do you understand? I don't know one other—at any rate, that's what I think—but that answer in his mind. It's pretty important. Now do you understand, when I say that I was surprised?

"I was there to see Richard Grason," he finished, grave eyes upon her. "Grasme wasn't in, either that night or the next morning, but when it was two o'clock in the morning there was outside the apartment, alone, dishevelled, unstrung, miles from home.

"The address, please, for me," she told him curtly.

As the door opened she heard him say, "I'll see you tomorrow, then."

She him tomorrow! Tomorrow was ruined. Why hadn't she told him that Ray was downstairs? Why hadn't she let him put them into a taxi? Why hadn't she let him help do. She bit her lip and held back floods of helpless, burning tears.

fully intently; he seemed to think hard for a moment, seemed on the point of speech but in the end he said nothing. She caught his eye. All at once both burst out laughing.

"You knew what I was about to suggest?"

"Perhaps."

"Well—what about it?"

"The answer is no—I don't want to borrow money from anyone."

"Not even from me?"

Outside the city dusk was falling. Street lights were winking on; office lights were winking off. Waiters moved noiselessly about draining ash trays, straightening tablecloths. Early diners drifted in as tea parties broke up, settled themselves with the rustle of organdy and the swish of chiffon. Still Anne and Stanley sat contentedly, talking little, smiling often.

At last Anne suddenly, starting to abrupt realization of the hour.

Stanley summoned the waiter, followed her out into the lobby, out into the street. There was a horrying man, burdened with bags, and rushing blindly toward the Grand Central Station careened into her. Anne steadied him, slim strong fingers caught at Stanley's arm.

Inexplicably thrilled, he tightened his grasp on her hand, a small, strong hand that did not tremble. Only for an instant; then they had crossed the street and Anne was supposedly shielding him good-bye beneath the pale yellow bloom of a street lamp.

Ray was not in the dressing room that Lonsdale that night. As Anne nodded to the other girls she noticed that Ray was missing. Presently Alicia muttered over with the information that Ray was taking the night off. Anne bent to pull up her stockings and to hide any facial expression from Alicia's sharp curious eyes. Alicia had the well-deserved reputation of being the most malicious gossip in the chorus-room mongers. the first to observe that Ray Ellington developed into a love affair or that an acquaintanceship had developed into a flirtation. From the first Anne had disliked and distrusted her.

After asking her partner, Anne moved away from the other, sat down at the dressing table and began to powder her face. Alicia, not to be shaken, dropped to the same bench, took her dressing box more deeply with cherry, reached out lightly and idly touched scents on Anne's powder.

Dimme the low down on last night. I'm dared forward to wins, per "Was you with Ray or was Ray with you?"

Anne turned sharply from the mirror. Her fingers touched the pet player tooled. The dressing room emptied as the girls scurried for their door on the first first come, first served. Alicia did not move.

"Come on, Anne, quit it."

"I don't know what you're talking about," replied Anne blandly, concealing inner consternation.

"Understand? You was there; I guess I know. Buster was here when Grasme and Con talking in the office and what he heard was amazing."

"You'll have to be satisfied then with what you heard."

"Aw, have a heart."

Anne said nothing.

She jerked on her dress and left the room without another glance at Alicia. Apprehension filled her. So last night was not ended yet! She mentally cursed the loquacious, tech-eared Buster wondered how much he had heard, how much he had fabricated, how much he had told. Were the other girls really staring at her darkly and did she not imagine it? She glared at Buster, who over his saxaphone, blowing for all he was worth. As he reached back unexpectedly, she caught his eye, a bright, malicious eye which promptly closed in a significant wink. Her own eyes faltered, dropped.

Alicia, unrebuffed and never in particular demand, rose with look of determination, Anne search, ed desperately for a client or for anyone who would save her from Alicia. Then there was someone was approaching! She stood up.

"Ever get you know I was gonna pick you?" demanded the customary hearty greeting. She weighed at least 200 pounds and his legs large as a pumpkin was of about the same shape.

"I guessed," she made a mechanical response.

They commenced a laborious journey of the floor. Three steps and the would-be Romeo sailed into another couple, jerked to a clumsy halt and Anne was hurled from behind. She wondered if the man had ever danced before, as she put all her attention to keeping him by her side.

"I guess you dance with a lot of fellows." A customary beginning.

"I guess I do."

"How do I stack up? Pretty good for such a big fellow, eh?"

Awfully good," she breathed wincing as he came down on her ankle. Another pair of stockings gone.

"You were holding yourself too stiff," he informed her reproachfully. "You ought to cuddle up more; I don't bite."

The dance more. Dancing with this man, Anne thought, was like dancing with a windmill. Suddenly his flailing arms stopped sawing air. His figure stiffened, his face changed from crimson to red.

"Say! What's the by idea?" he demanded belligerently. "This is my girl; run along and crash somewhere else."

Anne saw that Con had tapped him on the shoulder. Now he slid between the two. He seemed serious, alertness in his bearing.

"Miss Lee is wanted off the floor," he explained soothingly to the offended customer. "Would you mind dancing with one of the other hostesses until she returns?"

This was unprecedented! As she trailed from the centre of the ballroom he managed to say in a low voice, "Don't here and wants to see you before you go home."

"I don't have to see him," thought Anne. "I can quit my job and walk out. I don't have to do that."

Still she continued silently to follow, conscious that Buster at the saxaphone and Alicia at her table were watching. She who had notified the interruption, all were watching.

"He's mad as hell or was this afternoon. Grasme was in a pretty quick," Con commented, pausing at the door of the office. "I guess he's pretty hot and sore about the accident. Grasme that was there last night when you and Ray crashed the party."

He certainly let the world know what happened last night." Anne could not refrain from saying.

"Well, it was a big party," Con remarked mildly. At his tone, at his glance Anne flushed.

"Do you want me to go in with you, to pick up the pieces, if any?" Con inquired.

"No, no thanks. I can manage." Con left. Again Anne thought. I don't have to do this." Then she had opened the door and entered the office. Then she closed the door. There was only one light burning, a drop light at the desk where Richard Grasme sat and his face was in the shadow, dark and ugly and forbidding.

Anne did not know quite what she expected that he would spring angrily from the desk to denounce her, perhaps. He did nothing. She was sure that he was conscious of his eyes he had seen the opening door but he did not rise and his head remained bent.

"Well, Mr. Grasme—" she began a little frightened.

"Oh, I didn't hear you come in!" His tone was one of careful suspense. Slowly he rose and crossed the intervening space. He put both hands on her shoulders and looked down into her eyes. He smiled his intimate confidential smile and stooped slightly as if to bring their eyes still closer together.

STRIKERS DIGGING

Mayor Ponders Plan

The mayor, meanwhile, pondered his plan of calling a general meeting of strikers and urging them to return to work. His plan was made known last week, when he sent word to Homer Martin, U.A.W.A. President, that a sympathy strike should be called in United States plants of General Motors. Others believe the mayor said he would advise the strikers to break from the C.I.O. and call off the walkout.

Mayor Hall said last night he would consider the situation and probably come to a decision today whether this move now should be made.

Martin paid another visit to the strike scene Saturday, addressing an open-air gathering of strikers in a drizzling rain. He told them the C.I.O. has no desire to destroy business or industry and that "the day of industrial autocracy is just about over."

Termed Idea "Absurd"

He termed "absurd" any idea that the C.I.O. is Communistic, and said the Fisher workers Sun-day strikes, "let us negotiate and see how much you can pay us without hurting you and without hurting us."

Martin left Oshawa Saturday night for Flint, Mich., where he addressed automobile workers Sunday and left later for Washington where he is scheduled to meet John Lewis, Chairman of the C.I.O.

Shop stewards of the Oshawa local met Sunday afternoon, but an expected statement did not eventuate. Secretary C. H. Millard, President of the Oshawa U.A.W.A. local, later addressed a meeting in Hamilton, where he declared the Union has "definite proof" that General Motors attempted to "make trouble" at the Oshawa plant.

Organizer Thompson outlined to newspapermen his plans for a possible long drawn-out strike. He said plans have been completed for formation of entertainment, sick benefit and welfare committees, balancing of these as well as an athletic program and provision for "free moving pictures" when the strikers' two representatives and the exact date on which negotiations were to be carried on.

During this discussion C. L. Cohen, Union counsel, who represented the workers with C. H. Millard, Oshawa Union president, telephoned Homer Martin from the Premier's office and with the Premier's knowledge.

No Remote Control

Later Cohen left the Premier's office to confer with Mr. Millard and Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. organizer, who had been working outside. They decided on another talk with Martin and went to a telephone in a vault off the Premier's waiting room. The Union men were directed to the telephone by reporters.

Told by his Secretary of what they were doing, Premier Hepburn threw open the door and through the waiting room crowded with reporters and photographers to the party open door of the vault.

"Who are you phoning?" he demanded as he saw Cohen and Millard in". Cohen said they were. The Premier turned around and declared "great afternoon, everybody. There are going to be no negotiations by remote control from here."

Later the Premier told reporters that he thought it would be better to deal only with employees of General Motors and "not with the paid hirelings of John L. Lewis." So, he said, he had no alternative but to terminate the proceedings.

He said he would not resume negotiations with Mr. Cohen or Mr. Millard. He would ask employees of the General Motors plant to send men, who actually represented their interests. The next move was to the automobile workers.

Reporters who asked Mr. Cohen whether the C.I.O. was trying to control negotiations directly were told: "Mr. Hepburn was aware I was talking to Mr. Martin and in no way demurred."

"Just why did negotiations break off?" he was asked.

"I don't think there is any explanation for any drastic act at any time except in the mind of the person who acts drastically," he replied.

No Instructions

Premier Hepburn told newspapermen that if he had been stated at the outset of the meeting that M. J. Carmichael, the Provincial Auto-General Manager and J. B. Highfield, Ottawa plant manager, represented General Motors and Messrs. Cohen and Millard the strikers.

The strikers' representatives had stated they had no instructions from and in no way represented the C.I.O. and that the immediate purpose of the conference was to deal with the Oshawa strike situation, Mr. Hepburn declared.

Difficulties had arisen over the attempt of Mr. Cohen to project other matters into the preliminary statement, Mr. Cohen had asked to talk to Homer Martin and Mr. Hepburn had left the office.

The Premier continued: "I returned to my office and was shortly informed that without any permission they were using a telephone in the vault of my office. They entered the vault and my office is allowed there. There are a lot of private and important papers in it.

"I found Cohen placing a long-distance call for Martin. It is clear this was just another Martin. Through this act I am determined to oppose the inroads of Lewis and his organization and there was no course open to me but to bid the gentlemen good afternoon."

PREMIER CLAIMS

He said the C.I.O. leaders had been "feeding their hungry, greedy eyes" on Northern Ontario's Mines when they left the Oshawa area. There he left Lewis and his gang here and now that they'll never get a foothold here on the mines of Northern Ontario as long as I am Prime Minister," he declared.

The Saturday conference in Mr. Hepburn's office broke up with drastic suddenness. The proceedings were held up at first by a prolonged argument between Mr. Millard, Oshawa Union president, telephoned Homer Martin from the Premier's office and with the Premier's knowledge.

PREMIER SILENT AFTER MEETING

Negotiating Committee Meets Officials of General Motors Corporation This Afternoon at Oshawa

Toronto, April 20—(CP)—A delegation of a dozen Oshawa automobile workers, anxious to accept the settlement offer made by General Motors, conferred here today with Premier Mitchell Hepburn. The Premier and the strikers refused to make any statements after the conference.

The spokesman for the group, who refused to reveal his identity, claimed they represented from 1,200 to 1,500 of the 3,700 on strike at Oshawa who were willing to accept General Motors' proposals. They represented both members of the United Automobile Workers of America and non-members, he said.

Many, he claimed, had not participated voluntarily in the strike, but had been thrown out of work when others went on strike.

The delegation appeared in response to the Premier's invitation of last Saturday, for the workers to send their own representatives directly to him, they said.

Oshawa, Ont., Apr. 20 (CP)—The call for negotiating committee representing strikers will meet officials of the General Motors of Canada, Limited, at two o'clock this afternoon, in the board room at the company's office at the company, as the request of C. H. Millard, has agreed to meet the negotiating committee to discuss a basis of negotiations which would follow a copying of the sum by the General Motors formally announced.

"The committee will be the same as the committee which met earlier with the company prior to the strike call."

Members were C. H. Millard, president of the Union, R. H. Baile, W. A. Walker, George Day, R. P. Murphy, George Price, and Miss Gertrude Leonard. At previous conferences the company had been represented by James R. Hamilton, plant manager, and Col. Frank Chappell.

Washington, Apr. 20 (AP)—Richard Frankensteen, vice-president of the United Automobile Workers today would reject today demands for a walkout of General Motors employees in the United States to show sympathy for Union strikers in Canadian colleagues.

The United executive committee took up the issue after the Canadian strikers had rejected an offer of higher wages and shorter hours without union recognition.

Homer Martin, president of the auto workers, and other officers would not discuss the campaign they planned against Ford, but one official said:

"We've got enough men in our organization to tie Ford up so that he can't make a car."

Workers Reject Offer of High Pay And a 44-Hour Week

SECRET SESSION

Mayor Hall Speaks to Workers Only After Silenced by Thompson

By H. IVORS KELLY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Oshawa, Ont., April 20 (CP)—Settlement of the strike of 3,700 General Motors workers seemed as far away as ever today after a new effort to end the dispute foundered on the issue of recognition of the United Automobile Workers of America.

In a dramatic meeting last night more than 2,000 strikers unanimously rejected an offer of higher wages on a five day, 40-hour week basis presented to them by Mayor Alex Hall of Oshawa.

Announcing the workers' decision, reached in a two-hour secret meeting, Richard Thompson, secretary for the committee for industrial organization, indicated failure of the company to recognize the U.A.W. A., an affiliate of the C.I.O., resulted in the rejection of the proposals.

The proposals the strikers rejected were outlined as follows by Mayor Hall:

That the men return to work on the basis of the 44-hour week made up of four nine-hour days and one eight-hour day.

That time and a half be paid for overtime.

That those formerly receiving 56 cents an hour or less be paid six cents an hour more, and those in

The atmosphere as plant food? Many do not think of air as plant food, yet it is a storehouse of about 26 per cent. of all the components of plants. The greatest is carbon, the water constituent borne inland to farms and gardens by the ocean is rendered available as rain and snow. The other components are: oxygen, other free or in combination as other elements; carbon, supplied in the form of carbon dioxide; oxygen, free in the air, but generally supplied in combination. Warship Ring Clamps Tight To Cut Off Spanish Aid

International Complications Feared if Ship Tries to Run Blockade

549 OFFICIALS READY

London, Apr. 20 (AP)—The nations of Europe today clamped tight a ring of men and warships about Spain to cut off volunteers and munitions from both sides in the civil war, especially the rebels pocket in the Valencia government, the non-intervention patrol violated international law.

At the stroke of midnight the unique plan formulated by twenty-seven nations to confine forcibly a war within Spain's boundaries limits went into effect. A few moments later, the 15,000-ton British freighter Sarasinos applied to the non-intervention commissioners at Bordeaux and obtained clearance to Spain.

The Sarasinos carried a cargo of food for starving Bilbao, and focused attention on the blockade of the port of Biscay by the insurgent fleet.

Trip May Be Abandoned.

International complications were feared if she attempted to run the insurgent blockade with an international non-intervention observer aboard.

Her shippers, however, expected the Sarasinos to abandon the trip to Bilbao and attempt to land her cargo at some other Spanish port.

While the fleet of some sixty vessels of France, British, Germany and Italy dotted the waters off Spain, 565 officers drawn from the British, Danish, Dutch, Swedish, Belgian and Turkish armies took control of the land frontiers.

All roads and railroads of the Portuguese border were patrolled by the Iberian police. Precautions were taken for caravans at strategic points to search for arms, ammunition and uniforms were reported being run over the international line.

Borders Watched.

Another 130 army officers of neutral nationalities took over control of the French border. Five observers were stationed at the non-intervention committee at Gibraltar.

At the control posts, 24 sea-going officials were to board all ships, inspect their cargoes and escort them to Spain. Already at anchor aboard the Sarasinos, was the 550th and last observer, Inspected the Spectone's cargo, found it legitimate and granted permission to the shipper to weigh anchor. As the vessel passes the ring of warships—British on the north, German and French on the south and Italian on the east of Spain—the official will signal to the fleet commanders to proceed unmolested passage.

After the cargo has been unloaded in Spain, he will be put ashore at some convenient port.

Deny $10,000,000 in Arms Cached for Spain in Finland

Informed Sources Say Marquess of Donegal's Charges of Spanish Gun Running Were "Too Fantastic" For Belief

London, Apr. 20 (AP)—Informed British sources said today a published charges by the Marquess of Donegal to the effect that two Spanish gun runners from England had stored $10,000,000 in arms in Finland was "too fantastic" for serious consideration.

Hedingfors, Apr. 20 (AP)—The Finnish government ordered an investigation today of charges made by the Marquess of Donegal that Finland had been made the storehouse of $10,000,000 worth of munitions two Englishmen plotted to run to Spain.

Defense Minister Juho Niukkanen ordered the probe to determine if any Finnish officers had been involved in the affair while the war ministry issued a denial Finland had sold any arms to Spain.

Writing in the London Sunday Dispatch, Lord Donegal said the two Englishmen, Hon. Victor Henry son of Lord Herbert, and John Christopher Loundale, now in Paris, had planned to make a profit of $250,000 each from the deal.

Lord Donegal said he had trailed the men from London to Finland and there had uncovered documents proving the plot. He said the plan was to store arms collected in various places in Finland for eventual shipment to Spain.

FOODSHIP RUNS TROUGH BLOCKADE

Captain Says Blockade of Bilbao Report is 'Tommy-Rot'

London, April 20 (CP)—The British tug merchant ship Seven Seas Spray, carrying food for starving Bilbao, slipped through the Spanish insurgent blockade during the night and entered Bilbao harbor today.

The vessel left St. Jean De Luz at 11 p.m. last night and entered Bilbao at 8 a.m. A British destroyer and two Spanish insurgent warships were within 10 miles from Bilbao when she proceeded under the apparent protection of Basque coast artillery. Spanish government destroyers and auxiliary craft.

No Protection Given

British warships are not permitted to protect British shipping entering Bilbao, as they do on the high seas, because of the British Government has announced. Bilbao harbor is dangerously mined.

The Seven Seas Spray's cargo is valued at between $100,000 and $150,000 and consists of a variety of food-stuffs weighing 4,000 tons. It was believed it was the last unclaimed city of Bilbao at least a week.

Bilbao is under siege by both insurgent warships and Insurgent land forces.

The British ship was stopped on April 10 by the insurgent warship Almirante Cervera off Santander. Later, the vessel was put into St. Jean De Luz France.

Second Trip for Bess

She was the second British ship reported to have broken the blockade within the past four days. Another reached Bilbao on the night of April 16 and was unloaded under a hail of bullets from insurgent warships and Insurgent land forces.

DENIES MINERS PLANNING STRIKE

Timmins, Ont., Apr. 20 (CP)—Mayor J. P. Bradley of Timmins declared that strikes are being planned by miners in the Timmins district "as far as I am aware," he said, "there is no thought of a strike impending between mine owners and miners nor is there any intention to precipitate any such action."

The mayor's statement referred to a remark by Premier Hepburn that he had definite information operations of the Committee for Industrial Organization were being used to bring on strikes in northern mining areas.

"Union organization may be proceeding," the mayor said, "but that is far cry from calling for any strikes." He said the effect of the unionization campaign will be to introduce an element of fear into the business life of Timmins.

Toronto, April 20 (CP)—Authorities of the Toronto Municipal Jail Farm at Langstaff, north of here, and Dr. Bruce Hamilton, who held the death of William Cannon, March 5 in the jail hospital, by a coroner's jury last night.

Testimony at the inquest at Langstaff showed Cannon had been a drug addict for many years but had never complained of any illness. Dr. L. C. RED BOX CARRIED

Strictest Measures Against Subterfuges Are Promised

London, April 20 (AP)—Coal miners of England and Wales have voted overwhelmingly to strike, it was announced today.

Ballots of 15 and 18 showed 444,546 in favor of a walkout and 61,448 opposed. Representatives of the miners met in London April 30 to decide when to give notice to the Mine Workers Federation said.

The strike threatened in protest against the refusal of owners of the Harworth Colliery in Nottinghamshire to deal with miners bargaining negotiations with the federation.

The 850 strikers at the Harworth mine have refused to return to work until they are guaranteed there will be no discrimination against them for membership in the Mine Workers Federation. The management has tried to get them to join a sort of company union.

John Bachir of the Yellowville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introduced Great Britain's first "rearmament budget" today with the unwelcome news of an increase in the standard income tax rate to 25 per cent., but with a prospective surplus of £325,000 ($1,560,000).

The budget which Chamberlain drew from his bistitch, carefully guarded red dispatch box estimated the total cost of the defense program at £903,100,000 and expenditure at £903,848,000, for a £325,000 surplus.

To provide for the new expenditure of £947,950,000 providing for a deficit on the basis of present figures, of £14,898,000.

Throughout Increase In Frenzy

The income tax increase, he said, would be three pence in the pound, which brings the rate to five shillings in the pound—or one dollar to every four earned by the taxpayer. The tax will produce an expected £275,000,000, Chamberlain said.

The British chancellor carries the little red dispatch box which his predecessors have used since Gladstone's time, spoke before a crowded house. Many members were absent from their regular seats by the crush.

Measures Against Fraud.

Chamberlain announced certain drastic measures coming from the dominions and other parts of the empire would be reduced, among them the tax on silk.

MADRID SHELLED TO CREATE HAVOC

'Many Victims' of Bombardment Are Reported

Madrid, April 20.—(AP)—Insurgent guns poured shell after shell into downtown Madrid today in what Republican Government officers believed was "an earnest effort to create havoc in the city regardless of the consequences."

The bombardment took "many victims" officials announced.

In addition to causing extensive damage to buildings and the streets, the shells struck principal business thoroughfares.

It was the ninth consecutive day of heavy shelling and the worst bombardment since a week ago Sunday. Explosions followed one another at short intervals.

The insurgent bombardment apparently was an effort to force the government to relinquish the Madrid area on 3,000 Insurgents cut off in University City.

MINE SHARES CRASH, RECOVER

Culmination of Three Months' Decline Reached Today

Toronto, Apr. 20 (CP)—Mining shares crashed to the lowest prices for the year in the fire hour today on a selling rush unequalled in many months. Losses of a point or more affected and the western oils as well as the industrial issues and a sympathetic but less severe decline. By noon a few rallies were under way and many issues fully recovered. Well over 2,000,000 shares changed hands in the first hour.

Mining shares have been declining steadily for the past three months, important, only in the last three weeks, with downward drifts in many holders operating on a margin basis, were obliged to unload to meet calls, thus accentuating the slump. Repeated reports that the United State was preparing to cut the price of gold, along with weakening prices for commodities, particularly base metals, helped to weaken the market's position. Many brokers, so-called "stop-loss" orders were executed by their banks to reduce their loans today and this development accentuated the slump in the market.

In the base metals losses up to $2 a share were recorded by Noranda, Hollinger and Smelters and the cheaper issues had proportionate declines. The gold shares held relatively well but secondary groups and losses of 30 to 70 cents were registered by Falconbridge, Fanmour, Hollinger, Powell Rouyn, Central Patricia, Sladen, Pickle Crow, Sylvanite and Little Long Lac.

WILD ANIMAL CARGO LANDED

21-Foot Python Slithered About Deck Without Knowledge of Crew

New York, April 20.—(AP)—The freighter city of Bayville with a cargo of wild animals, birds and reptiles docked here yesterday, bringing word a 21-foot python had slithered about the ship 16 days without the knowledge of the crew or passengers.

E. H. Ward, in charge of the $35,000 jungle shipment, said he didn't want to cause alarm so he told only a few members of the boatswain about the footloose python. Ward said he fed the snake at times, then found the snake in the refrigerator. He used an electric heater to lure it back to the cage it had broken from.

Ward, who makes a trip east each year for animals for Mecum Gardners and Ward, Inc., animal dealers, said the shipment included three lions, a rhinoceros, a pair of rare kangaroos, a whole passel of monkeys, 70-odd snakes, lizards, a dozen varieties of birds and other jungle folk including a couple of gila—Guatemalan devils, which are very vicious and look like dogs.

Dr. Jacobs, member of a family of residents for generations in Caughnawaga, said he had not received official notice of his removal but said reports of a successor had been made in a letter from the department of Indian Affairs at Ottawa early this year.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Fort Smith, Ark., April 20 (CP) The Rev. William D. Gray, 58-year-old Methodist Minister, faced the prospect today of spending 109 2-3 days in the Sebastian county jail because he smashed traffic signs in liquor stores.

"A brick was there and I felt the Lord wanted me to throw it."

The Judge fined him $100 and costs—a total of $113.75. When the preacher did not pay, he was ordered to jail to serve the sentence at the rate of 75 cents a day. Yesterday counted as 75 cents earned—leaving him 109 2-3 days to go, unless the fine is suspended or paid.

AGED MAN SWEPT OVER FALLS TO HIS DEATH

Crysler, Ont., April 20 (CP)—As a witness stood on the shore powerless to help, the body of 74-year-old George Meldrum yesterday was swept over the Crysler Falls on the Nation River to death on the rocky below.

The victim said Meldrum's boat, from which he was fishing, seemed to be getting caught in the current and as it reached the brink it turned over throwing the aged man to his death in the rapids. His body was found about a mile below the falls.

Dr. J. C. Cormier of Crysler, Dormont County village, said death was due to heart failure, and no water was found in the lungs.

"Our flower colors in the beds have invariably been of red, white and blue, but this year we hope to add purple and gold, too. Otherwise we expect no radical change of any of the plots and beds we now have set out.

"We intend to plant a special tree in honor of Coronation Year, but so far the site has not been determined," added the chairman.

It is stated that the mortality in young pigs is slightly heavier this spring, due mainly to anaemia.

FLORISTS BANQUET AT HOTEL QUINTE

John Bessemer of Detroit Addresses Large Gathering

"It is our duty to see that the public service standard is at a within the confines of our particular business is kept at the same standard and that our predecessors made it," Mr. John Bessemer, Detroit, President of the florists' Telegraph Association, told a large representative gathering of florists attending meeting and banquet held in the Quinte Hotel last evening.

Mr. Thos. Cooper, Regional Director of the Association, introduced the guest speaker, and paid tribute to the work carried on by Mr. Bessemer in furthering the aims of the Association.

Representatives of the Association were present from many Ontario and United States points, and there were delegates present from a hundred heard the inspiring talk given by Mr. Bessemer.

Depression

"There is not the slightest shadow of doubt," said Mr. Bessemer, "that we are out of the depression. The people of business as represented by us in a city of 'strikes' and from reports I have gathered, and what I have seen in Canada, is definitely on the upturned. With the arrival of good times prosperity cannot help but spend money, that has been definitely proven. And the natural and human love of things beautiful is the outlet, or one of the outlets of public funds, which constitute one of the links in the chain of prosperity" concluded the speaker in his brief address.

Drawing For Prizes

As one of the features of the evening a special drawing was held in which first prize was awarded Miss Florence Grainger, of Toronto and second to Joseph Hayward, also of Toronto. A special consolation prize was given Wm. Turnbull, of Peterborough.

Master craftsmen of the Association, as well as those who were merely listed in the beginners' class were given a practical demonstration by the art of makeup and arrangement of floral exhibits by Mr. Victor Grainger of Toronto who with the aid of beautiful bouquets, quickly transformed them into floral sprays and wreaths.

Artists who also gave demonstrations in design work during the evening were Mr. Stewart of Adams Flower Shop, Toronto; Mr. Bullock, of Winona Flowers, Toronto; Mrs. Waters of Percy Waters, Toronto; Mr. Pratt of Pratt Flower Shop, Oshawa, and Dave White of Dorothy Quick's Belleville.

Mr. R. V. Hurley of this city who addressed the gathering briefly, conveyed his thanks on behalf of the citizens of Belleville to the Association for choosing Belleville for their annual convention, this in spite of the fact that many of the larger centres had offered greater advantages and paid out better inducements for the location of the convention here.

Music during the evening was offered by Mr. Lee B. Riggs and Thomas Mason, who also led the convention in the community singing which was one feature of the evening.

Much credit for the success of the convention is due to the efforts of Miss Dorothy Quick of the city, whose work toward this end has been expended for some time past, particularly in the attempt to have Belleville chosen as the location.

LOCAL HYDRO SHOWS PROFIT $35,002 IN 1936

Statement Issued by Chairman of Public Utilities Commission

SAVINGS IN 1936

Belleville Hydro Electric Power System had net profit of $35,002.05 as a result of operations in the year 1936 together with saving of over $17,000 in the electric rates as a result of reduction of rates, which went into effect last April.

The following statement has been issued by the chairman of the Commission to the electric users of The Belleville Public Utilities Commission:

Commissioners

M. P. Duff, Chairman; Geo. A. Reid; H. D. Arnold, Mayor; Cawdell H. Scott, Secretary Manager.

April 19th, 1937.

To The Electrical Users:

Your Commission submits herewith some facts in reference to the financial condition of your Hydro System as at December 31st., 1936.

The year 1936 has been very successful and your co-operation in making increasing use of Hydro service has been an important factor in the satisfactory results obtained.

The year 1936 was the seventh year the System has been owned by the citizens of Belleville.

The System was down $679.36 in 1936. This was due to the reduction in rate which went into effect on April 1st., 1936. The reduction made a saving of over $17,000 to the users in the nine months the new rates were in effect.

The amount of power purchased during the year showed a considerable increase. In 1935 the average was 2972.99 H.P. per month which in 1936 it was 4461.93 H.P. per month, an increase of 488.93 H.P. The cost of power in 1935 was $119,475.02 whereas in 1936 it was $137,364.02.

Belleville equity in the power plants and transmission line has increased $15,260.26 to $103,430.14.

In 1930 when the system was taken over from the old Commission, the domestic rates consisted of a service charge of 50c plus a consumption rate of 4c per kilowatt hours for the first 60 kilowatt hours monthly use and 2c per kilowatt hours for the remainder, less 10 per cent. Today there is no service charge and the consumption rates are 3c per kilowatt hour for the first 50 kilowatt hours per month 1c per kilowatt hour for the remainder less 10 per cent. and 10 per cent. prompt payment discount. A consumer using 200 kilowatt hours per month in 1930 would pay $4.50. Today for the same consumption the account would be $2.37.

Likewise the commercial rates have been reduced. In 1930 the consumption charge were 4c and 3c whereas today there are 3 2/3c and 1-2c less 10 per cent. A consumer who paid $22.82 in 1930 would today enjoy our present rate of $20.72.

The Street Lighting cost $4,965.79 less in 1936 than it would be at the 1930 rates and in addition there was a rebate of $1,000.00.

The rebate to the Water Works Department in 1936 was $1,815.23. This improvement to the line ole. during 1936 has cost $13,603.08.

It is apparent that a further reduction in rates is in order and your Commission has already taken steps to see that a reduction is put into effect at the earliest possible date.

Your Commission desires to express its appreciation of your support and the loyalty and courtesy rendered by the Manager and Staff during the year.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Signed on behalf of the Commission,

M. P. Duff,
Chairman.

MRS. PETER LAMBROS
(Gail, Greek)

Mrs. Peter Lambros, wife of Peter Lambros, proprietor of the Guild restaurant in Belleville, died in Gait early today according to word received in this city. Her demise was quite sudden although she had been in ill health for some while. Teddie Lambros left for the western city at an early hour today. The Guild restaurant is closed until interment is made.

TALENTED ARTIST HEARD IN RECITAL

Miss Margaret Wilson, Violinist, Saskatoon, Guest of Club

Miss Margaret Wilson, of Saskatoon, a talented young violinist, gave a very fine recital last evening in Ackerman Hall, Albert College, before the Presto Musical Club and some of its friends. At the piano was Miss Lois Baker of Kingston, whose accompaniments left nothing to be denied.

Miss Wilson had but recently returned from Budapest, where she was a favored pupil of de Vecsey and Kerpely. Petite and very young she played with the skill and abandon of a finished artist. Entrancingly beautiful were the dulcet tones she evoked from her violin, were they lacking in dynamics when the music demanded such.

The first part of the programme consisted a Beethoven Sonata for piano and violin which the two artists played in a most satisfying manner and the Vieuxtemps Concerto in E Minor a difficult number played with graceful finished style and evoked the burst of applause it received.

The second part was in lighter vein with three compositions of the violinist entitled, Reminiscences on a Theme" an "Andantino" by Martini and Kreisler, "Polichinelle" and closing with the "Gypsy Airs" by Sarasate, in which the player seemed to catch the spirit of the piece and brought forth from her instrument beauty of tone and its varied nuances. At the close Miss Wilson graciously responded to insistent encores.

Mrs. Ben Williams programme the club served refreshments and a delightful social hour was spent. Everyone enjoyed and the hope that the violinist and her accomplished pianist would be heard again soon in Belleville.

PARKING BY-LAW TO BE RIDGIDLY ENFORCED

Belleville's one hour parking by-law will be rigidly enforced during the approaching motoring season, Today the local constabulary is equipped with their conventional piece of chalk and were seen marking the wheel of the parked cars on Front St. for check-up purposes.

There are ample parking lots and other free spaces to park throughout the downtown area. With the increased number of automobiles in Belleville and coming into our city it is necessary to enforce the parking bylaw as much as possible. We not only appeal to the local motorists to endeavour adhering to this much-needed bylaw, but today have ascertained that the bylaw will rigidly enforced", Chief Alex Kerr declared this morning as he referred to the many parking lots back of Front St. business houses that are available to motorists within a few seconds walk of the main thoroughfare.

INJURED WORKER TAKEN TO OUTPOST
Example of Service Rendered by Red Cross Hospitals

How a lumberjack, with severe concussion was transported 86 miles, and an Indian child, horribly burned, was brought in 47 miles to the Red Cross Outpost Hospital at Manitouling Island was related today by the Canadian Red Cross Society.

George Weir, 65 year old lumberjack, Manitouwaning, was leaning logs from a camp at Colin's Bay on the mainland of Lake Huron just opposite the eastern end of Manitoulin Island. A log caught in a jackpine causing the opposite log to up and strike Weir a severe blow on the head, rendering him unconscious. He was brought back to camp by his fellow workmen who, expecting death again awakened consciousness any moment, kept him there for two days. He was then moved six miles to the head camp where he remained overnight and was then taken 12 miles to Killarney the next day. After another night here, he was transported by motor boat 86 miles to the Outpost Hospital, where he had regained consciousness but, through protracted exposure, he contracted pneumonia which later was complicated by empyema. Operation was necessary to drain the chest cavity. The patient came through in excellent condition and by the time he had recovered completely, the nurse writes that he had become so attached to the hospital that great difficulty was experienced in persuading him to leave. Finally when bidding goodbye, he expressed his gratitude by saying he was going to tell everyone he knew of the kindness shown him at the Red Cross Hospital.

The other incident relates to Teresa Wakegijig, six year old Indian child belonging to the Wiki-wemekong Reserve on Manitoulin Island, who was horribly burned when her dress caught fire from the kitchen stove. So severe was the burn that the entire left side was affected, the child losing complete use of left leg and arm. Brought 47 miles from the Reserve to the Manitoulin Red Cross Outpost, the child's wounds were cleaned and treated. When treatment had prepared the wounds sufficiently the mother was brought to hospital where the local doctor grafted skin from the mother to the raw wounds on the child. After two months in hospital, the little patient was discharged with full use of her arm and leg.

"Cases such as these make up in large measure for the trials and tribulations of pioneer hospitalism," commends a Red Cross official.

History of Fox's Church Related

The Sunday evening service of the W.M.S. in the Union Church on Wednesday evening. After the Scripture lesson the topic under the heading "Who? When? Where?" took the form of three papers. The first under the heading, "History of Christian Efforts of Canada" was given by Miss Gladys Mather. The other two the history of the two local churches in the community, the history of Fox's church was given by Mrs. Albert Harvey. Christianity was first brought to this community by circuit riders whose circuit extended from here to Bancroft a distance of 50 miles or more. A little white frame church was built 70 years ago and was the first one built in this community. A few years later the Rev. Geo. Dunkley built the Bible Christian Church now used as the Sorosis hall of Madoc township, a few years later this organization united with the Wesleyan Methodist.

In 1907 the building now used was erected. Mr. Wm. Fox and not Mayor of Belleville built the church which is of brick construction. The minister at the time was the Rev. M. W. Leigh, B.A. The history of the Union Church was also given by Mrs. Jack Rapley. The church was built in 1886 some 60 years ago. In order to raise funds the people held a 1.20. of July celebration in the woods on the farm of Mr. Arthur Robinson. That was in the year 18-87. There were eighteen horses present and the proceeds for the day amounted to $600.00.

The following winter the men held bees and carried the stone for the foundation of the church, out of Millers quarry, down in Scotch Settlement.

They hauled the stone that winter, and the following summer the people raised money by means of a picnic, which was held in John Conlin's woods, on July 20th, 1888. On that same day the corner stone of the church was laid and the foundation of the church was built that summer. The brick was all drawn by interested parties and was obtained from the Hill brick yard, east of O'Hara's school and from the Pringle brick yard.

Empey drew the second load of brick on a wagon that his son Albert Empey still has. When the church was completed the people had a dedication supper and Rev. Mr. Campbell of Toronto was the guest speaker for the evening.

The congregation was successful in raising enough money through picnics and subscriptions plus the free work of many men in bees to build the church as it now stands today, with the exception of $600.00 which was obtained by the late Mr. Robinson at his death to the church which cleared it from all debt.

A duet "The Church in the Wildwood" was rendered by Mr. Vernon Stroke and Miss Gladys Martin.

A short business period was conducted by Mr. Jas. Moran. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The roll call showed that twenty members present including visitors.

The meeting was brought to a close by all repeating the Mizpah Benediction.

W. I.

On Tuesday evening, April 13th, Mr. Redcloud and Shannonbridge Women's Institutes held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Robt. Blakley, Mrs. J. Cawley, the president, presided. The roll call showed 36 present and as their names were called responded by exchange of bulbs and flower seeds. Letters of thanks for boxes of clothing received while ill were read. It was decided to hold a card party at Shannonbridge Hall, to raise enough money for the April pay for the piano and those who could not attend pay a fee of twenty-five cents.

The program for the evening was under the leadership of Convener Mrs. Harry McCoy, the theme for the being community singing. A humorous reading was given by Mrs. Wm. Andrews. A splendid report of the convention held at Belleville was given by Mrs. A. Dooly.

A spelling match brought the program to a close. A dainty lunch was served at the close and a social half hour enjoyed by all.

Commercial Course to be Taught at Stirling High School

At a meeting of the Stirling Board of Education held in the board rooms on Wednesday last a recommendation for the introduction of a Commercial Course to be added to the list of subjects now taught there, was presented by several members of the Committees and unanimously adopted. The recommendation was presented as follows:

"That we recommend to the Board the introduction of a Commercial Course the same to be started with the beginning of the regular fall term". Among the members of the governing body present were: Messrs J. R. Delaney, C. C. Martin, W. Wright, E. G. Bailey, J. S. Morton, C. P. Linn, W. H. Falkner, E. W. Allen, and Dr. C. F. Walt, H. H. Alger and E. A. Carleton.

The recommendation was presented by Mr. Martin who explained that the matter of adding the present five teacher staff to a four teacher staff, and the guarantee of economy in the costs of education had been thoroughly investigated from every angle, including a careful survey of similar working staffs throughout the district had been made and after careful consideration each member of the Committee had felt that such a change was not in the best interest of the institution. It was felt that the change being must be done to make the present course more attractive and thus increase the membership with scholars from both Stirling and surrounding districts. Mr. Martin thought, it was decided to introduce the recommendation presented which favoured the addition of a complete Commercial course to be added to the subjects now taught in the Stirling High School.

In expressing his views on the matter Mr. C. P. Linn also a member of the committee, thought that had been his opinion that the addition of a four teacher staff was a definite preserve of increasing the ed education if this could be done without injury to the standard of the institution. He was in favour of retaining the five teacher and the introduction of the commercial course. Co-operation regarding the matter and its adoption would be beneficial to the school he thought.

Dr. H. H. Alger stated that he thought that the financial position of the school depended largely on increased County grants, and that it was felt that the present was the opportune time for the introduction of a Commercial Course he favoured the plan, such an addition would be a great advantage.

Dr. Carleton felt that following such a course of progress was failing in line with a recommendation of the Canadian Department of Education which will sooner or later come into being.

Mr. J. A. Meahaw reviewed the history of the Stirling High school and revealed several facts which pupils attending there had been greatly benefited by a superior training. He did not feel that a reduction in the Staff would be to the best interests of the School.

Dr. C. F. Walt stated that he favoured his introduction of the new course. Any movement on the part of the board which would make the school more attractive and thus increase the attendance would be met favourably. Several courses had been suggested and considered, but at this time the one selected seemed the most logical.

Evening at Card Party Enjoyed

Held under the auspices of St. James Church the very successful Euchre which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton McGee, Front, Sidney, proved to be most interesting and entertaining to guests numbering about 100 persons who were in the play. The awards for the high scores of the night were presented as follows: Ladies' 1st, Mrs. Owen J. McAvoy; 2nd, Mrs. James Fitzpatrick; Consolation, Mrs. Chas. Carvin; 2nd, F. McGrath. At the conclusion of the card playing several of the ladies assisted in serving luncheon followed by a brief social period which included some excellent community singing under the leadership of Rev. Father H. J. Farrell.

St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society

The April meeting of St. Andrew's W. M. S. took place on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. Foster. Mrs. Tompkins, president of the organization was in charge, and opened the meeting with the use of a hymn. Mrs. R. Baker led in prayer while the scripture lesson taken from the 12th. Psalm was read by Mrs. Duncan. Following the use of another hymn, the topic for discussion as taken from the Study book on the life and work of Dr. Jonathan Goforth, D.D.; was capably dealt with by Mrs. W. L. Anderson and Mrs. Gena Sprague. Dr. and Mrs. Goforth are the two most outstanding Missionaries of the present day church, spending most of their lives in the isolated areas of Northern China, although his sight was gone almost completely the latter years of his life, his very work in a Dominion wide tour addressing various church groups on the Study book in Manchuria and the urgent need for volunteer workers. This most interesting address was brought to a close with all repeating the Lord's prayer.

A CANADIAN WINS MARATHON

A Canadian has again won the Boston Marathon of 26 miles, 385 yards, Walter Young, a comparatively unknown athlete from Verdun, Quebec.

Time was when the marathon race of 26 miles was one of the favorite pastimes of the people in Canada and the United States. Many persons remember the famous Tom Longboat who was brought here for a meet many years ago.

The modern marathoner makes good time and it is doubtful if the classical runner of the ancient Athenian army could make the time that modern runners make.

With all our mechanical development since the days of Tom Longboat, the marathon persists.

Strange as it may seem, it was just thirty years ago to the day (Monday) that Tom Longboat, Canadian, succeeded in setting up a record of 2 hours 24 minutes, 20 8-5 seconds for a 25 mile course. Billy Sherring was the first Canadian to win the marathon as he raced over the historic course at Athens, Greece.

Everyone knows the story of the soldier who is remembered for his great run across the country from Marathon, the scene of the great battle when Greece was saved from the Persian hordes, to his native city Athens to tell that the Greeks had conquered the much-feared enemy. He left his name for his race to Athens, not for his prowess as a soldier. His name was Pheidippides. He died as he delivered the tidings. Pheidippides had fought at battle and then started with the despatch.

TAXING—WHO PAYS?

There seems to be an inherent dislike in man to paying taxes. Yet no one escapes. Proportionately few pay income taxes to the Federal and Provincial Governments and most of these do not like to hand out money for taxes on the income of the year before.

But all pay taxes even if one does not always realize it. This leads one to the view the only happy taxpayer is the person who does not know that he is paying a tax at all.

This attitude is not limited to one portion of the community but extends to other countries. New York State has just collected its first and most painful installment of the income tax and it is thought that perhaps half a million have paid, one person in every sixteen of voting age. Probably one in thirty-five pays the U. S. federal income tax. New York Times refers to those who pay taxes, many not realizing that they do pay. Many articles in the United States as in Canada are available to show the amount of the homes of Canada is being rapidly taken up by home lovers who desire to make their homes more comfortable and more modern. The Home Improvement Plan backed by the government and supported by a body of big businessmen of Canada provides an easy way for householders to improve their homes and home investments by easy money payments and low rate of interest spreading over three years. The money can be obtained at any bank, the borrower giving a note, which needs no endorser. Besides improving the homes of the nation and adding to its comfort and happiness the improvements will give employment to many who have been out of work for some time, and will put a large sum of money in circulation with all the benefits which accrue from the free circulation of money. Fifty million dollars has been made available for this work but it is estimated that nearer two hundred million will be spent upon home improvements as the result of the campaign, judging from a recent similar campaign in the United States, where the home improvement urge is becoming epidemic and many householders used their own capital to enhance their home investment. Confidence in the future of Canada is all that is needed to make this movement an outstanding success.

FOREVERMORE

It was an ancient edifice
Remote and far away
From city noise and crowded streets
And echoes of the day.
Alone I stood by a silvern lake,
And when the moon shone bright
Its gables were reflected
With a shadowy softened light.

Long centuries this stately home
Had in its place held sway,
Here many a knight of armor bright
Had lived his little day.
'Tis said that one could sometimes see
Those souls of other days
When in the quiet midnight hours
They walked through moonlit rays.

And one there was in silvery sheen
A maiden young and fair
With dreamy eyes and skin so white
And marvellous golden hair.
So beautiful and yet so sad
She ever proved to be,
As she wiped away her falling tears
And ofttimes turned to me

"Why, do you weep, fair maid?" I cried!
"What is your plaint so drear?"
"When Spring has come" she soft replied
"My love I may not see
He nevermore will violets bring
Or primroses to me.
For he is dead, his life is o'er,
My love has gone, you see;
And tho' I watch from year to year
We'll ne'er return to me."

When Did He Abdicate?

An Examiner reporter asked sufficient questions to learn that nine out of ten people can tell you that Christopher Columbus discovered America in 1492, but not one in ten can name the date on which Edward VIII became King of Britain, which was December 10, 1936.

The questions were asked because there had been a discussion in the office relating to the length of time it would take for recent dates to become known with the certainty of once ancient historical facts. The abdication of a king is an important event in a nation's history. In years to come children attending school will be studying it, and they will probably have to deal with all the circumstances in examination papers, if such things continue to live in the future.

But this will be well fixed in the mind in future years, and yet the date is not well fixed in the average mind today, and the same reporter had reason to find a certain hazy view surrounding the date on which the world war was officially declared. Christopher Columbus and his famous trip — nine out of ten can sing that off with ease.—Peterborough Examiner.

Selling Used Cars

Now and then we notice in the advertising columns of Toronto papers a used car offered for sale which has been driven by a retired minister. That is supposed to create the impression that the car has been carefully driven, well treated and given consideration which other less fortunate cars have never experienced.

We cannot at the moment recall having seen a car so advertised for sale saying it had been carefully driven by the keeper of the company, or by the keeper of the corner store, or by the village clerk or the postmaster. It is only the minister or the retired minister whose driving of a car seems to be held up as a guarantee of its state of preservation.

Some place in II Kings it is recorded that John went driving one er.

Old Kate

She was nibbling grass along the hedge, when a car rattled by, she seemed startled, then she noticed the other cars, and trying in vain to see with her eighteen eyes. As the sound subsided, "Old Kate," the forty-year-old mare, lowered her head and resumed nibbling. The unexpected happening glinted upon her once handsome coat of golden chestnut and warmed her old, scuffed hide.

Several rods away the noisy car came to a halt and sudden silence. Just then Old Kate's owner reached the end of the field of corn which he was cultivating. As he stopped his team he heard his neighbor of the tin whistle call: "Hello there! How would you like to trade that old mare back there for a car?" Deliberately Jim left the cultivator and leaned against the fence. Facing the would-be bargainer coolly, he inquired: "What kind of a car do you want to trade, Bert?"

"Oh" replied Ed, "he is a good calf—a Durham grade."

Jim pointed to the splendid span of horses before the cultivator. "They is her cousins," he said. "The boy is mowing with another cousin of hers. I've got one stands in the barn, besides the team I sold off last fall. Over in the woodlot runs a couple of her granddaughters—likely young, too. Why, I've got a calf myself that looks quickly because it has been stated it has been driven by a retired minister. Some conservationist will have its way and the custom will continue to live and possibly gain in sales.—Peterborough Examiner.

Infantile Paralysis

So far as numbers go, infantile paralysis is not a large problem in connection with other infectious diseases. On this continent, it accounts for about eight or nine thousands a year while tuberculosis causes 77,000; syphilis 12,000; whooping-cough 8,000; and diphtheria 5,000; typhoid about 3,000; diphtheria 5,000 and accidents and violence 90,000.

There are about ten paralytic cases for every 100,000 of population each year. There seems to be less of the affection in all European countries, with the exception of Scandinavia, than on the North American continent where "Polio" is more frequent in the interior of the country than on the seacoast. Curiously, one of the most intense epidemics occurred some years ago on an isolated volcanic island called Nauru, or Pleasant Island on the equator. Here a population on its eight square miles or 2,300. There were 700 cases. Another circumstance is that both sexes and all ages in the tropics are equally affected. Chinese and yuritish working for a British phosphate company and who had been in contact with the outside world were almost completely immune. The conditions of things which seems to confirm this suspicion that poliomyelitis was brought up in localities where "Polio" is epidemic, have become immune through having had the infection in a very mild, sometimes unnoticeable form.

Measures of prevention are these: Contact with cases of infantile paralysis should be avoided. Cases mild and severe, paralytic or otherwise, should be reported carefully. Since any paralysis in a given case comes on, as a rule, within seven days of the time of the chief difficult for doctors to diagnose the paralytic cases.

What about the value of convalescent serum? This has been so much newspaper reference to the use of serum from the blood of those who have recovered and finally, it is doubtful to whom the honor is due for this important discovery. Like many others it may easily have been due to be a variety of persons or to a chain of circumstances.

In this connection the London Chronicle-Telegraph recalls an English physician who made the discovery at the door of an Ironsole brave, Wokani, in the square. The legend, as told by The Chronicle-Telegraph, is that the chief got up one early morning in March to make a hunting trip.

He tried the edge of his trusty tomahawk with his thumb and grinned in his turn as a result of the keenness. He breakfasted; then, pulling the weapon again, he started off on the hunt while his squaw sat by the fire to embroider a new pair of moccasins.

In due course came the time to have dinner and the squaw had a thought for a delightful surprise to boil but she had forgotten to fill the water bucket and the spring was half-a-mile away. Glancing at the maple tree which Wokani had chipped with tomahawk, she noticed that the sap was dripping from the wound right into an earthenware container that happened to be leaning against the trunk. She dropped the meat into this container filled with sap and put it on the fire to boil.

Later Wokani returned home, bringing with him a fine hunting. Dinner was set before him and the moose was deliciously crusted with maple sugar. He ate and ate his fill; singing the praises, as he did so, of the new discovery which accidentally derived from the trunk of the maple tree.

When regarding to Iroquois legend, was the origin of maple sugar. Here is the story as told by Indians we know it today. It is as attractive a version as any.

Teaching the Calf to Drink

We were reading in an agricultural paper where some inventor had been working on a new sort of a pail which was to be used in weaning a calf, writes editor Arthur Kennedy of the Peterborough Examiner. There were several rubber nipples on the bottom of the bucket and the inventor was sure it would work.

If it does, then he's got something, for at the moment we are inclined to be a little skeptical. Always we sense person going to an "ism" or inventing a new plan for teaching a calf to drink out of a pail, and no person ever did it in least 16 had been published. Lot 4, Concession Ten—not in our day.

You can't very well teach a calf to drink with a spoon or by using a tea cup. What about with a pail? Yes, we never heard, but the custom seems to have gone a long way back in the barnyard kingdom. Never yet did we know or hear of a calf that refused to take a drink out of a pail. The objection to a pail seems to be born in them and it increases as they get older and become stronger and stiffer in the neck. The legs of a calf may seem a little wobbly at first, but we believe they look that way because nearly all of the strength is in the neck. We have heard, and if there's any left over them it's a calf ready to be sold as we have idea that a calf should not drink out of a pail.

Maybe we seen many people who retain their calmness and good disposition after having had a struggling a calf how the thing ought to be done. There was grandfather

The Origin of Maple Sugar

Who was the first person to discover that the maple tree yields a sweet sap in the spring time? It is a dream cliff to imagine, and who first discovered that this sap can be concentrated into a delightful syrup or sugar by the process of evaporation? These are questions that have often been discussed and that have received various answers, but it does not appear that there ever have been authentic and finally, it is doubtful to whom the honor is due for this important discovery. Like many others it may easily have been due to be a variety of persons or to a chain of circumstances.

To Have Test Case Over Slot Machines

Kingston, Ont., April 19 (CP)—Opening of the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court here today will probably see a test case in the matter of slot machines. Action has been entered on behalf of Vernon Morrison, owner of some of the slot machines formerly operated in the city, seeking to test the legality of the city's bylaw which provided a total ban on such machines and which ruled that no machines could be operated in restaurants, tobacco stores, pool rooms or bowling alleys.

BARBER WINS HAIRCUT

Officials of the Bloomfield Public Library found themselves in an awkward predicament following the pledge a short time back in the village the other night.

They scratched pondered heads. A gentleman had donated a prize to be given to the winner of one of the novelty dances. The donor could not present it, and the recipient could not receive it in the absence of the donor. Here is what happened. Robt. McCoy a local barber, donated a haircut to be operated in this particular event. But he had not taken into consideration the fact that he might participate in the contest. He did—and won the prize.

CONTRACT AWARDED

Some Aldermen Claim Price Not High Enough For Good Work

Although the contract for garbage collection was awarded in committee of the council on Thursday night after fourteen tenders had been considered, the question was again opened, when the contract was ratified by the city council in regular session on Monday evening. After a short discussion the contract was given over to Shiell at a price of $2,250 but it was definitely stated by the council that the tenderer would have to live up to his contract and the bylaw under which the contract was accepted. Before the meeting closed, the council adjourned for an hour and with the bench committee went over plans for the coming summer respecting this project and listened to proposals made by the committee.

W. B. Deacon Heard

W. B. Deacon was the spokesman for the Beach Committee and asked the council to visualize the benefits a beautiful waterfront would make to the city and said that the committee is "asking is the co-operation of this council" said Mr. Deacon. He showed what Toronto had done in the way of improvement on the waterfront and believed the same could be done here. The speaker explained to the council that the esplanade proposition was a good project and that the citizens of Belleville expect the council to beautify the city at every opportunity. In conclusion he asked for co-operation not money and he believed the new beach from what was completed in six or seven years would be a decided asset to the city.

Request Help

William F. Todd, president of the Belleville Softball Association appeared before the council seeking help to equip a playing field on Coleman's Field and a committee of Aldermen Armstrong, Clapp, Harvey and the City Engineer were appointed to look over the property and report back to the council. Mr. Todd stated that the Percival Stores had won the Intermediate "A" Softball title of the Province and that a more compact, stronger loop had been formed this year and the players and the citizens who nightly attended these games were complaining about the playing field and the accommodation and he believed with a little labor and a small outlay a real field could be obtained.

Mr. Todd suggested that a new field be laid out on the property offered by Mr. McCreary and that the ground be rolled and levelled, would protest the lawn from pedestrians crossing the corner. A committee of Aldermen Baragar, Armstrong, Hembling and the City Engineer were appointed by His Worship, Mayor Arnold, to inspect the property and take the matter up with Miss Corbett and report back to the council at the next meeting. The request from J. Allen of Allen's Grocery for a release of business tax as he was going out of business was granted. The Belvidere Hotel was granted permission to erect a canopy over the sidewalk in front of their property the same as has been placed at the Queen Hotel.

To Place Signs

The placing of signs to notify motorists of a "Quiet zone", near the hospital can be done by the council with the permission of the Highway Department. As one of the signs will be placed in Thurlow Township and one in the city, permission to place the sign in Thurlow Township does not have to be obtained from the Township authorities as the signs will be placed on the King's Highway. The solicitor was ordered to write the department seeking the desired permission so that quiet can be observed in this particular area.

After an inspection of the City Scales by a representative of the government, it was found they needed some repair and that they should be closed until such time as the repairs are made. The cost of the repairs will be in the neighborhood of $100 and when completed the scales will be ready for use for a period of five years at least. The inspector made the scales after his inspection and they passed as being legal, until the repairs are made and they pass inspection of the department. The work was ordered done and in the meantime weighing of coal and other articles will be taken on the other scales in the city. The repair work will be started immediately and will be finished in about a week.

Reports Given

Two reports were given by the City Solicitor in connection with hairdressers who visit the city from Toronto and elsewhere and ply their trade on the days they visit and then leave. In the first report Mr. Rollins stated there was no police authority in the Municipal Act to control such visitors, "if they are played for amusement there can be no prosecution but if a "rake-off" is taken there the owner of the machine becomes liable under the Criminal Code." In the second letter he stated there was no law to regulate people, who come in as hairdressers for their business would be the selling of labor and that is permissible, under the code. Three by-laws were presented, one for parallel parking from Bridge Street to Dundas Street on Front Street and the others for ratifying agreements between parties purchasing land from the city and the by-laws covering these were passed through the varying stages. The parallel parking by-law went through the committee of the whole without discussion. With parallel parking south of Bridge Street and angle parking north of this street the citizens will be able to compare the two systems and be better able to judge the better one for the city at large.

Against Contract

Alderman Baragar before the contract for the garbage collection was let, stated that each year the contract was at a lower figure but he thought the collection should be a service, to the city and to the ratepayers. He stated that during the past few years here had been numerous complaints from citizens about this collection.

He did not believe at the figure the man taking the contract could make any money and after a few months he would become discouraged and let the work slip and the city would be in the same condition as for years passed. In a tabulate form he gave the cheapest cost at which the collection could be made and the figure came to $3,618.20 yet the contract was taken for $2,250. Alderman Lewis congratulated the Alderman in bringing this matter before the council and Alderman Harvey agreed that no man could work for less than 40 cents and hour and that the city council should make the contractor live up to that figure, that had been set by the city for city labor. "Here we have a man contracting at 25 cents an hour for his labor," said Alderman Harvey.

Alderman Baldree thought the contract should stand and Alderman Armstrong suggested that the by-law should be amended but that the contract should stand. Alderman Wills explained that it was decided that collected the garbage in another year was the second lowest of all tenders submitted. Alderman Jennings stated that the tender of last year was $2,000 but this year the same man put in a tender for $4,300 and I agree with Alderman Baragar, that we are not paying enough to have this work done properly.

Mayor Arnott stated that the question was whether to do the work by tender or have the city do it. I am in favor the tender being accepted. Alderman Baragar said "It is not my intention to have the city buy new equipment." The new dump carts for collection of refuse on Front Street was ordered purchased at a cost of $42 each after the contract for the collection of garbage had been let.

SLIGHT DAMAGE TO FAN MOTOR

Blaze Originates From Burning Oil in Basement.

Fire, which originated from burning oil in the basement of the home of W. J. Burgoyne at 98 Dundas Street caused slight damage to a fan and motor on Saturday. The oil, which had seeped through a leak in the fuel line of an oil-burning furnace became ignited, when a back-flash of flame from the oil-soaked sill ignited the wood work. The blaze followed the small stream of oil along the basement floor to a motor and fan, which were located a few feet away from the furnace. An alarm brought city fire squads to the scene, who extinguished the blaze before any great amount of damage was done. The house was filled with the smoke and fumes of burning oil when firemen arrived.

An alarm was rung in yesterday from the home of Thomas G. Hall at 21 Dundas Street where a small chimney blaze caused temporary concern. No damage was done

NEED FOR TRUTH URGED ON PRESS

American Newspaper Editor's Praised Stresses Duties

American Newspaper Editor Lauds Canadian Press

Washington, April 19.—(AP)—Alfred M. Kirchhofer, newly-elected president of the American Society of Newspaper editors, expressed confidence yesterday there is meeting its responsibilities "with a very decided appreciation of the public obligation involved."

Asked his views of opportunities offered, Kirchhofer spoke first of advances since the World War in "interpretative and objective reporting."

"And the greatest service the American Press can perform in the months and years immediately ahead," he said "is to bring to bear all possible diligence to present to the public unbiased and complete facts concerning domestic affairs and the world situation."

Kirchhofer also urges

"The present day also presents a combination of opportunity and editorial writers. They have an opportunity for leadership that has seldom been opportunity not for partisanship, but for explanation, interpretation and elucidation."

Kirchhofer has been associated almost 23 years with the Buffalo Evening News, of which he is managing editor.

"It is trite but none the less true," Kirchhofer said, "that never before was there need for truth and accuracy in reporting greater than it now is. In these days of efforts to over-dramatize news, in an effort to gild the lily, the newspaper reporter stands as a steadying balance wheel."

ROAD HAZARDS GAIN ALARMINGLY

Mental Tests For Drivers Urged by Vernon

Toronto, Apr. 19 (CP)—The new and increasing hazard of the road is "gaining with alarming strides", President J. H. Vernon of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association told the annual convention of the organization here today.

He said education of drivers and selection by physical examination as well as mental tests could do much to reduce the hazard, but more could be done by proper supervision of highways and educational and punitive measures by the police. He warned members against neglect of proper safeguarding of machine discharge.

Col. Fred T. Dennis, Director of Highway Safety for the Bendix Products Corporation, South Bend, Ind., declared:

"Unless drunken drivers are punished with jail terms, jay-walking stopped, incompetent drivers and unsafe vehicles barred from the roads, we cannot hope to lower the toll of death and injury."

Pedestrians have no more sense of direction "than a bunch of firecrackers," he said.

HOMICIDE CHARGE LAID IN SLAYING

Mischa Rosenbaum, Booking Agent, Alleged to Have Confessed

New York, April 20.—(AP)—Mischa Rosenbaum, 30, who operates a theatrical booking agency under the name of Mischa Rose, was held on a charge of homicide today in the slaying of Julia Nussenbaum, 25, night club violinist.

He was booked at a police station last night, less than 24 hours after Miss Nussenbaum's body was found in a sound proof rehearsal studio here. Her head was bashed in with a hammer.

Police asserted Rosenbaum confessed an altercation with dancer, his attorney said there was no such confession. Sam Leibowitz, noted criminal lawyer, was retained for the defence.

Inspector Michael McDermott quoted Rosenbaum as saying: "I had been drinking heavily. I recall going into the room and seeing Julia was there. We had some words. We had been arguing for several days because I wanted to go back to my wife and she didn't want me to.

"She hit me first with something —I don't know what it was. I must have grabbed the object out of her hand and hit her with it, but I don't remember. I don't remember anything until I woke up in a jail in Monticello."

Science selects and preserves even the familiar telephone pole.

In three widely separated, climatically different parts of the continent, laboratory tests are made by planting various types of telephone poles—exposing them to the weather for long periods and observing the effect.

Thus chemists and engineers have devised means of using less costly pine, treated with creosote, instead of cedar, chestnut and Douglas fir. The saving is substantial—one of the many savings that science makes possible and which keep the cost of telephone service within the reach of the humblest user.

Recent rate reductions saving telephone users $600,000 yearly mean wider use and greater value to each subscriber.

Dance Hall Lady

— by —

Jane Clayton

"You little devil," he whispered against the faint thrumming of music from the ballroom, "you little devil, what did you mean breaking in on me last night? What do you think I should do to you?"

This was a phenomenal three words for Anne. The dusky office was disturbing, almost frightening. With effort Anne shifted her eyes. "Please don't touch me! You ran an apology from me but that's all you ran."

"Indeed?"

The scoff flashed in the gloom. His long arms crushed her body to his. He was kissing her with the practiced ease of an accomplished lover, on the lips, the eyelids the throat. She struggled, slowly, stopped struggling, went cold and limp. His thin strong arms slid down her shoulders tightened once, relaxed. He let her go.

"You're a funny kid," he observed musingly, laughingly into her eyes, set face. "I'd like to know more, much more about you."

"Your opportunities are over. I'm through here."

"Wait a minute," he called as she started toward the door. "Wait a minute."

She paused.

"Are you quitting because you were outrageous last night, or because I was outrageous tonight?"

"Both."

"Can you afford to quit?" he asked, suddenly brisk and business-like.

"That's my affair, not yours."

"Maybe, maybe." He fighted a cigarette. The lick of flame lit his face. "I'll make you a proposition. Come back tomorrow night and I'll find something? I hate suggesting it."

"Don't be ridiculous! Of course we can. . . Anne's weak my cheek was thirty dollars. This week—it may be more."

So Anne had returned to Ibbutsland. There were no difficulties except difficulties with herself. Con had been marvelous. He had readily promised not to let Richard hear of the change in decision but the girl knew Lolusland knew as well that he would hear. Everything was said and heard at Ibbutsland. She could not bear the thought of Richard's amused and arrogant smile.

She looked around in a kind of sickness. The same acid pink walls the same gilt columns with drooping paper flowers, the same silly laughing faces. The music pounded in her head, the lights hurt her eyes, her face felt stiff from smiling at men whom she would cheerfully have seen drop dead a better fate. How she despised the place, how much she had not known until she had believed that it would not return there. She danced.

The evening was a long, long evening and the next. The long hot dull week was gone. Anne had never been so tired. Nightly her weariness was poured into Lolusland and by day she spent her energies in comforting Irene, in assuring her that something would turn up. But often during the stifling silence she felt she shook with a frantic fear that Irene, more hungry-by, did not experience. "What was to happen to them. How long could they get by on thirty a week?

That week she was sick of life. The whole world had become Irene's sons and father. . . It seemed that nothing mattered was ever to be found again. Irene always waited up, eager to relate her experiences of the day and Anne must listen, must drop a word now and then, must be as sure as Irene. Irene was in love with Goldmark & Sons sounded pretty good. The boss girls usually talked for an hour or so. Irene cross-legged and bright-eyed in pajamas, Anne collapsed on the bed, wearily fanning herself with her hat.

"Did Stanley Rye show up this evening?" Irene would ask, diverted from her own problem.

"Haven't seen him since that day at tea." Anne would reply carelessly. "When was that? Last Wednesday or was it Tuesday? It must be more than a week. . ."

She knew exactly when it was. She knew to the minute when she had seen Stanley last. A call from him, the call which did not come that Anne was again an employee there he had not felt sufficiently interest to investigate. All his time was spent at the Tropez Club. The gossip in the dressing room was that he was making a debutante, a girl he had met at his night club. Anne heard a great deal about that girl.

She contributed nothing to the dressing room talk and eventually the other hostesses with practically the exception of Alice, were silent. Alice said that she knew more about Graeme than they themselves did. Then he says, Hortense Graeme, Ray and Anne after a quarrel, had been ejected from Richard's apartment by Butler who is notoriously reliable or accurate in his facts. Nothing, naturally, could be wormed from Con.

Anne fretted at Ray's continued silence. Ray had no other job. What was she living on? In the beginning, she had settled it for Ray call but on Friday she got the number. Ray answered in his valet's boarding house. Ray had no private phone and the landlady declined to climb up to the fourth floor for her.

"Yes, Miss Ravel's sick," she gave the information grudgingly and unsympathetically. "Flu, I guess. Been in bed all day and cries. No, I don't know when she'll be up. Good-by."

Later in the evening Anne saw Con and told him that she was going downtown to see Ray. There must be something that could be done for him.

Anne paused and said hesitantly, "It's not my affair but I wish you'd propose you could persuade Richard Graeme to go to see Ray. Richard's got to do poor kid; she's been in bed ever since that—night. She's breaking her heart over Ray."

"Not a chance," Con answered, refastening his cuff-links, carefully, stalking big game these days. I've hardly seen him myself."

"Oh. . ."

"I wouldn't worry about Ray. Those kids generally land on their feet. She was a fool in the first place to fall for Dickie Ross."

"She was 17!" Anne said sharply.

Con only shrugged. Within the hour Irene had found a kind-hearted man, but Ray did not appeal to his sympathies. His own daughter aged ten, would never be allowed to enter Lolusland; she would be cared for by governesses and her beaux, when she grew up to beaux, would be carefully scrutinized. That was something. Lolusland was another. Girls who sold their charms for a dime a dance were expected to take care of themselves. If they failed the fault was their own.

Anne was learning.

Outwardly composed but inwardly in a fury of rebellion she walked on to her table, and Richard Graeme she was determined that Ray should have justice. Then she glanced casually toward the ticket booth she forgot. Ray.

Stanley Rye stood there, tall and handsome in flannels, exchanging a bill for a string of tickets. Girls rushed into the girls cheeks and her heart set up a hard, happy beat. In a bright flannels my slim had planned to make Stanley pay for his sheerly to suggest her service-without-him—but Ray—and fall, and gay as his body had been. When she saw him look eagerly around for her, when she saw his face fight as their eyes met, she knew she could not do it. Her face already bright with color flamed scarlet. She turned halfway to meet him.

"I'm glad you're here," she said simply.

"I too," he agreed fervidly.

He clasped both her hands tightly. He liked the wild rose flush, liked the composed air with which she freed her hands; he felt pleasure at his own possibilities of the person who she tucked back a strand of curling hair. She was lovely in the severe black frock that set her skin like alabaster and deepened the shadows beneath her eyes. Somehow this girl, this demure and smiling little girl, had established a contact of his thoughts and imagination. She had woven herself into the fabric of his life. He knew it and was vaguely troubled. — Perhaps that was why he said:

"I'm glad even if can't stay long."

"Can't?"

"I've been thinking a lot about you," he said. "About your job."

"That was nice of you," she, remarked coldly.

"Don't I deserve that?"

As she looked into his reproachful eyes her heart began absurdly to pound again. She wished that they were not looking. So poised, so everything else that a man should be.

"I'm sorry," she said confusedly. "Yes, I think you did."

"Wouldn't you rather dance than quarrel?"

The orchestra was playing a hackneyed waltz and the floor was almost deserted. He took her in his arms; they started to dance, once and then again. His heart was beating just above her own. Anne hardly dared to draw a breath. This was more than dancing; this was a sensation that blotted out the earth and all reality and seemed to bind her to Stanley Rye forever and forever.

Stanley did not speak nor did she at the final, sweetly melancholy bars thinned to silence. Slowly, reluctantly she released him and knew the mood was over. Stanley seemed to feel it too. He continued silent as they settled at the table to watch the others. For a little while the hush of perfection lingered, then was gone.

"Tell me, Lolusland with Stanley's eyes a torrid, sweltering, noisy place packed with hot people, blaring saxophones, throbbing drums, cheap loud music. Anne tried to find the energies to recapture some of the slipping glamour but she felt jaded, weary.

"You're pale, Anne."

"The heat," she said, sipping a dreamful of iced orange juice that only made her hotter.

He scarfed with his handkerchief to stir up a breeze. She smiled at the futility of it and presently stopped.

"Why don't they open more windows?"

"The noise, I suppose."

"I'd like to stand a night after night? Is it always like this?"

"I get along," Anne answered carefully, become vaguely angered.

Stanley's next remark has been terrible in town," the man amplified innocently. "I nearly died in the country."

"You must lead a hard life."

"I'm sure I look like a loafer to you, to most people as far as that goes. But playing is every bit as much a bore as working, more so in a bore, because there's no sense of accomplishment. Sometimes I've thought that if I ever settled down to it I'd go stark, raving mad."

He had expected, he had really expected that Anne should ask for some explanation. Instead she remained thoughtfully silent, listening to the disgusted condemnation of the life he led exactly as if he were explaining to her something entirely impersonal.

"It's because of mother," he went on, despite her apparent lack of curiosity. "It pleases her to have me around and I'm all she has."

"Yes, I know."

A wistful almost sad note in her voice stirred him from his self-preoccupation.

"Your own mother —" he said hesitantly.

"My mother died three years ago."

She spoke naturally and emotionlessly. Her face was turned slightly from him and he could not read her expression and her hands lying upon the table were glad.

"You had no brothers and sisters?"

"She replied after a moment. "Father died when I was a child and my mother was my whole, my only world. After she died there was a time—well, it was a bad time for me. All of my hopes, my ambitions and my dreams I had shared with her—there was no one else. It was my mother who sent me to New York; it was for her that I wanted to be a success, to be the success that she could so easily have been. . ."

She had proceeded almost as if she had forgotten his presence but at the last words she glanced over at him.

"An actress?" he ventured.

"Mother had a beautiful voice. She was at the Metropolitan in the nineties when my father married her."

She sounded out.

"But your own voice?" Stanley asked in that last word.

"— is just not quite good enough," she said with definite finality.

She regretted having been led to talk at such length of things so personal. Stanley's life was a secret—a closed book to her. Why should she share hers with him? Yet he think she was also attempting to rush him into intimacy?

"It must be nearly twelve," she commented politely.

He stood moodily. His goodbyes were cordial and lingering. Still they left her unsatisfied.

A STRANGE CALL

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Two weeks had gone by. It was ten o'clock on the morning. Anne was yawning over a long column of figures, trying, by some legerdemain, to balance one digit to take the place of two, a discouraging business. She had one blistered heel and her feet hurt, even in soft comfortable shoes. Irene on the other side of the kitchen table where the remains of breakfast were still to be seen, was busily engaged for a pair of stockings hung in the window to dry.

"My last pair," she declared, "my last pair and no more coming in. I've never seen the town so dull; you can't even wedge into the employment agencies, they're so crowded. No jobs anywhere. They all say, 'Come back in the fall;' they probably think a girl can live in a tree the rest of the summer and eat acorns."

She giggled. Anne failed to smile. She added up a row of figures for the dozenth time, frowned, tried it again.

"Well, where do we stand?" Irene inquired cheerfully.

"We'll wiggle through, I guess." Anne muttered. Just how, she had no idea. The rent was due in ten days and there was no money to pay it, none at all.

"You look tired. Irene commented, rising to test the stockings at once more.

"I am tired. Who wouldn't be?" Anne snapped. At Irene's look of surprise, she added apologetically, "I'm sorry, I don't know what's got into me."

"Was Stanley Rye at Lolusland last night?" Irene asked, instantly forgetting her forgiving.

"He was, but whatever made you ask?" It was Anne's turn for surprise.

"Elementary, my dear Watson," Irene replied equably, sinking to the window sill and shutting out all air. "Whenever he's been there you have of my head in the morning."

At Anne's stricken face she became humor.

"What is it, honey, what's wrong?"

"Everything's wrong," Anne burst forth with the accumulated bitterness of weeks. "I go nearly wild when he doesn't come and then when he does everything is awful. He thinks I'm fun he likes me and can't help it, I like him better all the time, more than he likes me and—"

"What was it last night?"

"The usual. He thought I looked pale and tired and should try to get out of town over week-ends. I'd like to know where he thought I'd go—Coney Island by myself probably. He invites other girls to week-end parties," she said resentfully.

No Butter Eaten By Der Fuehrer

Berlin, April 20.—(CP-Havas)—Chancellor Hitler has eaten no butter for four years, according to a statement by Otto Dietrich, Nazi Press chief, in the National Zeitung of Essen today.

Stressing Chancellor Hitler's frugal habits, Dr. Dietrich said Hitler had declined to accept anything before there was any question of a four-year plan. Dietrich also recalled Dr. Goering: "Dorier makes you fat."

Fort Erie, Ont., April 20 (CP)—

While inspecting the remainder of the stored vegetables in his cellar, Joseph Gooding was amazed and alarmed to see a carved "hand" slowly protruding from the heap. Calling to his wife, he targeted the object—and brought forth a huge carrot bearing four "fingers" and a "thumb."

AT THE BELLA

Simone Simon and James Stewart in Tender Romance of Wealthy Girl

"Seventh Heaven"

The tenderest romance of our time lives again on the screen when "Seventh Heaven," the Twentieth Century-Fox special production of Austin Strong's immortal love story, opens at the Bella tonight and Wednesday, matinee and evening with Simone Simon and James Stewart in the starring roles.

Adapted from the stage play produced and directed by John Golden, "Seventh Heaven" re-creates on the screen another that star-crossed pair of Montmartre, Diane and Chico, the little waif with the pure heart to the stars.

As the little street waif, Diane, Simone Simon surpasses all hopes expressed for this sensational French screen find, bringing the deepest pleasure of her heart and emerging glorious as the screen's newest and greatest star. Opposite her is James Stewart,—tall, laughing, gay—typical son of the fun-loving, valiant spirit and the sky, yearning love.

Montmartre, most colorful and exciting of all sections of Paris, serves as the background for "Seventh Heaven," a background rich in dramatic settings and characters. There, in 1914, Chico spends his days working in the huge subterranean city of the sewers.

Unfortunately for Chico's belief in God, neither of his requests to Heaven has been granted. He has not been made a street sweeper so that he could breathe the clear air of the streets above, and he has not been sent on leave to Belleville.

Chico saves Diane from being beaten to death by the owner of the notorious "Hole in the Sock" Cafe, who has reared her from childhood. When Chico returns to the street Diane for throwing wine in the face of a patron who annoyed her, Chico saves her by posing as her husband. The Gendarmes take the two to the mayor for examining to check up on their life from time to time.

Chico finds himself stuck with his story, and is forced to tell the mayor that Diane and he live in the little garret from which he watches the Eiffel Tower. Diane, in order to help to forget the dank sewer in which Chico toils all day. When the war comes, and Chico is called to the army, he realizes that he is in love with Diane, and begs her to return to her in spirit at eleven o'clock each night. Chico's death occurs even after the Government publishes the news that Chico has been killed.

Few scenes in moving pictures are more moving than that in which Chico returns to Diane, bringing a surprising conclusion to what is perhaps known as the tenderest love story of our time.

Darryle F. Zanuck chose Henry King, the Academy prize-winner directed "Lloyds of London" to direct "Seventh Heaven."

Prominent in the supporting cast are such favorites as Jean Hersholt, Gregory Ratoff, Gale Sondergaard, Andrejowski and Leonid Kinskey, John Qualen, Victor Killian, Thomas Beck, Sig Rumann and Mady Christians.

The Bella features News Flashes, and "Bored of Education," a very funny "Our Gang" comedy comes as a splendid program of entertainment.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.10. "Seventh Heaven" starts again at 2.55, 7.20 and 9.30. for your perfect enjoyment of the Bella attraction it is suggested that you see it from the beginning.

COBOURG UTILITIES MAKE PROFITS

Cobourg, Ont., April 20.—(CP) With finances in good shape, reduction in surplus being due to reduction in rates, the annual financial statement of the Public Utilities Commission was submitted to the Board of Control of Cobourg Town Council. Operating profit for the water works was $5,627.56, and for the electrical in 1936, $11,227.37.

AT THE CAPITOL

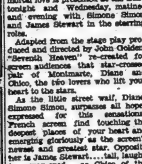
Jessie Mathews in "Head Over Heels in Love"

If you like swing music, if you go for romance that follows a succession of orchids, if you enjoy Victor Hugo's stories, if you like fast, then it will be worth your movie money to hear and see Alm, Jack-Buchanan and Jessie Mathews in the latest starring vehicle produced by Gaumont-British, which is now showing at the Capitol.

Adapted from the dancing star of "It's Love Again" comes to town this time as an Irish Hibernian maiden who is living by entertaining in the street cafes of Montmartre, but who has forgotten her rich relations so and by her exceedingly vivid temperament and her penchant for causing scandals in public. Jessie gets her way in and out of international complications with consummate skill, scoring an all-time high in her efforts in specialty song-and-dance numbers produced in Technicolor.

In addition, the bright and breezy script provides the dark-eyed singer with new high-lighting against the romantic background of Montmartre, where snappy tap-dancing and individual style of love-making mark him a a new menace to female hearts. Jack is a Don Juan with a continental suavity and witty conversation make him a match for any gay villains you'd like to steal for your weekly cocktail party.

All the lilting music and lyrics for the picture were composed by the popular British song writing team of Gordon and Revel. Among the five songs featured by Miss Mathews and Jack in the Picture are "Head Over Heels in Love," a sentimental love ballad; "May I Have the Next Dream Along with You?" sung in a garden cafe scene; "Fancy Our Meeting" a "Love," a specialty tap-dance number "There's That Man Again" a novelty swing song and "Looking Around Corners," a humorous duet with a catchy chorus.



"Paradise Express"

"Paradise Express," opening at bit no. 2 on the same bill, is an outstanding drama of the romantic power of the stirring competition going on between the railroads and truck lines. The grim battle of veteran railroadmen for existence, the struggle of the railroads against great odds, and the valiant loyalty of the railroad workers and of the community which has supported the railroad, combine into an unusually thrilling down-to-earth story of rare entertainment value.

Supporting the superb supporting cast include Harry Carey, Sidney Blackmer, Florence Rice, Arthur Hoyt and Anthony Pawley.

Today Only

Shown for the last times two swell revival pictures, features of yesterday, "Rogues of Red Gap," with an all star cast of comedians, headed by Charles Laughton, and "Mutiny on the Bounty," a hit no. 2 "The Big Broadcast of 1936," starring Jack Oakie and Lynda Roberti.

JOHN NACHULAK PROVES HERO

Ituna, Sask., April 20.—(CP)—John Nachulak, farmer who once was a section hand, stood in the path of "Flying Canadian" Thursday when trans-continental passenger train yesterday and flagged it to a stop as it bore down on a broken rail near this town 60 miles northeast of Regina.

Nachulak noticed the broken rail at a switch point. He started toward the station to inform the agent when the fast Winnipeg-bound train appeared.

Standing in the centre of the track, Nachulak waved the danger of railway signals, gained when employed as a section worker, to flag the train to a stop.

SETTLEMENT OF MINE HEADS

Praised For Stand

The stand announced by the three mine presidents followed reiteration by Premier Hepburn yesterday, that he would "take every possible step" to prevent the spread of C.I.O. organization in Ontario.

"Every man has been a loser for the position he has taken.

As further evidence of this attitude, Premier Hepburn announced that licensing of all international trade unions, as a means of controlling activities of those affiliated with the C.I.O., is under Cabinet consideration.

Hepburn also emphatically declared at present existing throughout Ontario is carried out by "paid agitators from foreign countries" and not to be condoned, the McIntyre head said.

No Sympathy for C.I.O.

Thomas's statement declared: "Under no circumstances will we recognize the C.I.O. We have no C.I.O. interfers with our operations and the government of the (Ontario) government that angels protection will be afforded our men, and that our mines will be continuing work."

Mr. Thomas said he believed of "loyalty and cohesion among the various mine operations in Canada."

In the event of shutdowns it was estimated 1,900 underlying men and would be affected and 3,000 at Hollinger Consolidated.

Premier Hepburn said they did not anticipate trouble and therefore not ready to repel any strike invasion.

No Evidence Lacking

Mr. Mitchell Sachs, "I have no evidence there is any threatening letter sent to any mine of the C.I.O. I couldn't tonight make any authoritative statement about what I would do, but I would certainly cooperate with all other mines."

Premier Hepburn has given his support to Premier Hepburn's declaration that there would be not a man in the United States as required.

At Queen's Park yesterday Premier Hepburn declared his purpose to prevent the spread of International Trade Unions was "to stop the exploitation of Canadian labor" by such organizations as the C.I.O. He said that I. Dan Tyler, who represented the American Federation of Labor, "whose attitude toward the whole crowd is the same as my own."

GABLE SWAPS

West best known for their sociological studies of Hollywood and its people. It was to Miss West Mrs. Norton addressed her letter, asking for information for a motion picture opportunity for young Gwendoline, "Wicked" Norton.

"Wrote An Answer to Letter.

"Miss West wrote to Carol Gable to if he knew Mae West had given his child a start in life," the mother explained. "She had written him the last few years and he won't answer my letters."

Four townsfolk from Portland, Mrs. Gable, Mayor Stanley Myers, Fidler and Publicity Man Terrel de Lapp were relied on by Prosecutor Hewitt to corroborate the kidnaping case in a day or so.

Mrs. Norton also expected to testify Gable was selling neckties and lumberjacking in Portland in the autumn of the time Mrs. Norton claimed he was her suitor in an Oregon romance. Previously she said to have been approached by Gable's mother and Mrs. Hollywood in 1936. De Lapp has handled Miss West's press relations.

Mrs. Norton Is a "mother type"

Mrs. Norton is a "mother type", in fact, according to Gable, "full of fun, plump, and her dark hair is graying in attractive streaks. She has borne five children.

Gable is 36, twice-married. Both former wives, Josephine Dillon and Ria Langham, he asserted, he never had seen the last ten years.

In 1925 she married and went to live in Winnipeg. Years later she saw Gable on the screen and "recognized" him.

WEMBLEY LIONS DOWN MONARCHS IN FAST CONTEST

Score is 4-2 With Jo Jo Grabowski as Individual Star

TIGERS ARRIVE

English Team by Win Virtually Assured of Playoff Place

Toronto, April 20 (CP)—Sudbury Tigers, Canadian senior hockey champions, will last the power of the United States titlists, Hershey Bears, tonight as Toronto's international four-team series proceeds. Tigers arrived here early today from Calgary, where they won the Allan Cup Friday night.

Sponsors of the series—to which Wembley Lions, English champions, and Winnipeg Monarchs, Canadian junior winners, are other entries—hope the Canadian-United States angle will prove a better drawing card than the first two games at Wembley and Hershey drew less than 4,000 fans Saturday night when Lions won 6-3 and an even smaller crowd watched Wembley beat Winnipeg 4-2 last night.

Main features of the competition thus far have been the poor attendances and the batting ability of the Wembley Lions, who aided Lions in putting on a smart display last night.

The English team gained a commanding lead by its win and became virtually certain of entering finals, in which the two leaders at the end of the round-robin series will participate.

Monarchs Keep Pace

For a while it appeared the Monarchs might stage an upset. They led 1-0 at the end of the first period and their tenacious checking had kept Lions from getting far. Then Lou Bates put Wembley on even terms after a minute had passed in the second and Lions two minutes later Tony Lemay shot Lions to the front on a pass from his brother Albert.

Bobby Wilson increased the Wembley lead in the third period before Paul Rheault scored Winnipeg's second goal but Lions closed up again when Jo-Jo Grabowski, the night's individual star, went by to beat Zeke Feeley.

Bobby Kromm, Deanis O'Gallagher, Red Horne and Johnny Inglis, Toronto juniors, were added to the Winnipeg line-up for last night's game but none of the four partook in scoring.

GALAXY OF STARS TO SHOW WARES

John Kaian, who will wrestle Ted Key of California, is the main bout of Thursday's wrestling show at the Belleville Arena, will need no introduction to the local fans. He has shown his wares here more than once before and is popular with all. However, following a very busy United States campaign during which he made Madison Square Garden his headquarters, Kaian formerly held the Canadian championship, decided to let Emil McCready. Kaian is extremely hopeful of regaining the title this summer, which is the reason he is back in Canada.

Kaian never weighs over 200 pounds and is one of the best-built men in wrestling. He will have all kinds of speed and power to cope with when he squares off against Key who is built along the lines of Jungleman Savoldi, he is particularly aggressive and his professional record testifies as to his ability.

Main bout stars will be brought here for the second-final and final. Henry Graber, German champion, who retained his title when he visited the Fatherland last fall, will be in the semi-final against Charlie Strack, mat villain from Boston. Strack has the distinction of being the only man to represent the United States in heavyweight wrestling at two Olympiads, which he did in 1924 and 1928. Henry Piers Dutch titleholder, will appear on the card also giving the Belleville personal opener one of the greatest collections of wrestling celebrities ever to appear in one night in this city.

Philadelphia Teams Head Both Leagues as Ball Season Opens at Boston, Washington

Phillies Beat Boston Twice by Close Scores

A'S ALSO WIN

Defeat Senators 4-3 in Ten Innings Before President

(By Scotty Reston)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, April 20.—(AP)—The astonishing spectacle of the two Philadelphia teams, almost unanimously chosen for the cellar berths, leading the major baseball leagues testified to the possibility of almost anything today as the teams lined up for the home opening day after the preliminaries at Washington and Boston.

New York, with all three Metropolitan teams performing within the limits of the greater city for the first opening day in 25 years, looked for the biggest crowds. At least 60,000 were expected at the Yankee Stadium to see the world champions open against Washington's Senators, yesterday's 4-3 victims of Philadelphia Athletics. Some 30,000 more were looked for at Brooklyn's Ebbets Field to see Burleigh Grimes lead the Dodgers against their traditional rivals, the Giants, for the first time.

The triumphant Athletics returned home to face Boston Red Sox, Detroit's Tigers tackled Cleveland Indians and Chicago's White Sox bucked up with the Browns at St. Louis in other American League openers. Manager Frank Frisch of St. Louis Cardinals called upon his loquacious star, Dizzy Dean, to start the 1937 campaign for the Nationals; Cincinnati, where a capacity gathering of 34,000 was expected, had pair of first-division prospects, Pittsburgh and the Cubs, met in Chicago.

Phillies Have Lay-Off

The Phillies, with Manager Jimmy Wilson posing as the most contented man in baseball after his club had beaten Boston Reds 2-1 in 11 innings and 1-0 in nine in yesterday's Patriots' Day bill at Boston, drew a day off.

One of the game's shining stars were on the sidelines, when the lineups were announced and there was a notable casualty list throughout both leagues. Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox first baseman, was ordered from Arizona trouble and Joe Dimaggio, Yankee outfielder, was under operation for the removal of his tonsils and adenoids. Dee Phillips, ace of Rookie sensation, hoped to cure a sore arm by ridding himself of infected tonsils.

Phillies won their first contest yesterday when Morris Arnovich, who played with Hazleton, Pa., most of last season, hit a home run in the 11th. He tried to turn the trick in the eighth, hitting one ball over the wall in the left field fence. But a fan touched it and the umpire ruled a double. Undismayed by this, he poked another out of reach of all fences or fans in the 11th.

Four Hit Pitching

Sylvester Johnson limited the Bees to four hits in eight innings of this contest while both his successor, Bucky Walters, and Jim MacSpayden turned in four-hitters in the afternoon. Errors by Tony Cuccinello and Rabbit Warstler gave the Phils the game.

A pair of Rookies, Al Williams and Earle Brucker, accounted for the Athletics victory. After President Roosevelt lobbed out the first ball, Stanley Smith, another Rookie Flinger, kept on lobbing until the Athletics had collected 10 safeties in two innings. Williams thru hurled 4 hit ball for the remainder of the route. Brucker's double in the 10th brought in Bob Johnson with the winning run.

New York, April 20 (AP)—Gas House gang, minus Dizzy, scheming up what with Terry Moore, one of the latter members, going in for oil painting. . . . Tut, tut. . . . Those who know what's going on in tennis say you can't write about Bobby Budge turning pro until 1938. . . . Those 5 to 2 odds that Gehrig will not repeat look big and juicy but may be worth a small investment. . . . The Broadway crowd hears the Yankees paid Tommy Henrich $25,000 iron men for his signature.

Here's an expert who really is one. Billy Conn writes about bowling for the Milwaukee Journal. All great, but, he can show you tricks at both sports. He has been runner up for the Wisconsin amateur four of the last times and he is a combined average in four Milwaukee bowling leagues of 207. And yesterday he rolled five games of 200 or better in the A.B.C. for totals of 597 in the singles and 624 in the doubles. And a 206 7-8 average for all events. . . . Now what (the menace of his collum) is right. . . . Conn is back in the fight picture with Charlie Murray pulling on shore that 10 bout ambition pretty sneaky. . . . Western papers say Dizzy Dean isn't speaking to Lou Warneke. . . . Maybe those eight column newspaper spreads Lou has been getting the heart.

Cleveland's share of the 36,486 crowd that saw Sunday's Shibe Park baseball was about $7,000 enough to more than pay half of Feller's salary of $10,000 per. Meaning that when the 100,000 people attended the 19 games between the Giants and the Indians and that 60,000 of these were at the five games in Cleveland, Owner President Alva Bradley of the Indians is taking the loss of Herrich Gehrig on the chin. . . . How did you like that 1-43 mile that derby candidate Gusty Shaffer turned in at Churchill Downs yesterday?

JACK PETERSEN BOXER, RETIRES

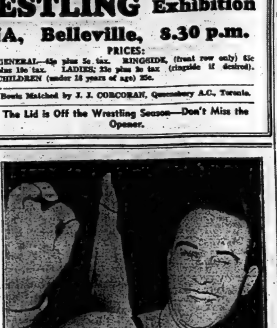
London, April 20—(CP)—Boxing dates are on the wane, Petersen not long ago one of Britain's most promising heavyweights.

A plucky, eager fighter who once held the British and British Empire heavyweight titles, Petersen retired on the advice of an eye specialist. He is only 25 but a series of injuries overthrow made it inadvisable to continue fighting.

Petersen entered a few years ago on the way to restore to British heavyweight glory some of its former prestige. He rose rapidly from amateur obscurity and after winning the British Empire Heavyweight title in 1931 he captured the heavyweight title as well the following season.

His first effort of depriving Len Harvey of the British Empire Heavyweight title was unsuccessful but the second time he won and thereby annexed the title once held by Toronto-born Larry Gains.

Engagements with Walter Neusel of Germany spelled the beginning of the end for Petersen. Neusel proved too big and powerful and it was in those fights that eye colds were opened.



Last summer Petersen lost his British and Empire crowns to Ben Foord—who in turn has been defeated since then by Tommy Farr—and observers noticed his punches were losing their accuracy and crack. His last regular appearance was Feb. 1st of this year.

Petersen has some consolation. He has amassed a fortune of something like $165,000 during his boxing career and owns a big house near Cardiff.

Epsom, Surrey, April 20.—(CP Cable)—Michael McDonough's five-year-old Corolin today won the great Metropolitan handicap, first important event of the Epsom Spring meeting.

Interested in fishing?

Do you like to cast, but are just a little out of practice or perhaps never attained that degree of proficiency that permitted you to make public appearances in casting the fly or plug?

If you like to angle for game fish and have a yen for catching the "speckles" or other game fish via the casting act and furthermore would like to practice slightly pre-season, that is before the cry goes out—"let's go fishing, well if the answer is in the affirmative to the above questions, the officers and members of the Belleville Anglers' Association have the answer and solution to the matter.

Commencing Wednesday evening precisely at 8 p.m. sharp, the anglers will open their annual plug and fly casting school. These educational and practice hours will be available to those desirous of improving or learning the art of casting. All the enthusiast is asked to do is to bring his rod, reel and plug. Two beginners classes have been included, one for adults, the other for the 'teen-age, who are also interested in plug of fly casting. Instructors and teachers for each group will be on hand to assist the less proficient and no doubt should feel at all embarrassed due to their lack of ability, simply because this is exactly what the Belleville Anglers wish to do, teach the introduction of fly and plug casting in order to stimulate this splendid art.

Contests for advanced pupils will also be carried on until the fishing season opens next month. These casting classes have increased with rapidity in local circles during the past few years. President Joe Short and the able assistants will gladly welcome those interested.

CLARENCE CAMPBELL TO INTERPRET RULES

Toronto, April 20 (CP)— There will be no backward step taken by the association," President Carl Voss of Ottawa told delegates attending yesterday's opening session of the annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association here.

Dunean pointed out the association had entered into agreements with bodies controlling amateur hockey in the United States and Great Britain and with the International Hockey Association during the past year.

"We have redrafted our constitution to include the changes made during the past year and it will be the duty of the resolutions committee to point out to the annual meeting any conflict between the constitution and by-law changes were made," he said.

This was the big news of an exciting convention. Under the new constitution and by-law changes were carried overwhelmingly by a vote of 11 to 1.

Dunean pointed out that the committee to pass upon this and then present it to the general meeting overwhelmingly.

During his presidential address, Duncan announced the appointment of Clarence Campbell of Edmonton, a member of the National Hockey League referees' staff, as official interpreter of the playing rules to be used during the coming three-day convention.

Branches were requested to take the utmost care in observing the playing rules to Campbell.

Bonus Given to Four Teams in Finals For Fine Performance

Toronto, April 20 (CP)—Docks partly cleared of routine matters, delegates to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's annual meeting, last hours' glowing reports today of the financial strides made by the association during the past year.

Dr. W. C. Hardy, Edmonton, First Vice-President of the association, said yesterday special success had attended Allan Cup and Memorial Cup finals, and that the C.A.H.A. "definitely was on its feet again after a number of lean years."

The western delegate said in view of these and other special financial bonuses, over and above regular payments, had been allotted to North Battleford Beavers and Sudbury Tigers, Allan Cup finalists, and Winnipeg Monarchs and Copper Cliff Redmen, who fought it out for the Memorial Cup.

Hardy said that as the "clubs made their bow to the Canadian public it had been considered just compensation that they receive bonuses of $500 each of the four clubs.

Severance Made Final

A motion to make the second day of the meeting which ends this afternoon, read D. F. McDonald, Calgary. Kept in Calgary due to Allan Cup final he told of the hockey body's final disposal of the foothills city during the cup series.

Affiliation with the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada was observed with finality yesterday by the C.A.H.A. which took over the fold of the International Ice Hockey League, the federation which governs Olympic hockey and takes as world governing body in the sport.

With dispatch, the C.A.H.A. passed an amendment to its constitution incorporating three of the famed "four points" over which it had engaged battle in the past with the A.A.U. of C. one point was dropped although President Duncan said the C.A.H.A. was quite in agreement with the principle of the point but would try eventually to have it adopted in its constitution.

Three Points Accepted

The three points agreed on by the association made possible the payment of athletes for "broken" time; hockey players capitalizing on their ability to secure legitimate employment without losing their amateur standing; permit exchange between professional and amateur teams at the judgment of various C.A.H.A. officials.

This was the big news of an exciting convention. Under the new constitution and by-law changes were carried overwhelmingly by a vote of 11 to 1.

with Ken J. Colling

According to statistics given out by Secretary Billie Hewitt, of the C.A.H.A. at that organization's annual meeting, the largest player registration in history was recorded by the C.A.H.A. during the season just closed. Mr. Hewitt revealed that 21,481 players were registered with the Association in the 1936-37 season as compared with 21,229 in the previous season. The Ontario Hockey Association led in the number of players signed up when nearly 50% of the Dominion's players saw action in Ontario with 10,978 signed players. Alberta had 1,115, British Columbia 412; Saskatchewan 948; Manitoba 1,974; Thunder Bay 265; Ottawa District 1,336; Quebec A.H.A. 2,536 and the Maritimes 1,118. The Intercollegiate Hockey Union affiliated with the C.A.H.A. but did not register its players. Mr. Hewitt announced an increased bank balance over last year, the cash on hand being $6,538.00 today. Why the Dominion body needs such a fabulous sinking fund, we are at a loss to understand, however.

A veteran fight fan of this city desires some little information regarding the holders of the world's heavyweight title titles prior to John L. Sullivan, the Boston Strong Boy. "Who did Paddy Ryan beat before Sullivan won the championship from him?" was the question asked. Well, Paddy Ryan was born in Tipperary, Ireland, on March 13th, 1853 and as a fighter weighed about 200 pounds standing 6 feet 11 inches. Prior to this, however, a heavyweight champion of England in 1880 Paddy Ryan, now living in the U.S.A. challenged and they fought near Collier's Station W. Va., that year, Ryan knocking out Sayers in the twenty-first hour 24 minutes of fighting) on June 21st, 1880. Two years later on November 10th, 1882 Ryan defeated Joe Goss, champion of America and three years rounds. Sullivan was never defeated as a London prize fight champion. He having recognized as the first titleholder under the new Queensberry rules. Sullivan beat Ryan get the title from Goss.

Tommy Gorman announced his withdrawal from the ranks of world hockey champions, Chicago Black Hawks, three years ago today. After a series of games with the Montreal Canadiens by which the Montreal city Cup triumph, Gorman said he wished to devote more time to the Quebec Racing Association. He got right back into hockey, however, when he joined forces with Ed Montreal Maroons to world honors.

A galaxy of wrestling celebrities fit for Madison Square Garden or any metropolitan community on the North American Continent is billed to be assembled in the Belleville Arena on Thursday night. Wrestling fans of today know the ability and prowess of the various grapplers appearing any place in the world, so to those ignorant of men like Henry Graber, Charlie Strack or Henry Piers is only wasting time and space. Suffice to say wrestlers are some of the best in the business and will be here Thursday night. In the main bout they tell us John-Katan, former Canadian heavyweight champion tangle with one Ted Key, former California football star who is making his initial appearance in the east and is reported to appear in New York later this month.

Maestro Jack Corcoran in person will be along with the wrestlers and promises to present some of the most outstanding show ever attempted in these parts. Endeavoring to procure Jackie Forbes, noted Toronto referee for these bouts have been opened. Nothing has been spared to make the opening wrestling night of the year a big-time affair at the Belleville Arena, we hear.

A comparatively rank outsider and a Canadian, Walter Young of Verdun, P.Q., came from no place to win the Canadian Marathon yesterday just two minutes under the time limit. Japanese runners have brought continued honors to their country through the medium of Kanaguri and Soichi Sasaki of recent years. We still contend, that no greater feats of achievements can be brought to a country than through the medium of sport. Sporting events, such accomplishments bring the names of the native land and the winner, well before the world at large.

Joe Sherit and his K-I-Y League officials are busily engaged in plans for the various groups in that loop these days. These devices of participation in the K-I-Y groups are asked to register at the Y's office, where membership cards will be drafted this week. The convening of the Senior, midget and juvenile series will be managed again this year, while a baseball group will be included if sufficient players show interest in the diamond pastime. As the K-I-Y league terminates its schedule before July 1st the league must commence operation soon.

It seemed rather queer to pick up the sporting pages and see two Philadelphia major league clubs atop the American and National Leagues at-

DAILY SHORT STORY

What's in a Hat?

By Anne Coville

"Gee, it's stupid enough around these summer places," yawned Perry Gray, "I believe I'll take the little old car out again and see if I can't blow the blues out of my disposition. Wish I was back at the office with the symphony of the ticker tape in my ears!" He sighed profoundly, sauntered down into the garage, ran his racing car out into the perfect highway and stopped. "Now for an adventure—he the hero, of course, and—". He stopped, open-mouthed, as a big car shot around a curve without warning, and swept on toward the hotel. He had just left. The car seemed to be full of women in summery frocks and hats, but his speed prevented recognition.

As it flew past him something white and filmy floated out behind, hovered over Perry's head, and then settled like a great white moth over his face. He was conscious of fragrance of flower gardens and perfumes of Araby, as he detached the hat from his face and surveyed the lovely creation. Height he—for romance. Make it back? Not yet."

He managed to be on time for luncheon and was the first one in the hotel restaurant. There was not one girl there who ought to belong to that fluffy white hat.

He sighed, then worried him. "What's the matter Perry, child," she mocked, "have you been lonely today?"

"Good company," he retorted.

"Who" She was curious. Perry did know such fascinating men. "Myself," coldly.

"Don't wonder you look grumpy," was her sisterly shot.

"Where's mother?"

"Lunching upstairs, Mrs. Ripley came today. She was tired."

"I like her. Thought she was going to bring her child" said Perry, choosing his dessert.

"She did."

"Must be horror if she can't bring it down here to eat."

"Gertrude is a dear," and there was a naughty twinkle in Nan's lovely eyes.

Perry yawned. "Want to play tennis?"

"Can't —got to amuse Gertrude." "Bother say, Nan," in a coaxing tone. "Do you know any girl who wears a white hat?"

Nan stared. "Dozen."

"Well, this is a very white hat—mean it's extraordinary pretty—"

"Perry! Where did you find that hat?" she gasped.

"It fould me," he chuckled. "Tell me who owns it and I'll confess."

"If I don't tell you?"

"I'll find out—I'm going to marry the girl who owns it."

Nan laughed hysterically. "Dope, I told you it was worn by the Ripley Infant—"

"It was!" the light died out of Perry's face.

They were mounting the stairs now, and at the top they met Mrs. Gray. "Have you found the hat, Nan?" she asked.

"I know where it is," said Nan, quickly and, flying past her brother, she slipped into his room and came out with the white hat perched on her pretty head.

"It was" said his lovely wife. "Mother had just given it to her. Really, Perry, mother is a widow now."

"That or no hat." Interrupted Perry, kissing his bride. "I'm actually married to the only girl I could ever love, and that's enough for me."

Arrange Football Schedule

Messrs. George Brooks and J. Cousins attended the meeting of the Peterborough and District Football Association as representatives from the Deloro Football Club last week. They explained their position relative to the playing of games with Bowmanville and Cobalt and their recommendation was that the games be played in Peterborough. It is the desire of the Senefiers that the city clubs arrange mid-week games so that they would be an attraction for the Deloro Club, who, that is club has completed to give a guarantee that the Peterborough Clubs would fulfil all their league scheduled games.

Deloro made application for a game in Deloro on Coronation Day, May 13 when a special sports and field day will be held and it is expected that players associated with local clubs will make up a team.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Frederick Harrison.

Mining Comment

The past few days have witnessed a mining market that is not governed by business conditions or a sweeping character has taken place, stabilizing on good gain from the trader of small means who is easily frightened. The market seems to believe that there is no immediate likelihood of a reduction in the base metals and unless this has not brought about any concession of any.

In the past year or so there has been a tremendous amount of speculation in the "golds" and the advance in many of these issues, although merited in many cases, has created a highly speculative following. A shake-out was inevitable and the accelerated trading on margin has been hard hit. At the same time, in the correction, many of the junior golds have declined to levels that make them distinctly attractive from an investment standpoint and people with foresight are quietly accumulating a line of such issues.

Canada's exports of mine and forest products during 1936 amounted to 40 to 45 per cent. of the value of the Dominion's total exports.

In 1923 Canada ranked sixth among the nations of the world in supplying forest products to the United Kingdom, with 6.3 per cent. of the trade. In 1936 Canada was third with 11.9% being exceeded only by Finland with a supplied 22.4% and Sweden with 17.3 per cent.

Liquidation Apparently Over

Good judges of the market were of the opinion, yesterday, that the liquidation in the junior mines has about run its course. Brokers point out that the market is healthier because the buying was of a better character and that the pressure of the selling yesterday was of the forced character, over-extended holdings having had to be liquidated. There have been so many new issues during the past few months or so that just about every account carries a number of so-called promotion stocks. Many of these stocks could not be sold in a lack of support and where accounts had to be strengthened out went the better class stocks, playing a free market had to be liquidated.

Diamond drilling from No. 3 tunnel to depth has returned spectacular gold findings assays as follows: a width of 13 ft. 41 in. elevation below the 300 level, one foot assays across 35 feet run $118 across a greater width of 85 ft., $20. After elimination of high grade crashes, an average of approximately $6.00 gold per ton was calculated for the casting 80 ft.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Apr. 20.(CP).—Stocks were weakest in the first hour amid a flow of selling from under-many account accounts. O'Brien dropped to 70 cents, Sherritt Gordon to 33, Pickle Crow to 85.25, Lake Shore to 49¼, Pamour to $2.10 and Little Long Lac to $1.41. The whole gold and base metal list moved down uniformly. With the selling rush easing around noon prices rallied and by early afternoon prices were practically on a level with Monday's close.

Industrials weakened with the metals but there was no panicky selling and there were few issues experiencing fractions. Brazilian, International Petroleum, Distillers-Seagrams, Imperial Oil, Penny Pamour and a few other golds and steels took losses of a half point and point declines were recorded for Canada Packers, Western Pfd., Canadian Car Common, Abitibi Pfd., Goodyear, Dominion, Dominion Steel and Hamilton Bridge Pfd.

WALL STREET

New York April 20.—(AP)—Stock buyers lifted their bids in today's market and widened a late-day rallying trail for gains of fractions to 2 or more points.

While there were a few active flurries on the upside dealings on the whole were quiet. There was an assortment of loers near the fourth hour, but favored Steels, Rails, Farm Implements and others were near their best levels of the day.

Among Canadian issues Distillers-Corp. Seagrams, Hiram Walker and Canadian Pacific were slightly depressed. Dominion Government issues relied unchanged. Canadian funds gained 1-32 a cent to 100.11 1-2 cents. On the Curb, Lake Shore Mines, eased a trifle.

Coppers dipped early following weakness in the Red Metal shares. They came back somewhat later notwithstanding the Domestic Copper price was off 1 cent a point to 14 1-2 cents. Imported bar silver at New York was also reduced 1-3 cent an ounce to 44 3-4 cents.

Prominent shares on the upside included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Chrysler, General Motors, Mack Truck, Briggs, Mfg., and Allis Chalmers.

1400 SPECIES OF MOSQUITOES KNOWN TO SCIENCE

Rotary Members Told by Mr. C. R. Twinn of Insect

MOSQUITO WAR

Most people imagine that about all there is to a mosquito is its bite and its whining hum with which makes sleeping so difficult on hot nights and May 31 Mr. C. R. Twinn, from the Entomological Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, told Rotarians at the regular meeting Monday many things about mosquitoes, their life history and methods used to live. The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Alf Beard of the Dominion Entomological Laboratory, Belleville, as a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, Mr. Twinn gave a very interesting and instructive address on the mosquito, its habitat, breeding grounds, various species, its life histories, besides methods of mosquito control. Rotary appreciation was expressed by Rotarian Mac Haig.

There are 1400 known species of mosquito, of which are 120 with different species in North America, 68 in Canada and about 30 in Belleville. A survey will be made in and about Belleville to locate breeding grounds, besides methods of control measure. Various malignant diseases are carried by the mosquito bites, the insects being carriers of germs, causing of malaria, yellow fever. Mosquitoes breed in the water and damp places and breed by the female. Petroleum oil has been found very efficacious in killing the mosquito larvae, even the surface of breeding places, water and damp, marshy land.

Mosquitoes and insects found in Winnipeg had a tag day for funds to help the poor people who used the slogan TWENTY FIVE CENTS WILL KILL ONE MILLION MOSQUITOES. The speaker thought this estimate was too conservative as he considered it was more than a million. Orillia and other places have waged a winning fight against mosquitoes and have made summer resorts very attractive for visitors.

Ottawa has long fought the mosquito pest, including, through a voluntary organization, a work has been turned over to the city health department. UNION AGREES TO CONFER WITH HEPBURN

Premier Ready to Meet Any Strikers but Agents Of C. I. O., He Declares

Will Not Meet Thompson or Millard Unless Millard Changes His Status And May Not Meet Cohen

ULTIMATUM BY GENERAL MOTORS

No Meeting Between G. M. And Strikers' Representatives Unless Men Return to Work or Hepburn is Party to Joint Conference

Oshawa, Ont., April 21.—(CP)— Union officials today announced acceptance of General Motors ultimatum that Premier Mitchell Hepburn must be a part to strike-settlement negotiations as long as the men refused to return to work.

The union announcement came from J. L. Cohen, legal counsel, and Hugh Thompson, organizer of the United Automobile Workers of America, with whom the Premier has steadfastly refused to confer. They agreed the Premier should sit in on conferences between employees and General Motors officials unless the strikers returned to work.

They did not indicate their attitude towards the Premier's statute in negotiations if the men went back to their jobs and negotiations were resumed with the company.

When C. H. Millard, local union head, asked for a conference with company officials today, he was told by James B. Highfield, plant manager:

"There will be no meeting between officials of General Motors of Canada, Limited, and their representatives of employees until the men first go back to work or the Prime Minister of Ontario, Mr. Hepburn, meets the Canadian executive in a joint conference with the shop committee of the workmen."

Cohen Meets Hepburn

Cohen also announced he had an appointment for 2.30 p.m. with Premier Hepburn to discuss arrangements for a conference between the government head, the company officials and the union representatives.

Telephone Conferences

Besides negotiating today with Highfield, Millard also telephoned Harry Carmichael, company general manager, and informed him the union was prepared to confer with the premier. Millard also demanded Carmichael to arrange a conference with the premier but was informed that it was up to the men to make their own arrangements.

The union announcement also said Millard was also told the company is no time arranged for any Toronto conference and did not want to be placed in the position of doing so now. Millard agreed and representations for an appointment will be made by Cohen.

Change In Casualties Seen.

Possibility of a change in the strikers' bargaining committee was seen here with the premier's announcement in Toronto he would not confer with Millard unless he changed his status.

Millard, besides being president of the local union, is also organizer of the International Union, the body strongly opposed by the premier and company officials because of its affiliation with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Hepburn's Statement.

Toronto, Apr. 21 (CP)—Premier Hepburn said today he was willing to meet in negotiation any committee of the striking Oshawa automobile workers, including their original negotiating committee, after he had unofficially received the General Motors ultimatum that the strikers must go through the premier's office or return to work before resuming negotiations.

The premier said he would meet any of the strikers except paid agents of the Committee for Industrial Organization, to which the United Automobile Workers of America

Indispensable water! The always-necessary water vain is, in some, a most valuable component of plants. In the growing season it amounts to as much as 90 per cent. by weight. Besides as ingredient, water is important in two other ways as a transporter and as a solvent. Water will dissolve more different substances than any other liquid. It is thus especially valuable in dissolving materials of soil, air and soil and in transporting them to the plant rootlets and through the plant tissues. The atmosphere furnishes all the water it can. It takes it up from the sea and all moist surfaces; and as it rises and cools the water is carried by growing fields to provide the rain that is needed supply.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, April 21 (CP)—A disturbance of increasing energy is moving eastward from Lake Superior while a cold wave from over west Saskatchewan with high pressure extends southward from the Rockies by to the north Atlantic coast. Rain has fallen in the south and east Maritimes and the Gulf and over most of Ontario and Quebec though in other districts it has been mainly fair and somewhat warmer. Light snow is reported in the region of the Great Lakes with strong easterly winds and gales. Showers have occurred in northern Alberta and in the Peace River area some of which have been heavy.

Forecasts: Strong easterly winds and gales; mainly cloudy and cool today and Thursday with occasional rain tonight and on Thursday, possibly part snow or sleet.

Maritime: Mostly cloudy today and Thursday with occasional rain or part snow.—Strong winds with occasional gales, moderate tonight and Thursday, strong winds with occasional showers; some tonight.

EDITORIAL COMMENT ON BRITISH BUDGET

London, Apr. 21 (CP)—Editorial comment on the budget speech delivered by Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was focussed mainly on the tax on profits.

In general the opposition papers welcomed the tax while Conservative organs were somewhat dubious.

The Times (Independent) said:

"Regulations for imposing the new tax will be complicated and elaborate and considerable will be required to prevent evasion.

"Almost inevitably, like any other form of taxation, it will need to be passed on, thus putting prices up. This is sound doctrine that those who profit by the government's increased expenditure on defence should bear a special share in providing means to pay for it."

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative):

"There is a danger in this new form of tax inherent in excess profits duty inasmuch as those making increasing profits will be under the temptation to dissipate them by various devices that would cause the excess profits to disappear." The Telegraph added the aim of statesmen in the United Kingdom and the United States is to check trade cycles. Mr. Chamberlain's experiment in that direction is better than that of the United States, which has chosen to tax the reserves left in a business rather than the profits which our own chancellor mulcts."

The News Chronicle (Liberal):

"The new tax on profits must be considered for this year more as a principle than as an effective revenue getter since it is only going to bring in about one-tenth of its eventual yield. And as a principle it is excellent."

The Daily Mail (Independent Conservative):

"The complicated provisions of this very important addition to our fiscal system will be studied with anxious interest by the business community . . . the view which may be taken of the Budget as a whole is that the expenditure on defence, and taxation in addition to what is to be borrowed, is absolutely necessary and the money for it must be found."

The Herald (Labor):

"The new tax is socially equitable and it is economically sound at a time when a practically full-time is suiting in rising profits is one of the dangers most to be guarded against."

"DOUBLE CROSSING"

Says Men Placed in Meeting to Help Halt Proposals

Oshawa, Ont., April 21 —(CP)— Conference talk was in the air again today as union leaders in the General Motors strike awaited the arrival of Homer Martin, President of the United Automobile Workers from Washington.

The union's attitude on the talked of conference was not known as the 14th day of the strike began. Union heads indicated originally that they would not strike and were satisfied with their present wages and working conditions. Reports of fiasco in Oshawa is having a quieting effect," he added.

Mr. Hepburn said he had reason to believe three mine owners who announced they were prepared to close their mines indefinitely in the event of a strike "weren't fooling."

He added: "The gold's been in the ground millions of years and while longer won't hurt it."

The statements of the three mine owners—J. P. Bickell of McIntyre, J. R. Timmins of McIntyre-Porcupine and Jules S. Bache of Dome—were followed last night by a similar line taken by leaders that any strike was contemplated. The Canadian Mine and Smelter Workers' Union issued a statement saying it was not fomenting strikes.

Says Rumors False

Heads of the Hollinger and McIntyre locals of the International Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union denied in a statement to Timmins that strike rumors are false and malicious. They charged the rumors were fabricated to assist the operators to break the labor market by persons "using strike rumors as a cover for their nefarious schemes and desire to lay the cause at the door of the union."

Premier Hepburn said he had "definite knowledge" that C.I.O. officials were trying to call strikes at the International Nickel Mine near Sudbury and in the Kirkland Lake and Noranda mining areas.

He declared the C.I.O. a "Fascist dictatorship from outside our own country" yesterday and said he discussed charges in some quarters that he had introduced Fascist methods.

After conferring in his office with a delegation from Timmins the Premier said last night he expected to be able to report a settlement of the Oshawa strike. He said some further move would be made today by the group of employees as well as they were out of sympathy with labor union and wished to return to work.

Can't Get Secret Ballot

The delegation said many of their number were Unionists and did not favor strike. They said that 1,500 of the strikers who were ready to accept General Motors' terms of settlement. They discussed the strike with the Premier for an hour and may return today.

"They said most of the strikers would go back to work if they can't get a secret ballot on the question," Mr. Hepburn said. They also declared they had been hoodwinked by these American agitators and led up the blind alley."

Reports of a postponed meeting between Premier Hepburn and company officials in Oshawa yesterday were described by the Premier as "merely propaganda for one side." He said he would be in any conference and there would be no negotiations with

Toronto, April 21 (CP)—Continuing his resistance to the Fascist dictatorship" of the committee for industrial organization, Premier Hepburn planned "future moves to-day in the belief consequences of the Oshawa General Motors strike have had "a quieting effect all over the province."

The Premier said last night he had been advised by some northern Ontario mine owners that their men would not strike and were satisfied with their present wages and working conditions. "The fiasco in Oshawa is having a quieting effect," he added.

Mr. Hepburn said he had reason to believe three mine owners who announced they were prepared to close their mines indefinitely in the event of a strike "weren't fooling."

SENSITIVITY TO COLD WATER MAY CAUSE DROWNING

Immersing Hand in Cold Water For Few Minutes Causes Swelling Then be Careful

CAN BE TREATED

BY STEPHEN J. MCDONOUGH
St. Louis, Apr. 21 (AP)—A medical treatment capable of preventing many hundreds of deaths from drownings during the coming summer was suggested today by Dr. Bayard T. Horton of Rochester, Minn.

Addressing the American College of Physicians, Dr. Horton declared that many drownings result from a hypersensitivity to cold water, similar to the allergic reaction of asthma or hay fever, which causes a sudden collapse of many individuals.

Recent studies have revealed 26 cases in which victims died of collapse after swimming, 10 of whom had to be rescued to prevent them from drowning, Dr. Horton said. This hypersensitiveness to cold constitutes a definite menace to the unwary swimmer who has this malady, and yet the danger can be eliminated by simple treatment by a responsible physician."

Testing to determine whether a person has the disease is a simple matter of immersing one hand in ice water for five minutes, Dr. Horton declared, and "if the hand swells while it has been immersed in the water, the indication is that the person is hypersensitive to cold."

Most persons can be "desensitized" to cold, just as many asthma and hay fever victims can be accustomed to pollen, by having them immerse the hand in ice water for a minute or two twice a day for three or four weeks, Dr. Horton declared.

Car Clips off Pole Hurls It Twenty Feet

Kitchener, Ont., April 21—(CP)— Bernard Weichanks, Penwell Ave., Toronto, had a "narrow it or not" escape here early today when his car driven by Mr. Weichanks at Centreville, two miles from the city, left the paved road and crashed and clipped off a 25 foot pole two inches in diameter that supported a hydro line. The pole broke and tossed the pole 20 feet.

The car came to rest in the five-foot ditch.

Damaged stock of things after he hopped out, Weichanks found he was uninjured and his car only suffered a broken front axle, a dented fender. Weichanks believes he fell asleep.

At a brief meeting of the Belleville Ministerial Association held in the Y.M.C.A. yesterday, the resignation of the Rev. Robert Hall as secretary-treasurer of the Association, forced by his removal from Belleville was accepted by that body.

An expression of appreciation for the work performed by Mr. Hall while in office was officially tendered by members.

PRESENT PRIZES TO THE BATTERY

Members of 34th Hold Social Evening at The Armouries

Commendation for the outstanding honors won by the members of the 34th Field Battery, R.C.A., during the year 1936, was suitably bestowed upon the officers and members of the most efficient battery during the presentation of prizes at a banquet held by the 34th Field Battery at the armouries last evening. About 30 members of the battery, including all ranks, sat down to the delightful repast and enjoyed not only the speeches of the evening, but the fine programme of entertainments offered on this unique occasion.

The presentation of the Commandant's Cup, which was won by the 34th Battery as first prize for the signal section for all militia batteries in Canada, was the signal honor of the evening although other major prizes were won by the local battery for efficiency and military achievements. The team comprising the 34th Battery signal team, the crack of Canada's battery signallers, was composed of Sgt. C. Liddle, Sgt. L. Noakes, Gnr. D. Carr, P. Renaud, R. Ridley, E. Dack, E. Crawford, S. Hall and D. Woods. The Battery Gun Layers' Cup was won by Sgt. S. Hart while the Marksmanship Trophy was won by the Headquarters party, consisting of Sgt. Major Bugler, Sergt. Bugler, D. Carr, P. Renouf and R. Ridley.

New Drill Uniforms

During the process of the evening's programme Major T. J. Wills personally gave commendation to all members of the 34th Battery, making special mention of their fine showing at Petawawa camp last summer. Major Wills congratulated the Signal Corps, who brought such distinction to the battery in winning the signalling championship. In conclusion Major Wills announced that new drill uniforms for summer training are to be purchased by the battery.

Capt. F. H. McLeod spoke of the advancement in the 34th Battery during the past three years and Lieut. Hamilton on winter training, that is to be adhered to during the coming season.

Quarter-Master Wm. Lindsay acted as chairman for the evening with Commanding Officer Sgt. Major Browning and with Tom Mason, R.S.M. of the 15th Battery present to the entertainment supplied by George Cornish's orchestra. Dancing followed the entertainment. It was announced, that the annual Garrison Church Parade would be held in Belleville on May 9th and in conjunction with the coronation celebrations. Following the banquet and programme the members of the battery repaired to their headquarters on Victoria Street, where the remainder of the evening was spent socially.

HOLDING REGATTA TO RAISE FUNDS

Beach Committee to Institute Drive For Large Membership

A wide-spread membership drive through which it is hoped to enlist the moral and active support of every resident, is the furthermost of the city bathing beach and waterfront development project, through the sale of twenty-five cent tickets, will be started in the city this coming week it was decided by members of the Bay of Quinte Beaches Association, Inc., at their regular meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening.

It is hoped, that school children of the city may be enlisted in the work of selling the tickets, if permission for this can be gained from the local Board of Education.

One hundred and fifty seedlings, grown from acorns in the Belleville Nursery, donated by the Men of the Trees Society of this county by the committee will probably be planted next week in some suitable location for transplanting on the beach location at a later date. Planting the seedlings now will be done as at first suggested was not feasible, in the opinion of Principal of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Mackenzie, owing to the danger of having them stolen as soon.

Plans were further arranged at last evening's meeting for a regatta, which will be held in the Bay or Quinte off the beach location during the first week or June, open to power boats and sailcraft. The power boats will be directed by chief Constable Jeakins, while sailing craft will be under the direction of Chief Constable Callaghan heads this regatta committee.

One of the features of that week, which will also be Midway Week on the beach boulevard will be an open air barbecue now being arranged by a local organization.

Obituary

MR. JOHN W. SAGER (Sibling)

Mr. John W. Sager, life-long resident of River Valley, passed away at his home today in his 77th year.

MRS. S. I. K. LAYNON-OWEN (England)

Mr. William Syms of the 3rd. concession of Sidney Township, is receiving the sympathy of his many friends in the death of his sister, Mrs. S. I. K. Laynon-Owen, which occurred at Exeter, England, recently. The following reference to the death and funeral of the late Mrs. Laynon-Owen is copied from the Exeter Express:

Many parishioners; representatives of the clergy, schools and numerous church and parochial organizations attended the funeral service at St. Sidwell's Parish Church Exeter, this morning, for Mrs. S. I. K. Laynon-Owen (wife of the Rev. K. Laynon-Owen, Rector of St. Sidwell's), who died in an Exeter nursing home on Sunday, following an operation, at the age of 40. Mrs. Laynon-Owen had identified herself with many of her husband's work in the parish and was a highly esteemed and popular figure.

Her nine-year-old son, Master Charles Laynon-Owen, carried the church his mother's pet Pekingese.

The immediate mourners were the husband (who walked with the surpliced clergy), Miss Nellie Syms (sister), Mr. Arthur R. Gray (friend), Master Charles Hugh Laynon-Owen (son), Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Syms (brother and sister-in-law), Mr. T. Tuckett (godfather of Master Laynon-Owen), Miss Edith Read (companion), Miss Lanyon Watling (sister-in-law), Mrs. F. B. Sandrett-Tyrry, the Rev. W. de Vere Skrine, Rector of Woodleigh, and Mrs. A. Incledon (friends).

The service was fully choral, Mr. Dennis Reed being at the organ. The surpliced clergy taking part were the Archdeacon of Bartistaple (the Ven. Edgar H. Hay), the Rev. Arthur Johnston (Vicar of Henfirther), the Rev. T. G. Blackwood-Price facing assistant priest, St. Sidwell's) and the Rev. W. de Vere Skrine. The opening sentences were read by the Rev. Blackwood-Price. The 23rd Psalm was chanted and the Lesson (I Cor. xv., 35, 36) was read. Laynon-Owen following the hymn "Peace perfect peace" prayers were offered by the Archdeacon of Barnstaple. The Russian Contakion, "Give rest, O Christ," was rendered by the choir, and, as the cortege left the church, the Nunc Dimittis was sung.

RETURN TO SIMPLICITY

A return in religion to the simplicity of Christ and His utterances was urged by the Rev. Dr. Raymond C. Knox, the chaplain, in his address at St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, New York City.

"He preached the word of God stripped of all non-essentials," the chaplain said. "He liberated it from all the accumulated, obscuring interpretations and additions of men by which, as He said, the word of God was made void.

"He simplified the law by selecting from the mass of Old Testament legislation the two laws that were of guiding and fundamental importance, and these two He combined as in essence one: 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy mind.' This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." On these two laws hang all the law and the prophets.

"The simplicity that is in Christ—how urgent is the need of it in our living today! Christianity began with the plain teaching of Christ, addressed always to life, and with His vitalizing influence in the hearts of men. It sent them forth to create a new order of living in which the Spirit of God would reign in all human affairs.

"Through the centuries Christianity has grown. It has been, as Christ compared the Gospel, like the mustard seed which grows to a tree, and we make sure that the tree draws its whole life from Christ we must always examine the fruits. 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' For no one would think of identifying as that is called Christianity with the teaching of Christ. There have been accretions and additions, and some things have been attached which are directly contrary.

Orientation to the potentialities of life rather than to its myths and fables is one of the great needs of the world today, Dr. Halford E. Luccock of Yale University Divinity School said in a sermon at Christ Methodist Episcopal Church.

"We must strive for a clear, unhindered view of things as they really are rather than as they have been built up through myths and legends," he asserted. "There are all sorts of fables alive in the world. We have the fable of Aryan and Nordic, the legends about Hitler and Hearst, anthropology has been commercialized to bolster up a scientific hoax concerning racial purity.

"Medicine has become oriented to the actualities of germs. Yet in other realms we persist in treating diseases as though our emotions were vibrations. We need an orientation to our potential desires rather than a limp acceptance of a condition."

Dr. Luccock said that one of the greatest dangers to mankind is the premature acceptance of ourselves as something final and irrevocable.

"Orientation means considering life in terms of something emerging rather than something congealed," he declared. "One of our greatest needs is a reconciliation with ourselves so as to avoid the bitterness that comes from ambitions that have no relation to reality. It is necessary to realize one's potentialities by getting out from behind the barricades that are forever hemming us in. One of the great dangers in life is the likelihood that we may not in our lifetime be exposed to the type of work that will bring out our latent talents; and the surest way to search for the latent 'you' is revealed in the manner in which you respond to life's 'musts.' What I'm pleading for is the Christian outlook. We must think in terms of what Jesus cared most for. The deepest and most real word in this world is the religious word."

One couldn't carry on life comfortably without a little blindness to the facts that everything has been said better than we can put it ourselves.—George Eliot.

It is a very easy thing to devise good laws; the difficulty is to make them effective. The great mistake is that of looking upon men as virtuous or thinking that they can be made so by laws; and consequently the greatest art of a publication is to render vices serviceable to the cause of virtue.—Bolingbrooke.

Newspapers are the schoolmasters of the common people—a greater treasure to them than uncounted millions of gold.—Henry Ward Beecher.

The careful reader of a few good newspapers can learn more in a year than most scholars do in their great libraries.—F. B. Sanborn.

A DAD'S AMBITION

I want my lad to be a man
With red blood in his veins,
To be with sportsmen all he can
And watch them as he trains
To bait a hook, to tie a fly
To thumb a reel, and cast,
To play a trout, or nobly try
To land a bass at last;
To learn to love the great outdoors,
And thrill at Nature's charm.
I am content he then abhors
The things that bring him harm.
He'll grow to manhood strong, and then
In body, soul and mind,
He'll love and share with fellowmen
The things that thrill his kind.
He'll do his best to win, if fair,
No mean advantage he'll take,
To share the shots in life, and care
To lasting friendships make.
He'll smile and take the gain or strife
If win or lose his list.
He'll learn to aim his best in life—
No cripples, just one shot.

—G. G. Hill in Pennsylvania Angler.

ANGLERS AND SPORTSMEN GENERALLY ARE INTERESTED in a new publication emanating from the Department of Game and Fisheries, Toronto, provasically called the Monthly Bulletin." The Bulletin began last August, is a monthly as the name indicates and can be obtained by application to the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries, Toronto. Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, is in charge of the department, and J. J. Taylor is Deputy Minister. The Monthly Bulletin is very interesting to all sportsmen and deserves commendation for its endeavor to inculcate the spirit of true sportsmanship as against the "killer" instinct, which delights alone in the number of "kills" made and not in the fairness of the sport. In the January issue the following paragraphs from the leader are well worthy of consideration as a sportsman's creed for this year of grace:

"The year that is opening before us is also unfolding for the wild life that inhabits forest, field and stream. What is our attitude toward these resources of nature going to be? It should not be decided upon the spur of the moment, unless that conduct is based upon the highest ethics of sportsmanship. If everyone, says a recent writer, conducted himself in accordance with the worst of us, little would remain for any one to enjoy; but if many of us who conduct himself according to a high ideal much will remain for all of us and even for coming generations.

"To the angler we suggest a year of FISHING, rather than CATCHING FISH. There is a great distinction between the two which implies a keener interest in the art and less in the result. The thrill of fishing is all in the battle and not in the outcome. There is more pleasure in outwitting one gamey adversary through skill and strategy than in catching half a dozen by more forceful but less skillful methods. Let us fish for sport rather than food and the supply will keep pace with the demand."

A widower, going through his departed wife's possessions, decided to keep as a memento a hat which he had always admired. It was placed carefully on a shelf and was not disturbed until it was discovered by his second wife, who inquired about it, and was told that it was kept in memory of his first wife.

In due course the second wife departed this life, and again the bereaved man selected one of her hats. This was placed beside the first hat.

Time softened the second loss and a third wife arrived in the household. She, also, was curious when she found the millinery and asked questions. The husband explained that the hats had belonged to his predecessors and were kept as mementos.

"That's all right," she replied, "but the next hat that goes up there is gonig to be a bowler."

REALISTIC PERFORMANCE

The squire gave the village school children a treat, and after tea he said he was going to perform certain actions to suppress a proverb, and the child who guessed it would have sixpence.

The squire first lay down and one man tried in vain to lift him, so two others came, and between them lifted the squire.

The motto it represented was "Union is strength". When the squire asked if any child had guessed, an eager voice squeaked "Let sleeping dogs lie."

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

APRIL 21ST., 1917.

At an early hour this morning Massey Hall at Albert College was destroyed by fire; nothing but a portion of the bare walls remains. It was a beautiful building and its destruction is a severe blow to the faculty and students at this old established Methodist seat of learning. The fire was discovered by Mr. James Doran, who resides on the south side of College Street, facing the building. He rushed to the college and gave the alarm. The city fire brigade were quickly responded to the fire alarm and did all they could to save the building. The cause of the fire is unknown. There had been no fire in the building for four days and the electric wiring was well protected. The building was erected in the year 1895 and was opened in January 1896. Mr. Hall A. Massey of Toronto offered $10,000.00 towards the erection of the building, provided the Methodist Church "would" do do this. The building cost $20,000.00. Mr. Thomas Bog, mayor of this city had the contract for the work, with the exception of plumbing and heating; this work was done by a Belleville firm. The F. GIVE REASON FOR DOCTOR'S RELEASE

Dr. J. E. Hett Loses Standing For Claiming Specific Cure of Cancer

Toronto, April 21.—(CP)—Dr. Robert Smith, registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, last night said Dr. John E. Hett of Belleville has been released from the college because he claims he has a specific cure for cancer."

"Council will do anything in its power to offer him facilities to substantiate his claim," Dr. Noble said.

Dr. Hett announced he was notified his name was removed from the list of practising physicians in Ontario after he appeared before the college council last week. Dr. Hett said he denied charges he claimed to possess a specific cure for cancer and that he guaranteed certain patients with a cure.

Dr. Hett announced he would take legal steps and bring action before the courts in an attempt to have his name put back on the list practising doctors.

Dr. Hett said there was only one reason for suspension of his license as a practising physician after 40 years in cancer research.

"That reason is that I refused to reveal the secret of my method because I did not consider the time opportune," he said. "I complied with all their other requests."

Dr. Hett further explained he had offered to treat cancer patients for the council before a satisfactory investigation was made. His offer, however, had been declined.

"They told me that if I would not reveal the secret I was," he added, "then they would cancel my license. This is made it clear that in all my 46 years of practise there was not a single thing or which I was ashamed. By that time I had the serum, however, because I believed the time was not opportune."

Dr. E. Stanley Ryerson, President of the College, said he declined to enter into the matter "in any controversy" in connection with Dr. Hett's case.

"A very thorough investigation was made of his claims and he was given every opportunity to substantiate them and practice in the ethical, professional way," Dr. Ryerson added.

JUDGE LAVELLE ALLOWS APPEAL

Holds Trucker Placed Flares Out And Complied With Law

His Honor Judge Lavell, Kingston, today allowed an appeal in the County Court, heard at Belleville, entered by Oscar Watt, Oliawa trucker, who appealed a decision handed down in the Magistrate's Court in which he was found guilty of infractions of the Highway Traffic Act. He was charged with failing to provide flares for the parked vehicle was entered into the Trenton police court by Municipal Patrolman Ernest Hall.

During the submission of evidence, His Honour held that Constable Hall's evidence had been placed in position on both ends of the vehicle, and was parked as he should. One cannot help thinking there have been a good many human beings in this country living in small places, cold places, unsanitary places, miserable places and they have not been fed and clothed properly, and yet it is difficult almost to the point of impossible to recall instances where they have been called into court to answer for the condition.—Peterborough Examiner.

Watt's car was in good physical condition and was parked as he should. One cannot help thinking there have been a good many human beings in this country living in small places, cold places, unsanitary places, miserable places and they have not been fed and clothed properly, and yet it is difficult almost to the point of impossible to recall instances where they have been called into court to answer for the condition.—Peterborough Examiner.

The Bird in the Bottle

There was an odd case brought before the London, Ont., police court, the inspector for the Humane Society took action against the manager of a Dundas butchery for keeping a growing chick in a large bottle in the window. His charge was that the bird did not have sufficient room. It had no room to move about, and it had been the intention to remove it from the bottle on the 27th of March. The magistrate found it difficult to know just what a chicken might think about such treament or how the thing might feel so he dismissed the case. There were experts on hand to testify that the chicken was doing well indeed in the bottle, and was not any more cramped than baby chicks during transportation, nor during the time they were spent in a brooder. A brooder tray full of chicks was brought into court as an exhibit, and they had not as much room to stand in as the chick which had been growing up in the bottle for exhibition purposes. Looking through the report we found the magistrate was a veterinary surgeon and counsel were present for the Humane Society, and the lawyer for the defence and a number of witnesses also a blind breeder of chickens from a brooder.

And all because one chick was growing up in a bottle. It was admitted it was in good physical condition and was growing as it should. One cannot help thinking there have been a good many human beings in this country living in small places, cold places, unsanitary places, miserable places and they have not been fed and clothed properly, and yet it is difficult almost to the point of impossible to recall instances where they have been called into court to answer for the condition.—Peterborough Examiner.

Robin—A Friend of Man

It isn't temperature alone that determines the residence of the robin, according to Donald M. Hetler, President of the St. Louis bird club and recognized authority on birds, but the availability of food as well.

Hearing the last onslaughts of winter, the robin paces the advance of spring. It comes at the clearance earlier in the interior of the Continent than on the east coast because the interior feels the warm first. But it is on the West coast nearly all winter long.

The annual average temperature of migration is 50 degrees Fahrenheit, and it starts an exodus at the first signs of nature's resurrection because at this time the food that makes up the bird's diet is most plentiful.

The robin eats small berries, but its general diet consists of 35 per cent vegetable matter and 42 per cent insect matter. It eats 41 per cent more than its own weight in a twelve-hour day, and sometimes works overtime.

The bird eats on the average of 98 worms every day. If man ate as in proportion to the robin, he would consume 70 pounds of meat and from five to six gallons of water.

The robin in the interior of the country migrates its winter home as far north as Southern Missouri and south into Mexico. It starts southward in the first south wind, crosses the Ohio River and sweeps into the northern Missouri and Southern Iowa just in time for the spring opening in those points. Then the weather warms up, the robin doubles its speed to Southern Minnesota and Dakota as far north as the Arctic Circle in the summer. Flocks which remain behind throughout for the winter may go no further north than Iowa, but those go northward in Kentucky may summer in Alaska.

They fly at an average speed of thirteen miles a day, but those robins summering in Alaska and points north often step up their speed to seventy-five miles a day.

Despite its migratory habits, the robin is one of the few birds that can live in proximity to man. It will build a nest close to human habitation.

ROOSEVELT ASKS $1,500,000,000

Washington, April 21 — (AP) — President Roosevelt on Tuesday asked the United States Congress for $1,500,000,000 for next year's relief burden today in a message projecting the possibility of new taxes next session.

His special message on relief needs during the 12 months beginning July 1 foresaw:

A treasury deficit on June 30 of $2,418,000,000 or $309,000,000 over his January estimate.

A deficit in the 1938 fiscal period ending June 30, 1938 of $418,000,000.

"I propose to use every effort to avoid my command to eliminate this deficit during the coming fiscal year," Mr. Roosevelt told the Senators and Representatives.

On the basis of the President's revised estimates, the public debt would climb close to the $35,500,000,000 mark by June 30.

Discussing taxes, Mr. Roosevelt said it had become apparent there will be "immediate need for a careful survey of the present tax structure."

He said the treasury would be prepared to give consideration next session to Congress information as to any loopholes in the revenue laws and suggestions for such new, or additional, taxes as may be necessary to meet deficiencies, if any, in the revenue-producing power of the present levie."

Little Benny's Note Book

Was we starting to eat breakfist and ma said to pop, Well, Willyum, this is the strong minded morning and I hope you intended to go without coffee.

And I still intend to never fear, pop said. It will seem like quite a relief. Imagine a man who thinks nothing of drinking 3 or 4 cups of coffee with his meals all the morning is abruptly stir his lump of sugar in an empty cup.

I shall maybe I'd better go a little easy the first morning and perhaps only drink my coffee with water, he said, and ma said, Well yes, perhaps it mite be wise not to drive too far off with a bang.

That's a way I figure it, Ronny wasn't left in my cup, now. Not for instants is I take my usual 8 or four cups of coffee a morning and 3 quarters hot water, that will really just amount to one cup of coffee, with is pretty much as all to a man of my habits and capacity, he said, and ma said, I'm afraid the flavor wont be anything to brag about. And 3 or 4 cups of such a mealy mixture is for lane sakes she said.

I was thinking of that and it suggests another alternative, pop said. I mean instead of diluting 4 cups I'll achieve the same result more quickly and more palatably by taking the quarter of a cup of coffee from each of the 4 cups and putting them all in one cup myself and without fuss an ordnery cup of coffee will be the result and for a spot of cream by golies that's the solution he said and ma said, How Willyum you are going to fast as usual, that's what it comes to in a final install.

I'm afraid you dont understand and I haven't time to explain it all over again, pop said.

And he pored himself a cup out of the percolater and drank it down with a happy expression, and then he pored himself another half a cup on account of claiming he had drank part of the first cup while he was thinking of something else.

MASSASSAGA

BRIDE AND GROOM GIVEN SHOWER

Massassaga—On Monday, April 12th, a pleasing event took place when about sixty friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Norman S. Wallbridge gathered in honour of them with a miscellaneous shower at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Wallbridge. In the early part of the evening Mrs. B. A. Lasier took charge of a program, consisting of amusing contests and games, a reading by Miss Lou Lasier and sounds by Mr. R. O. Dulmage. At the conclusion of this interesting entertainment the bride and groom were asked to be seated, then Mrs. Lasier read the following address:

Dear Norman and Victoria:

At present the day is very fair to both of you and as the Springtime rabbinths in our hearts a new desire to live as this new love that you have found since your marriage has, no doubt, blended within your hearts the hope of finding true happiness.

May the home that you shall make be filled with this happiness. Many things in this life are uncertain and fleeting but the home is the foundation of all our social relationships and as you both start on this great venture of home making remember that yours may be an example to others and what would be finer than another couple in a genuine home for the guidance of other homes.

As you travel down the years together may Dame Fortune bring you a large share of the good things of life.

We are happy to learn that you will be living in our community and our friendly hand is extended to both of you.

As a token of our friendliness we have gathered here this happy time and with them go the very best wishes of your many friends.

Our sincere wish for you can, perhaps, best be expressed through these words of Edgar Guest:

"Oh bride and groom for you our prayer

Is not that every day be fair,

For that could never be, we pray

That love shall last, whate'er the day;

Through all that comes—or grief or pain

And hurt and care—may love remain."

Signed on behalf of your friends of Massassaga, Sylvia Lasier, Estelle Nightingale, Helen and Muriel Lasier.

During the address a large basket, beautifully decorated, was brought in by Mrs. I. A. E. Nightingale and Mrs. Wm.
